Seems To Be Difference of Opinion on Red Menace

FORMER DISTRICT ATTORNEY SCOTTS AT CONSPIRACY AND WARNS AGAINST REPRESSIVE LEGISLATION AS DANGEROUS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Utter die... in the north and... the West partition tonight. In opposing proposed "anti-red" legislation as a "menace to American liberties," James D. Scott, ex-district attorney of Pennsylvania and Attorney General of New York, today said that it is a country is threatened with "bolshavism."

Scott, declared and branded as "bank" much that had been said regarding the menace of "bolshavism" in this country was "unfounded by tens of thousands of those seeking to overthrow the government by force and violence and establish the Russian soviet system in its place." "This can be accomplished by the use of force and violence," he warned, "and the only legislation lies the 'one danger of a revolution.'"

"A section law in time of peace breeds suspicion and creates an 'accident-prone' class," he said. "It might also risk such injustice in time of peace."

Scott declared that there is a conspiracy afoot to capture this government by force. Considering the size of this United States and the fact we are the most powerful nation in the world, he said there has been a conspiracy afoot to capture this government by force.

MARRIAGE DECRETES IS OPPOSED IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The decree of a Milanian court annulling a marriage on the ground that it was childless, has aroused a chorus of opposition here, mostly in disapproval.

"It is a gross impertinence in Italy where women are not represented in the Legislature," declared Miss Florence Underwood, secretary of the Women's Freedom League. "The advocates of compulsory annulment for this reason will find no adherents among English women."

"I consider" said Mrs. Hudson, of the London County Council, "that the proposal to make childlessness a compulsory or voluntary basis for annulment of marriage is not only thoroughly unchristian, but a degradation of womanhood. To regard marriage as only a means of raising children is a degradation of the whole ideal of the great and best human partnership."

The Roman Catholic church will never tolerate such a decree," said George Egerton (Mrs. Gidding Bright) the writer. "Marriage must be regarded as a sacred union in a divine civil contract. The Catholic Church regards it as a sacrament and never will annul it on the ground of barrenness."

"It is emphatically that childlessness is not a suitable plea to put in the foreground of an application for divorce," says Herbert Ellis, eminent psychologist and eugenicist.

"Many of the happiest marriages are childless. Par from encouraging the idea of more children in this country, the marriage is far too high in Europe. If it had been lower in Germany we probably should not have had the great war," said and said that there would not be so many people starving.

"It is impossible to make a general plea for the limitation of children. The larger number of children healthy parents have, the better the welfare of the community. The problem is how to discourage the useless, inferior children into the world. If it were generally recognized that it is a disgraceful thing for people who are not fit to have children, it would act as a great social force."

EARLE WILLIAMS
VITAGRAPH STAR

"Don't change your company" is the advice Earle Williams gives to young screen players, and then he adds, "providing you are with the right company."

Earle Williams is one of the few film players who has never changed his habitations from one studio to another. He commenced his career twelve years ago in the famous Vitagraph film studio, which included the Talmadge, Clara Kimbrell Young, Aulia Stewart, Edith Storey and other renowned celebrities of today, and he has never strayed from the fold. He concentrated upon one course and kept to it. That course eventually led him to an entente with the most popular male stars of the period.

"The West," Vitagraph's film creation of Eugene Walter's notable stage success, has been the most of embellishing Mr. Williams' ability and popularity. His latest production will be "The Black Gate," from a popular magazine story. Vitagraph announces that another famous screen play, regarding its importance with "The Wolf," has been secured as a vehicle for the star.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Unobduracy, we believe that spiritual virtues should concern us more than the material ones. I think the marriage is far too high in Europe. If it had been lower in Germany we probably should not have had the great war."

A WILDERNESS OF SWEETS.

Tastes are the cakes par excellence. They are rich in nuts, eggs, and crums, and when carefully made and baked are especially toothsome.

Walnut Tartlets—Beat the yolks of six eggs with one cupful of sugar, add one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter, one-half cupful of four sifted with half teaspoonful of baking powder. Add the juice and rind of half a lemon, cut and fold in the stiff beaten whites and bake in layers in a shallow tin.

Filling—Beat one egg yolk, and two tablespoonfuls of sugar, three-fourths of a cupful of milk; cook, stirring till the mixture coats the spoon; add three-fourths of a pound of chopped walnuts with a teaspoonful of vanilla essence; bake in shells.

Date Torte—Rub 1½ sliced dates to a smooth paste with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Beat two whole eggs and seven yolks, add one and three-fourths cupfuls of sugar; beat well, add the dates, three tablespoonfuls of chocolate, and teaspoonful each of cinnamon and allspice, and a cupful of cracker crumbs; stir well and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of seven eggs. Bake in a large spring-pan.

Angel Food—Beat one cupful of egg whites until foamy; add one-half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Still one cupful of sifted flour with one-quarter of a teaspoonful of baking powder; add one cupful of sugar; stir to the beaten whites, a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla; then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake for 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

A layer cake (unless a torte) needs a quicker oven than a loaf cake. When the "ring" of a loaf is flattened, a loaf cake, always leavens a depression in the center, as it will rise first there, and make a hole that method reveals in a loaf, even when baked.

PAPER'S OWNER DOES NOT LIKE ATTACKS ON U. S.

Accepting a credit in England in exchange for credit in New York.

"I do not dissent—truly I do not dissent from the decision from the United States treasury to make no more European loans nor I think in really does the Daily Express. The proposal which has been forwarded in some quarters to form a kind of joint international pool for financing central Europe is also a mistake. What is needed now is that every country should get back to normal by paying its own just debts. Great Britain borrowed from the United States. If we did not mean to pay, but to ask the United States to remit payment, any way we should have said at the time that we were asking for a gift and not a loan."

"The way to fight the balance of exchange is for every man and woman to meet down the tracks the year they wear and the plate they own and pay the result in gold in America.

"Such are in views and whatever party to add of them, they can hardly be described as anti-American. I have always been a great admirer of the full herd gigantic effort during the war and I admire her in still years of peace."

The pursuing engine headed the freight back to a roundhouse, where it was cooled, watered and foregone.

KEEP THE CHILDREN'S BUREAU.

In the talk of reorganization of government work for economy's sake and to get us back to a peace-time basis, it has been proposed to merge the Federal Children's Bureau either in a department of public health or of education. But anyone who has followed even to a small extent the work which the Children's Bureau has been doing in recent years, it seems clear that the bureau deserves full recognition as a distinct feature of human welfare work, and should be retained under the direction of the Department of Labor, where it now sits.

The Children's Bureau was established in 1912. At once it became a center of information regarding all the children of the country. It investigated child life among all classes, finding out and reporting social and economic conditions affecting child welfare.

The bureau soon found that the protection of children in infancy was one of the nation's greatest needs. How to save the babies was the first question. That the work has grown and broadened steadily since then, it has carried on a national publicity or educational campaign that has been a big factor in arousing general interest in child conservation. It found that the infant mortality rate was closely allied to housing conditions, parents' incomes, industrial conditions affecting mothers, and many other general social, economic and industrial conditions.

The bureau has given its attention to defective, delinquent and dependent children and by helping them has found that it helped also the normal children who had been retarded by former neglect of the unfortunate ones. National Baby Week in 1916, the Children's Year Campaign undertaken as a means of preventing the ill effects of death upon innocent children as a result of war; publication and distribution of several millions of educational pamphlets and books of statistics, popular child welfare leaflets and posters, were all bureau activities and have helped to arouse intelligent people all over the country.

The work has steadily increased in scope and efficiency. Its usefulness is far from ended. The best possible organization for its further carrying on should be developed and permitted to exist as an important and honored phase of government work.

THE TOWN HALL.

New York City is building a "town hall," at a cost of $1,275,000. This, it is noted, is not a "city hall" or a "municipal building." It has nothing whatever to do with the housing or operation of the city government. It is purely and simply a "civic center," a "forum for free speech," a place where citizens can get together whenever they feel like it, and talk over public affairs.

The old-fashioned town hall served both functions—it was a place for transacting public business and also a place of informal public assembly. In recent times, however, the municipal function developed into a "city hall" which, substantially as it serves the former purpose, makes no provision for the latter. Hence New York's enterprise, which is particularly notable merely because few people outside of the metropolis supposed that it had enough civic spirit for anything of the sort.

Cleveland is doing the same thing; its "municipal auditorium," now under construction as part of its famous "group plan" of public buildings, will provide a meeting place for any public or semi-public purpose, accommodating perhaps 15,000 people. Various other cities either have a building for this purpose, or are contemplating one. Every city, town or village should have such a place of assembly. The small towns need it just as much as the large one.

There has been a disposition everywhere lately for the people to grow away from their local government and take interest in it, and for the social element of civic life to deteriorate. The present reaction tends to bring them back, to restore the relationship between city life and private life, and enable private citizens not only to know what their public officials are doing, but to know and understand each other better.

WOMEN ON JURIES

An anti-suffrage leader argues that women ought not to sit on a jury—not, of course, because of any mental or moral disqualification, but because women "belong in the home" rather than in the jury box. It is hard enough for men, she thinks, to be assigned to such work, though they do it less ungrudgingly than women would. A district attorney in New York raises the same objection, except that he claims that the prime duty of woman is that she should be in mother of the race and guardian of the home," and that "a healthy woman is more important than any jury duty in the court room."

Which might be well enough, if women were in the home, as such solicitous souls imagine. No American, however, has to travel a thousand miles, and might have to travel a dozen, to find women spending a large part of their waking hours working in offices, stores or factories, engaged in work that certainly keeps them as much from domestic duties and as much endangers their health and ideals as jury duty would likely to do.

So far as health is concerned, if courtrooms are unhealthy, as most of them probably are, that is a pretty good argument for letting the women let them into them. It's a safe guess that the women would do more to those courtrooms than the rooms would do to the women. There would be more scrubbing and sweeping, more window washing, more ventilating, and less spitting.

It is possible, too, that women would find themselves rendering real domestic service occasionally even to those remote jury boxes. Take pure-meat cases, for instance, or child labor cases, or cases involving garbage collection, sewerage, street lighting and cleaning or any other phase of municipal house-keeping.

SAVING PAPER

The paper shortage, while still serious, has been improving lately. The improvement has been due to the combined efforts of consumers and the producers, which is to say the newspapers and the manufacturers. The former are curbing consumption at the same time that the latter are increasing production.

In the month of December, publishers, by new economies, decreased the amount of print paper used by 9,565 tons, as compared with November. This record is all the more impressive because more print paper is generally used in December than in November, owing to the larger volume of holiday advertising. This meant a saving of nearly 10 per cent. At the same time the production rose to 122,781 tons, an increase of 21,748 tons over November. This record will be further aided by the lifting of the Canadian export embargo.

There has been a disposition lately for Congress to take a hand in this matter, demanding the arbitrary limitation of the size of its little question, in any quarter as to the desirability of reducing the newspapers as a means of conserving the paper supply. There size of overgrown paper and holding all papers down to the smallest size consistent with adequate performance of their unique service. This, however, is a matter which the publishers can do better for themselves than any outside agency can do for them. The December achievement is in line with the recent determination of publishers' associations to limit their paper consumption, and is proof of their sincerity and ability in this direction.

THE LEGION AND THE SOCIALISTS

An institution whose loyal Americanism will certainly not be questioned is the American Legion. This great patriotic organization, through its governing body, has joined the New York Bar Association and various other important organizations in condemning the action of the New York Legislature in ousting five Socialist members. Says the Legion:

"We look with disfavor upon every effort to overthrow the right of representation or deny to properly elected representatives of the people the right to sit in the bodies to which they have been elected, except when they have been shown legally disqualified."

This last qualifying clause is evidently intended to cover such cases as that of Victor Berger, who was refused membership in Congress, not because he was a Socialist, but because he had been found guilty of criminal disloyalty. The five legislators, apparently, were ousted, not because of personal offenses, but because they belonged to the Socialist party—a fact which, however lamentable, has never been pronounced a crime or a legal disqualification for office.

The best opinion everywhere is at one with the Legion in this matter. It is reassuring, too, to find that the Legion, despite some snubs met on the part of members here and there, is allowed to prove its patriotism, not by blind denunciation of everything not approved by itself, and by safeguarding the real foundations of American life by good Americans, but by reserving its condemnation for cases of disloyalty.

TAPPING CONCERTS.

A big city Y. M. C. A. has installed a wireless puff that is intended to let the members in on any important vocal or instrumental entertainments that happen to be going on. If there is a concert in town that the Y. M. C. A. men would like to hear, they will not have to go to the concert hall and pay an admission fee. They will simply register in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, where the receiving apparatus is set up, equipped with an amplifier capable of magnifying the tones so that they may be heard clearly throughout the room. It is said that political meetings can be handled in the same way, and eventually the arrangement may be extended to cover concerts, lectures, etc., in distant cities.

The thing obviously has big possibilities. If it works as it is expected to, it will be widely copied. But what will the people complain of if the entertainments in question have to say about this sort of "tapping"?

When the novelty has worn off, they may refuse to allow the wireless sending apparatus to be installed in their halls, or may charge a round price for the privilege.

Thus, as the range of musicians, lecturers and actors is widened, the performers themselves may find a new source of income. To their ordinary compensation, which is already reinforced in many cases by movie and "record" royalties, there will be wireless royalties.

Everybody wants to borrow money from Uncle Sam. Uncle has plenty of money, and if he cared enough about it, he could soon hold a first mortgage on the rest of the earth. But the more Uncle sees of foreign parts, the less he wants them.

Economy is a fine thing, especially in Washington. Still, as long as Congress is planning to spend several billion next year, it would hardly be excessive to spend a little more than $12,000,000 of it for legitimate river and harbor improvements.

Lady Astor, speaking in parliament, criticized prohibition because "she always wanted to eat prohibited things." Eve felt the same way about the apple. Maybe it's natural in the sex.

If Congress remains deadlocked much longer on the penny-traffic, railroad legislation and other important matters, it will certainly stimulate the movement for a third party.

Milk is going to go down soon. But don't rejoice prematurely. Bread is going to go up.

STOLEN GOODS ARE RECOVERED

M. K. Murphy, Ex-Service Man, Confesses to Robbing Local Stores Recently

M. K. Murphy, the ex-service man recently arrested here by Deputy Sheriff Heddon and Huffman for numerous petty robberies in this city for the last few weeks, was before Judge W. A. Babcock of the district court this afternoon for a preliminary hearing.

Murphy, who is 22 years of age and married, has confessed to robbing a great many business and residence places in Twin Falls, including the Thorpe home and the American Electric company. Yesterday and today he went with the deputies to the various places he had burglarized and dug out the stolen goods that he had cached nearby. At first, officers withheld his name but later decided to deny his identity.

The man was gassed in France and is mentally unbalanced mentally, according to the authorities. He recently purchased a small home. One of the addresses where he was living with his wife and baby. The men who arrested him believe he felt that he could take the things, sell them and eventually pay for the house. When visited, his wife was totally ignorant of his misdeeds. It is said, and expressed much surprise when the officers stated their mission.

Murphy was not released from custody as announced in a morning paper; and he is now confined in the county jail awaiting trial. Medical aid is being given him and it is hoped that he may be returned to health before many months.

This case, the officers state, is one of the saddest with which they have had to deal with in the past months, concerning a fit case, a man who lost his health while fighting for his country. He was formerly a man of good character and well known today, and the authorities could not believe he would stoop to such a thing, but it is all caused, it is believed, by the imperative need of money and the fact that he was irresponsible.

The sheriff's office this morning was covered with cases recovered from Murphy. Many of them were found at his home while others were hidden in obscure places. Officers became suspicious to the man some time ago and visited his home. The arrest took place yesterday and much of the staff was recovered by him. The stolen articles and the owners are calling for them today. There are articles of almost every kind there, including mechanical tools, tools to children's kites, books belonging to the following institutions have been identified: Jack Thorpe, Idaho State, John Kelly, the Plumbing Hospital, Stratton Bros. Orn Volcanizing company, the High school, A. L. Stone, J. C. Clark, the American Electric Co., Mrs. Frank French. From the latter place $81 in war savings stamps were taken but they were burned with some other stuff. It is believed that Deputy Heddon stated this morning that as far as can be learned, there are no burglar at large in the city. The capture of Murphy is the first in the last few months.

Parlor, Bed Room and Bath Big Hit

The theater going public is still talking about "Parlor, Bed Room and Bath" the catchy musical comedy that was presented at the Lavering theater several nights ago. The play made a record for the number of shows that it has been running so much of a success that a strong criticism published the following day in an afternoon newspaper was received with considerable amusement by those who witnessed the performance and applauded its clever presentation.

Some high priced and talented players were included in the cast and the audience was quickly captivated by their work. Manager Lavering has received numerous congratulations on the offering.

BESSIE LOVE

The curiosity of motion picture fans was excited recently by a story in the Saturday Evening Post containing reference to "the unappreciated young queen" of the movies. Said the writer: "There is one young queen, however, who shows a refreshing contrast to her more glamorous counterparts. Bessie Love has come to her in a striking way, she intelligently renounced a court of favoring synopsists and handily attended high school. And though her location work took her far afield and sometimes added her curriculum, the wise and sympathetic educators arranged that her lessons on those days be done by correspondence. By far the most worthy and dramatic event of her fair young life was her graduation in June. One of the girls in the class says that the unappreciated child was the brightest girl in her Spanish class. If others had her wisdom they could laugh at the morrow."

A clue to the identity of "the unappreciated child" is supplied by neatly preserved cards recently issued from the Los Angeles High School upon the occasion of the graduation of Miss Bessie Love, the famous Vitagraph star. She had not only completed her High School course but likewise a new feature picture, "Over the Garden Wall," and was ready to commence work in "Cecilia" from the novel by Eleanor, Hays Brainerd.

UTAH'S GOVERNOR SENDS GREETING

Utah's Governor, Simon H. Harburger, of Salt Lake City, has sent a letter of greeting to be read at the "Utah Night" service to be held at the Christian church Sunday night. In part the governor says: "The people of our two states are so closely allied that their interests are almost one and it is with a feeling of elation that I have watched the phenomenal progress of the men and women responsible for this wonderful development and I have the utmost confidence in their future. My sincere good wishes go with them."

Mrs. E. H. Van Cott, who arranged for Salt Lake will give the Utah message.

Young People Tell Pastor Ambitions

W. A. Moore pastor at the Christian Church announces a series of Sunday night sermons on "Worldly Ambitions." The first of the series will be given Sunday night and will address particularly to "Twenty-Year-Olds." The second sermon will be addressed to "Thirty-Year-Olds"; the third to "Forty-Year-Olds" and the fourth to "Fifty-Year-Olds." For the Sunday night, Mr. Moore has invited his young people to suggest what, in their judgment, are worthwhile ambitions. Among the replies received to date are the following: "Be kind; Get a wife; Finish your education; Live in bed till noon; Get into the church and get busy; Make somebody else happy; Forget yourself—think of others; Missionaries on the foreign field; Learn to do housework; Careful of what you eat; Get a good job; Build a good business; Have a smile for every one you meet; Join the Y.M.C.A.; Quit fooling—think of somebody else; Examine yourself and see if you are treating your parents well; At twenty I was in Germany—my ambition was to get to the U. S. G. I. I built a young people's organization creditable to our fine community."

Mr. Moore proposes to use these and others for the foundation of his series.
