ABERDEEN, Feb. 25.—Rumor and fact are strangely blended in a remarkable story connected with Fyvie Castle, the Aberdeenshire residence of Lord Leith, which brings up an ancient legend of the house.

The rumor which has revived these stories is that recently masons and carpenters were called in to remove a fungus growth from the wall of the east room, and discovered in the oldest portion of the present tower, from which legend says a former resident walked across the river with a bridge of molten lead.

WOMEN SHOULD DRESS BETTER, WOMEN SAY

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Should a husband spend more or less than his wife on clothes? Prominent London women believe women should spend less, while the opinion among Irishmen is different.

LIFE OF EASE IN THE FUTURE FORETOLD

LONDON, Feb. 25.—There are signs of the conditions of the future, says a well known London consulting engineer, who invented an instrument and has produced an instrument for seeing into the future.

"The happy people in those days," he said, "will look back upon our conditions today with just such feelings of amused pity as we show for the state of the savages of prehistoric times."

"Humanity, having continued to develop the 'civilizing process' of civilization, which has so far had the effect of making life necessary to us, will not be able to stand exposure to the common elements of nature, such as wind, cold, rain, snow, etc. They will tend to live underground. There will be underground streets, through which all traffic will proceed."

"Water cars will be fitted up luxuriously appointed drawing rooms and will be driven by wireless at a rate of 100 miles an hour. Wireless telephones will be installed, as well as every kind of apartment making for luxury and comfort. Many people will own these cars."

"There will still be in condition of splendid physical isolation. Television, that is, the ability to see your absent friend over a distance of miles, will be perfected. It will enable you to talk to him (or her) in comfort, will lead to this condition. He will be less able to see these days for close physical communion. That desire is a relic of barbarism."

"Savages will not touch a telephone. They will be afraid of the instrument, and will prefer to talk to you on the one they wish to speak to. Many people still are not content to talk to their friend over the telephone. It is because they like to see and touch him."

"There will still be the wealthy class and other classes less well off financially. That will mean that there will still be servants in the household, and to the necessary household. But there will not interfere with the condition of splendid physical isolation, which will be the result of the wireless association."

"This vision is not an extravagant or wild set of theories. It is the direction in which scientific discoveries will be made. It is to some extent, and to less wild to than our present social conditions would have appeared to our forebears generations ago."

"Many scientific men have come to face with discovery and invention, which are only separated by the distance of a few feet. It is not difficult to picture what will certainly be done in time."
