SUGAR PRODUCE BURN BARRACKS CANAL ELECTION RULING HINGES ON TWIN FALLS AND CLOVER

FIGHT NARROWING DOWN TO TWO LARGEST STOCK HOLDINGS IS NEAR END

Court Weighing Twin Falls Vote on Question of State Law Cited by Hackman—Argument May Be Completed This Afternoon

The canal election dispute, involving the rights of four directors, Brown, Barker, Kennedy and Lincoln to seats on the board, narrowed down today to the legality of votes cast for the city of Twin Falls, with Attorney Turner K. Hackman, representing the protesting farmers, petitioners, defending his contention that the Clover tract stock was also illegally cast. The noon recess today left opposing attorneys in a dead-end of debate.

The apparent reduction of the issue to the blocks voted by Twin Falls, Buhl and Clover, with the elimination of Buhl because individual contract holders were shown not to have paid for their land and therefore were not entitled to water stock certificates, which were held by a unit voted for the Buhl family company, came during arguments before the court on the motion made by Attorney James R. Botwell, counsel for the defense, after the petitioners case had rested.

Botwell's motion, which is preceded by denial of a motion by Hackman to strike out a total of 13,586 votes for Lincoln, 12,483 for Kennedy, 8786 for Barker and 5459 for Brown, was based on his contention that the water stock certificates issued from the questioned title, there would not be enough legal ballots remaining to change the result of the election. The ballots which are contended should be sustained by the court were those of Buhl, Clover and Twin Falls.

The court stated that the only question in its mind so far as the case had proceeded was the Twin Falls vote. It was felt that the case would be decided on the basis of interest in the appeal contracts had a right to vote the water stock. It was held that the water stock of the High Line Canal board, as trustee for the land owners in the Clover tract, was held to vote the water stock of that tract. Clover had owners argued that the Buhl land owners were not completely satisfied, the complaint coming from outsiders. Both sides argued that the case was not a case of interested parties contending for the votes.

The court called attention to the acquiescence of Twin Falls individuals in the present system of the canal administration. It was stated to be the usual arrangement that the water stock of this tract was held by Hackman, which forbids a multiplicity of stock in the hands of one corporation. Under the local arrangement, the water stock was distributed with the distributing system at great expense, the individual stockholders were not to be considered in the plan. It was questioned, however, whether in the face of the law, any corporation could be the holder of the water stock of the citizens could be accepted.

In his argument on the motion, Attorney Hackman presented evidence objecting to the defense's argument on the grounds that the case was not a case of interested parties of the state's fundamental law. His contention, he said, was that the case was not a case of interested parties, but a case of citizens, and asked why the water stock of the citizens should be controlled by a corporation. Such a system, he stated, leaves the citizens without a voice in the management of their own property, such as the breaking of a dam or any other catastrophe which would affect the water stock. He argued that the case was not a case of interested parties, but a case of citizens, and asked why the water stock of the citizens should be controlled by a corporation.

BOY SCOUTS ON BICYCLE HIKES

Short Camping Trips and Longer Tours on Wheels Popular for Small Groups - It Pays to Take Care of Details Before Starting

For pointers on how to take a bike, on a hike, the Boy Scouts of America are one of the best sources of information. Dozens of Scouts have learned through experience all there is to know about short, camping trips or long tours of several days. While a hiker like one of the scouts and most of the hikers of the trail, still there are details that will increase the trip enjoyment if they are given proper attention before a begins his ride.

Nobody knows this better than the Boy Scouts, and they are making a hiker's trip an increasingly important phase in their activities. There are a host of ways to take a bicycle hike, and the Boy Scouts have a variety of plans for every kind of rider. The most popular is the short, camping trip, which is usually made in the mountains of the West. The distance covered may be as little as ten miles, but the fun and excitement are not lessened thereby.

One of the first things Scouts have learned is that the bike is not intended for a long, hard, steady ride. The rider should not get into the habit of riding his bike for miles at a time. When one of the group tires, the others should not be discouraged by the loss of his trail. The rider should be ready to leave him behind to rest. The hiker should be ready to leave his bike behind to rest. The hiker should be ready to leave his bike behind to rest. The hiker should be ready to leave his bike behind to rest.

Machos To Be Prepared

A precaution which never should be forgotten is that before every ride, the bicycle should be checked over thoroughly, down to every nut and chain-link. A machine will not run in first-rate condition at the start. Scouts find one of their greatest problems is the lack of proper method of attaching a pack to a bicycle. There can be no standard rule, for the style of bicycle differs. Some are constructed so that the blanket and poncho can be rolled snugly and carried by the handle bars and front fork. Other bicycles are made so that everything but the tool box and first aid kit will fit into a luggage carrier behind. Generally, the equipment includes blankets, food, mess kit, first aid outfit both for the rider and for the machine, a half dozen tools, a poncho, and a first aid kit. It is a trick to get this so arranged that the weight will be evenly distributed. Undue weight either before or behind makes a rider difficult to control. It is crucially important that the pack be made light and fastened securely. The hiker should not even a short ride have a powerful looting effect, and it is a bit discouraging after a ten-mile ride, to discover and find that one's pack has dropped off somewhere along the way.

The last equipment to be checked by every Scout who has ridden will surely advise. Food need not be carried in quantities as there are always plenty of chances to stop on route. The hiker will find it quite wiser to carry extra food than to find that equipment is essential and what is

MANY IRISH NAMES IN CUBA

Signs on Some of the 'Meat Meats' Havana Streets Reflect a Transplanted Artisticry.

There are many curiously named streets in Havana, but perhaps the most interesting are those which bear Irish names. It is always a possibility that clothes will be ripped or torn somewhere along the trip, and the hiker should be prepared with a spare set of clothes and a kit of repair materials for clothes and bikes will be welcomed when needed fifty miles from home.

The length of a bicycle trip depends upon those who are enjoying it. Its only limit is the strength and endurance of the rider. The whole country calls. A Scout patrol leader, for example, might take a bicycle hike as far as it is possible to go. Scouts Take 500 Mile Bike Trip

Into every Town, City, Country, do the Unsalariated Drummers go - everywhere your Goods go they go. Ask them to sell your Goods and you will find them. The people who read your Books, ride in your Cabs, the shopkeepers who sell your Toys, those who wear the Clothes you make and the Food you prepare - they are the Unsalariated Drummer for you. Ever think of it that way?

TWIN FALLS VULCANIZING WORKS

Brainless Headwork. But it saves the price of Hats

KOREA CHILI BRAZIL
Human Hauls Take Place of Wheelbarrow, Traps, Moving Hauls, and Tea Wagons Among These Peoples

"Good head-work" doesn't always connote brain exercise—the skull frequently is put to use other than containing thoughts or serving as a hatrack. The human headpiece is made to do duty as a moving van, a wheelbarrow, a baggage truck or a tea-wagon in different corners of the world.

These methods of transportation are revealed by photographs of strange, far-distant peoples sent into headquarters by missionaries of the thirty denominations co-operating through the Interchurch World Movement in the great united simultaneous campaign to raise $336,777,574 during the week of April 25 to May 2.

Heads were made before wheels were. Hence, when there is a big load to carry, the primitive dweller of Asia or Africa or the Americas, balances the bundle or the box on the apex of his cranium and proceeds to his destination, reserving the use of one or both hands. The examples of carrying loads in this fashion reveal just how universal this method is in the out-of-the-way places of the earth, and also what heavy weights can be transported on the human skull.

PARAGUAY
The city-dweller who at infrequent intervals has seen foreignborn women carrying small bundles balanced in this method, may have thought the idea was more or less indigenous to Europe, but in the isolated American highlands one can see the mountaineer woman "tooting" a straw bed or some similar household article on her head as she moves from one dilapidated cabin to another. Denied any educational advantages, which would develop her head, she at least can use the top of it as a moving van.

Using the head as a carrier, so general as almost to be the rule among the people of that America below the Rio Grande. As long as the outside of the head is useful or ornamental it is not considered necessary to spend much on furnishing the interior, or at least so it would seem from a study of the statistics. Literacy ranges from 49 per cent. in Uruguay, the best-edited of the twenty Latin American republics, to 95 per cent. in Venezuela and Santo Domingo. New York City spends as much for education each year as these twenty countries combined appropriated for education in 1914. Hence millions of Latin American heads are found better equipped to carry physical loads than mental ones.

IN DARKEST AFRICA
The manufacture of Panama hats, but there is no home demand for the larger sizes. Ecuador, with a population, appropriated 1,500,000 for education for the year 1915. The market woman of Paraguay balances on the top of her head the slim stock of fruit she has to peddle. Lack of modern transportation in Paraguay allows oranges to rot on the ground, each year which, if marketed, would pay the public debt.

The tireless porter of Chile has a "head for business"—not in the display of an exaggerated assortment of goods for sale—and the Rio Janeiro head vendor scores a delivery cart as long as his animal riding a big woven basket filled with dozens of loaves.

ECUADOR

early to carry packs on their heads. The Chinese could not get through his day's work without using this method of carrying. While in India one can see women trudging along transporting their entire household effects, and even, at times, when they carry their children in their arms.

Modern transportation methods are being introduced into all these remote and backward countries, and gradually the skull-carrying mode will have to give way. With the change from primitive methods comes the introduction of real educational facilities, and of almost every country of the world the pioneer of education has been the Christian missionary.

Out of the total budget of $336,777,574 of the thirty denominations co-operating through the Interchurch World Movement, $107,601,488 is allocated to foreign missions, and of that a considerable sum is earmarked in the individual budgets of the different denominations for educational facilities, such as day schools, night schools and colleges in India, China, Japan, South America, Asia, Africa, and elsewhere. The Christian workers of the Interchurch World Movement report that the better heads of Africa can hold on their heads heavier loads than they can lift. The carriers for big game expeditions, in fact, on a miniature scale, these far-distant lands exactly the same kind of cooperation that the dominant faith at home have begun to put into effect on a large scale through the Interchurch World Movement.

CONSERVATIVE LABOR LEADERS

THESE are the times that try the souls of the conservative labor leaders. Right cheerfully did they assist the government during the war, going on missions which required the peculiar influence which they possessed, and urging the workers on to a speeding up of production.

It seemed to them that after they had toiled so much, jointly with all classes, to make democracy safe, and were promised at Versailles that it was to be a better democracy for them, that they could with boundless reason hope that that promise would not be "held to the car and broken to the hope."

The signing of the armistice has forced the conservative labor leaders into the greatest warfare of their lives. In front they face the self-righteous stubbornness of the employers, while on one side they are threatened by the public, on the other lashed by the radical unionist who seeks to oust all conservative leadership.

The radicals are doing more than merely lining up in wait to bring about the dethronement of the conservative leaders. They are not trying to prevent the rank and file of the workers from concluding that in all wage disputes the government is against them.

There can be no doubt that in many instances Mr. Wilson, secretary of labor, has tried to get labor an increase of wage; yet in the eyes of the workers one swallow does not a summer make, and the guarded speech of a government officer, does not carry enough credence to the lines to reverse, or much palliate, a claimant's desire, or make the most studious phrases of the judgment court's decision so therio live.

So it is on with the dance in the program of the radical unionist. Almost daily can he say to his fellow workers, "don't you see that the Versailles gabfest about labor legislation being one of the things of first importance, is all poppycock?" The conservative laboring man ponder the query, then begins to lose some of the vigor of his faith in any phase of the doctrine that "whatever is right."

Certainly the Garys, the Ludlows and all employees of liberal mental attitude in labor are not asking in any scheme of reconstruction. They are at loggerheads with all that the Versailles conference provided in regard to labor having the right of collective bargaining, and it is a fact that the peace treaty itself provided that labor should have that right. Gary himself advented at the adoption of the treaty without the change of a word, neglectful of the fact that the treaty stipulated that labor should, equally with the employer, have the right of collective bargaining.

Such an attitude on the part of the employer merely adds to the potency of the argument of the radical. "Don't you see?" is about all he has to say to make a convert of a fellow worker.

It is a fact that many of the automobile manufacturers have themselves devised ways and means for bringing labor into closer union and co-operation with the owners' management. Shop committees as in Belgium and other countries are coming into quite a wide prevalence.

If the conservative labor leaders should quit their three-cornered fight, the radicals and the ultra-radicals would quickly rise to function in their places, and then, with the whole gamut of industrial discord swiftly run, with or without action shimmering along the margin of near-eyed revolution, it would not be long till the employers of the Gary type would be glad to doff the fetters of reactionary foolishness and come beseeching the leaders of labor to join them in getting the tolling hammers to agree on a system of industrial laws for the elevation and enjoyment of the rights of the laborer.

With the spirit of cooperation, of unuality, of compromise, of the higher brotherly sentiments so far afield, it is evident that the conservative labor leaders are, in the words of a ser, the "only important group in America which is remaining true to the national traditions of fair play, free discussion and government by consent of the governed."

AUDACITY VS. PRUDENCE

AS MOST of the history of a country is entwined around the lives, and is therefore read in the biographies, of that country's great men, so is the history which shows the nature, principles and tendencies of a nation found in the archives of that nation's state department records.

Come now President Wilson's statement his adjuration to the officers of the Atlantic fleet in August, 1917 that to effect the country's aim of winning the war those officers should "be audacious not prudent."

Very good advice for a crisis, and the war was a crisis at that time, if the president was right in saying that the English navy "was helpless to the point of panic." His opinion to that effect should not be discredited merely because it is in the form of cryptic epigram.

The first battle of the Civil war was lost to the Union side for lack of audacity in the Union ranks when they had the battle won. The Confederates had been retreating down lanes and across fields for hours, when, at one point where there was no apparent need for fear of results on the part of the Federal troops, the line broke. Into the breach thus formed the rebels came with their headlong yell, pendentium broke loose through a long line of federals and away they went for chain bridge on the Potomac with a precipitancy which gave rise to the word "skedaddle."

They lacked audacity. As Lowell says: "Be bold. Though thou hast time but for a line, be that sublime; not failure but low aim is crime."

As is often said, when drawing up for a fight do not forget that the other fellow is just as badly scared as you are. Be audacious.

The government prosecutors who are "after" the woolen-trad had best get masks for their eyes.

HELPED PERRY WIN VICTORY

Peter Tarr Made the Cannon Balls That Battered So Well in the Fight on Lake Erie.

When Commodore Perry defeated the British on Lake Erie, his cannon turned the trick largely with homemade cannon balls, although at the time of the engagement the place where the deadly missiles were made was a closely guarded secret.

Accidental discovery a few days ago of a small abandoned iron furnace near Stouffville, however, reveals the secret and adds a new chapter to the historical sketches of Perry's victory. The furnace was found by men engaged in erecting furnaces for a large West Virginia steel company on the Tarr farm in Hancock county, West Virginia, directly across the river from Stouffville. It is said to have been the first iron furnace in use in this state. The Albany furnaces, and to have been built by Peter Tarr, one of the earliest settlers along the eastern banks of the Ohio river.

Old records in Hancock county show that Peter Tarr worked day and night at the secret task of making cannon balls from ore deposits found in the hillsides about the furnace, and that he was very careful on applying to Commodore Perry's forces during the battle on Lake Erie. Tarr's furnace near Put-in-Bay and Kelley's Island, snatching an opportunity due to strike the decisive blow at the British naval forces.

WILL REVIVE PAST GLORIES

Historic Port of Gloucester Likely to Come Back With the American Merchant Marine.

The historic port of Gloucester, Mass., is likely to be restored to its one-time maritime glory as the American merchant marine expands. A bulletin of the National Geographic society calls Gloucester the mother of American fisheries. The story of Gloucester's fisher folk is touched on by Rippling in his "Captains Courageous," James H. Connolly, and Mrs. Ward, in "The Maine Paradise." Norman W. Wood, of Gloucester, is the scene of numerous deep sea tragedies touched on by Longfellow in his "Wreck of the Hesperus."

Observers are said to have originated in Gloucester and to have been so named by a Gloucester shipwright who, when he launched a vessel, heard a specter explain: "Oh, how she grows!" The expression was used to describe the bounding of a vessel thrown sideways into the water.

Gloucester has a special curiosity of great beauty and fragrance, the marigold plant, which grows in the swamps near the city. Among the natural wonders that Gloucester possesses are the "blue holes," the sounding waves churn and rattle; the working stone, oscillated for an inch or so by the forming of "Old Mother Ann" and "White's Jaw."

Painless Dentistry.

"An American of home, with or without toothache, is not much affected by the sign, 'Painless Dentistry'; but at sight of it in a foreign land he thrills pleasantly," a traveler said. "It is rare to not professional. Every tooth in his hand may be perfectly sound, and if strained and loosened he welcomes that sign because all over Europe it is a sure indication that genuine is in the neighborhood lives a citizen of the United States. From the northernmost town of Norway and Sweden to the boundaries of Siam, the world's 'painless dentistry' are likely to lift you in the eye at the most unexpected turning. Usually they are followed or preceded by 'American,' but that qualifying term is entirely unnecessary. Doubts of other countries make an increase of performing painless dentistry, or if they do not advertise their skill. They leave that for their American rivals."

Cold—Sure.

On one of our most recent cold Saturdays the tenderfoot rank by accident of Terre Haute made an ally day hike along the Wabash. They were describing the hills for the benefit of some of their most interested friends. They had described the city bluffs from the river, the green ground and the various activities proposed on their apical columns without winning what they regarded sufficient sympathy from their listeners. Just as they were most disengaged their executive took part. "Why it was so cold that we had to break the ice off the panicle (after) between frying cakes," he ejaculated.

And then the audience was moved to speech. —Indianapolis News.

PAPIN, FRENCH LIGHT WEIGHT, IS A FLYVER

Defeat by Tender Ruins Chance to Get Into a Fight With Champion Leonard

By JACK VERRILL, I. C. Sports Editor. NEW YORK (Special Telegrams) France does not measure up to the standard of American lightweights.

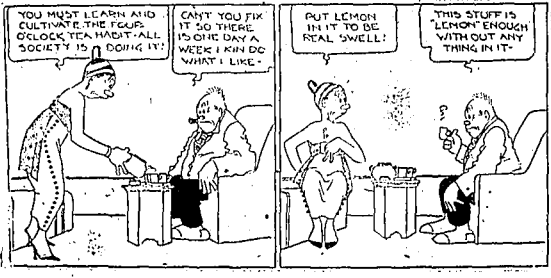

Tender completely outclassed the Frenchman. He hit Papin with everything but the ring post and it was evident after the bout that the minute that Papin was in for a sound licking.

Aside from his ability to administer punishment Papin failed to show anything in the boxing line that might stamp him as a dangerous foe in the better class of American lightweights. He was game, very game, and that was about all.

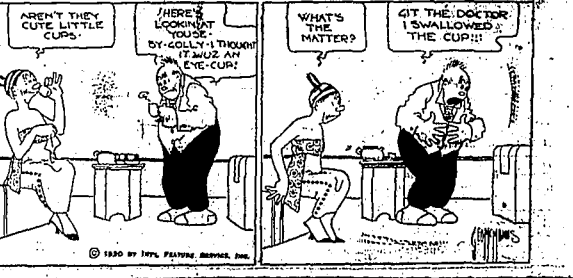

Papin, came to the United States several weeks ago, heralded as a fast, real boxer with a winning punch—a boxer who had never been knocked down.

Jack Blumfeld, also an English boxer, and formerly a champion sparring partner, stopped Jack Blumfeld of Long Island in four rounds.

Salvaged by Creditors When Kaiser Fleed, Will Be Sold in New York

NEW YORK, May 22.—Salvage from the German imperial palace in Berlin and Munich, including the kaiser's throne, is to be sold at auction in New York on May 22. It was announced today by Gustave Povelson, an art dealer, who has the collection in his possession.

According to Povelson the furniture and hangings were seized by creditors after the flight of Wilhelm from Berlin and were recovered from pawn shops and traders' parties in Berlin and elsewhere in Germany. Authenticity of the articles, Povelson asserts, is vouched for by Edward Hahn, a leading expert of Berlin.

PITTSBURGH, May 22.—Passenger trains on all the railroads entering Pittsburgh were operating on their regular schedules this morning and according to the officials there was no indication that any tie-up or stoppage would occur on strike as was reported. After a meeting of about five hundred of the men last night, there was considerable doubt today whether a strike vote was taken last night. Some of those who attended the meeting reported that the men had voted to quit, but this was emphatically denied by brotherhood officials who say the story was given out to bolster the losing cause of the striking switchmen.

TEST SEED BEFORE PLANTING

Otherwise Full Crop Cannot Be Grown Even Under the Most Favorable Weather Conditions.

Practically the only element in crop production that the farmer has completely under his own control is the planting of good seed. It is important that farm seeds be tested before they are sown. Otherwise a full crop cannot be grown even under the most favorable conditions. Seed testing for practical results, says the United States department of agriculture, can be done much more easily than is generally believed.

The exact preparation for making seed tests consists of providing the simple apparatus necessary and of becoming familiar with the general purpose and methods of testing and the features of importance peculiar to tests of particular kinds of seeds. Ask the county agent, or write the department of agriculture for a bulletin.

RANGE ON NATIONAL FORESTS

Stockmen in Drought-Stricken Districts Eagerly Sought Permits to Save Their Cattle.

The demand for range in the national forests was greater the past year than ever before in the history of the forest service, which branch of the United States department of agriculture has control of these tracts. Especially in the drought-stricken arid stockmen, using the unreserved public domain or private pastures, eagerly sought forest permits in order to save their stock. The value of the system of range regulation in use has been so thoroughly demonstrated that representative stockmen from all the western states have declared emphatically in favor of placing the remaining unreserved public lands under federal control and having them managed under a plan similar to that in effect on the national forests.

POULTRY REQUIRE DUST BOX

As Chickens Never Cleanse Themselves by Washing, as Many Birds Do, Wallow is Needed.

Chickens never wash, as many birds do, but cleanse themselves of insects by wallowing in dust. Where board or cement floors are used in the chicken house, some means of dusting should be provided. A dust box three feet by five feet, or four feet by four feet will be found large enough in most instances. The United States department of agriculture suggests, for a flock of 25 or 30 fowls, it should be placed where it can be reached by sunlight during as much of the day as possible.

Fine, light, dry dust is best for the box, but sandy loam is good. Road dust is recommended by many, but it is easy to hard to secure. Coal ashes may be mixed with the soil if desired to make it lighter.

POSITIVE PROOF

That Some Storekeepers Are Feeling Our Price Reductions

Some merchants claim that the values we are offering cannot be had even at manufacturers cost.

Yet Straus & Glauber Is Offering

500 SUITS

which they placed on sale at

$25 $30

$35 $40 $45 $50

The Reasons for These Exceptional Values Are Two Fold

FIRST:

Our liberal policy, which we inaugurated about two weeks ago, to sell goods at a very close margin of profit, so that we could do a greater volume of business. In other words, we are trying to sell three suits of clothes where we were only selling one, taking a correspondingly less profit on each suit.

SECOND:

We had the foresight to purchase big stocks of clothing before the market advanced and to pay cash which enabled us to secure the very best values the manufacturers could offer.

This policy we think ought to appeal to every thinking man and woman in Twin Falls.

By buying here you can help us to force down the High Price of clothing in Twin Falls.

As seeing is believing, you are invited to come in and see the values which we offer, and if you do not think we are selling good clothes for less money than can be found in any other store in Twin Falls, we will not ask you to buy. You are to be the judge.

Small Profits Our Motto

Mothers Who Want to Economize on Boys' Clothing

We realize that mothers are facing a big problem when they come to outfit their boys, for usually boys are hard on clothes and at the prevailing present high prices boys are an expensive piece of furniture to have around the house. In order to relieve mothers of some of the worry about the high prices we have placed on sale two special lots of boys' suits at $11.95 $14.95

These are all wool suits; strongly and durably made, in many styles and patterns and colors.

Of course they are the best values in the city or we wouldn't advertise them.
