IDAHO CROP REPORTS

THE gist of the governmental report just issued on Idaho crops is that the frost of June 1st had lessened than was at first suspected, that there is therefore no much crop in most parts of the state, that prunes are mostly nipped and to death in Twin Falls, and a few of the other skyward counties, but that the wheat, other grain, and hay crops are about 20 per cent greater than last year.

Taken on the whole, the outlook is not so bad. The spring was late all over the United States, quite frosty in the far east. One main grain (Colorado) plowed through snow to get the potatoes land in shape. The reports from the other states further east are worse, on the average than is the Idaho outlook. "Too dry, too wet, poor soil, shortage of labor," are some of the reasons given in the walks of the different eastern districts.

Yet, according to one authority, the reports given out by one school of speculators is: "Crops are fine. Wheat will be about normal; maybe a little better than the five-year average. Corn getting along well enough; better more but soil will do it good. Cotton not as bad as it looked. Other products holding their own."

If a strong hand of buyers, selling down the market, wait to get prices to drop a few points in their favor, they will influence owners of publicity to get such reports as this sent out. Then, after a brief spell, the bulls will get, strongly adverse reports over the wires from the district of the crop they wish to buy up sent in, and up will go prices allowing them to make enough to pay themselves and the senders of the reports.

The Idaho situation, aside from the ill effects of the June frost, is not discouraging in the least. There will likely be large crops of grain and hay, and in that event a depleted farm crop will not spell much in the way of disaster.

RELEASE, June 24.—Comparative quiet has been restored at London, according to a telephone message from that city this morning. Only occasional shots were heard in the streets.

Heavy reinforcements of British troops have reached the scene and the city is under military guard. Many of the wounded Sinn Feiners and militants were carried to their homes under cover of darkness. "The situation is still desperate," said a message to Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland from the Londonderry magistrate.

BRINGING UP FATHER

MICHIGAN STAR LIKELY OLYMPIC TEAM MEMBER

NEW YORK, June 23.—Carl Johnson, Michigan University's wonderful athletic "ace," is one college star who appears certain to win a place on the American Olympic team.

Johnson's ability in the broad and high jumps and the high and low hurdles make him a most valuable man, and as he is practically recovered from an injury that kept him out of the recent Western Conference meet, with the exception of the running broad jump, it is practically sure that he will be at his best for the Olympic trials at Chicago June 26 and the final trials at Cambridge July 17.

In the recent conference meet Coach Farrell, of Michigan, sent Johnson into the broad jump, but kept him out of the high jump and the hurdles. Farrell instructed his star to take one good jump and let it go at that. This Johnson did and won the event easily with a leap of 23 foot 7 1/2 inches. Farrell, of course, felt that should Johnson attempt himself at this early stage following his recovery he might ruin his chances for the Olympic team. It was only a year ago that Johnson took first in the broad and high jumps and the high and low hurdles in the conference games, scoring 20 points for Michigan.

Coach Farrell believes, and with good reason, that Johnson will be able to beat the world's best performers in any way as he is leading him along by easy stages, preparing for the Olympic trials. It will not be surprising should Johnson succeed in establishing a new record to replace the present mark of 24 feet 11 3/4 inches credited to Peter O'Connor, the Irish jumper.

NOBLES MATTERS, HUNGARY

Embassance of Old-Timers Return Serbia as Refugees

Twin Falls, June 23.—The former Russian immigrants have received Serbia's

the crowds of refugees from there they have been American Red Cross relief roughly, 600 of Russian are here, Grand-Dukes and Duchesses, Princess and Princesses, Counts, Barons and their families, garbed in the richest and tattered remnants of their past splendor, ragged, hungry, destitute and moribund as they walk the streets of Belgrade, a hapless percent of misery. They are the living embodiments of the horrors in the old nursery rhyme, "some in rags, some in tape, and some in velvet gown."

Most of these fallen stars from Russia's imperial constellation of pomp and grandeur have clung to the price-less furs they once wore when they shone in the brilliant circles of the Czar's Court. It is a common sight in Belgrade to see a band of Russian robbers, men and women, penniless and hungry, but carrying on their backs furs that would fetch in New York a small fortune, slitting into some local relief station for a bowl of soup and a chunk of coarse bread to stay their empty stomachs. Their garments of ermine, kolinsky, sable, seal, astrakhan and Persian lamb would make over blue Fifth avenue envious. Yet these furs are all that remain to them of their former riches. Most of them have not a penny in the pockets of their luxurious cloaks and have no idea from hour to hour where their next meal is coming from or where they are to lay their heads to rest at nightfall.

A Russian countess, formerly one of the most appointed belles of Petrograd, recently appeared at the American Red Cross relief station here, barefooted, with a rag wrapped about her head in lieu of a hat, but attired in a rich ermine cloak originally worth thousands of dollars, now dingy and tattered from hard wear and exposure to the weather. The day was warm with spring sunshine. The former belle was visibly not only hungry but hot.

"Pretty warm for furs today, isn't it?" she was asked.

"Yes," she replied, "but I haven't

Detroit Banker Suspected Slayer

DETROIT, June 23.—Police early today arrested Frank H. Dohoney, a banker and lawyer, charging him with the slaying of August Dwyer, traveling auditor of the United States Works of America, whose body was found in the office of his brother, Dennis Dwyer, an attorney in a downtown office building last night. Dohoney, the man known to have seen Dwyer was placed under arrest at his summer home at Pine Lake. He seemed dazed when arrested and his clothing bore blood spots which he could not give coherent account of. He is in a receiving hospital guarded by detectives and officers will take his statement this afternoon.

"SILENT CAL" COOLIDGE, SPHINX, IS JUST REGULAR GOOD FELLOW

BOSTON, June 22.—Who is Governor Coolidge, of Massachusetts? As he, suddenly thrust into the glare of the national spotlight as Republican nominee for Vice-President, he is known in the Bay State as "Silent Cal," Sphinx of Hampshire County.

One who cannot, cleverly, most silent and most epigrammatic politicians who ever slowly but surely climbed the political ladder.

"Sticker" to Puritan standards speaking with an old-fashioned Yankee drawl.

Thorough master of the English language and of brevity. Devoted husband to his vivacious wife, whom he is said to have wooed and won with fewer words than ever before on record. (They are a "study in opposites.")

Charm of his two fine many boys—John and Calvin, Jr., aged twelve and thirteen respectively.

A Governor with a "State secret"—he chooses all his wife's dresses, suits and hats.

Now as to the habits and likes of the man who was born in Plymouth, Vt., in 1872, who entered law after he graduated from Amherst College, and who went into politics in his home city, Northampton, Mass., as a member of the Common Council. The Governor:

Eats hot biscuits and Vermont maple syrup.

Has a suite of two rooms in the Adams House, Boston, but keeps his home in Northampton—half of a double family dwelling.

Reads a lot when he is, never grumbles and says what is set before him.

Has no automobile, but hopes to buy one when he can afford it. (Will can drive a fiver, but he hasn't been afraid she will run over somebody.)

Pays $32 a month rent for his Northampton house.

Likes hot biscuits and Vermont maple syrup.

Makes walking his sole recreation.

Has played golf twice in fifteen years—describing these occasions as "nearly knocking the ball around."

Never before in American politics has there been a man like Mr. Coolidge, who has with Governor Coolidge. This rating personality, little known outside the confines of his own State, became a national figure when the Boston policemen went on strike. The Governor passed these words, which were like an electric current throughout the nation: "Let every inhabitant make known his determination to support law and order; that duty is supreme." From that moment Coolidge and "law and order" became synonymous. Then came a lone book, a little volume entitled: "Where Faith in Massachusetts." This book simply contained extracts from the Governor's speeches and State papers. It was called about the country. "As for the only Coolidge, campaign literature. A copy fell into the hands of Wallace McCannan, of Portland, Ore. McCannan has said that he felt that the man who wrote those speeches was a patriot; and when the national convention met in August, McCannan as a delegate placed Governor Coolidge in nomination for the vice-presidency. It is a copy of the book which played so important a part in the nomination of the Governor shows that the writer of the State papers is a master of clear, crisp phrase, short, clear, snappy sentences and thoroughly sincere.

Governor Coolidge is a hard worker. He is at his desk in the State House every day from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. At 5 o'clock he goes for a walk, usually with Detective Horrigan. "Exercising Horigan is my chief recreation," says the Governor, with never a smile for his own little joke on the detective. "As for Mr. Coolidge," said the Governor, "his favorite exercise is eating lobster at the Governor's Club."

Governor Coolidge is a member of the following clubs: University of Massachusetts and Belmont Springs Country. He attends most of the meetings with some public affair, which means a speech in nearly every instance. Mr. Coolidge divides his time between Boston and Northampton, where her boys are at tending public school.

Our teaching force consists of 90 instructors. These are the highest paid in the state of Idaho.

$100,000 school improvements are in progress.

Building Program for 1920.

Buildings still in progress of construction on May 1, 1920, amounts to $1,100,000 and includes Eliza Temple, $300,000; high school addition, $175,000; Catholic church, $100,000; J. D. B. church $90,000; one garage, $100,000; two $80,000 apartment houses, and two office buildings.

New dwellings are being constructed by the score in all sections of the city.

City paving and improvements to cost $769,000 are started, which include 12 miles of city street paving.

Present City Improvements in Place.

75 miles of concrete sidewalk; 55 miles of city pipe lines; 3 miles of paved streets; 1,140 acres in the city limits; 2,083 telephones.

A $75,000 domestic water works system and $80,000 water filtration plant owned by the city furnishes Twin Falls with an abundant supply of pure, soft water. This plant has national fame for its completeness.

The city assessed valuation is $4,407,890.00.

Shipping Data.

Twin Falls shipped out in 1919, 178,975,000 pounds of produce, valued at $7,668,000, which is over one-third of the total produce shipped from the county.

Received in: 354,691,000 pounds of freight, which figure represents considerably over one-half of all freight shipped into the county.

The excess of incoming freight is readily seen to be caused by the big influx of necessary building materials and also the fact that Twin Falls is a wholesale distributing point for Southwestern Idaho.

The products in and out of Twin Falls city last year amounted to over 10,000 carloads of products, which, if made into a single long freight train, would be over 112 miles long.

SEEKS MATES IN U.S. FOR GIRLS OF FRANCE

PARIS, June 23.—The immediate organization of a committee of French women, to co-operate with a similar committee in the United States with the object of promoting marriage between French girls and American youths, is urged by Professor Paul Carnot, of the faculty of medicine at the University of Paris, whose wife is an Anglo-American.

Professor Carnot confesses in the current issue of the Paris Magazine that when his suggestion for an "international marriage pool" was first launched in the United States through the medium of the International News Service, he had little hope for its success.

"But since my article appeared in many of the biggest newspapers in the United States I have received an avalanche of letters coming from all the States and from all social classes in which young men express their desire to take French brides," he writes.

"I have, therefore, concluded that in this respect certainly, we have not taken into account our enormous prestige abroad, particularly in the United States, a prestige which throws in the shade some of the displeasing actions of our politicians and financiers."

"Among the letters which I have received are some from Americans who complain of their solitude and who dream of leading by their fire-side a little of the grace and gaiety of the French girls. These letters I have thrown in the fire, for we do not wish to transport our precious daughters to America where they will be lost to us, where their children will remain American."

Professor Carnot's wife's experience has shown that the French girl, transplanted to a foreign soil, does not make a successful wife, grows weary in an atmosphere of her own, and that such marriages are too frequently by distillations and second marriages.

"But it is entirely different for the second category of letters, which deserve our careful attention. They come from young Americans who wish to marry French girls and come to live in France. Some of the writers even tell their particular tastes; one wants a blonde with blue eyes, another chestnut hair and black eyes, a third insists upon a jolly girl, another wants a good musician and so on. It is not surprising that they should be, and certain others even give me information about their salaries."

"All these eager young men from the United States demand that I respond immediately. All appear sincere and entirely desirable as husbands. But alas, my laboratory here in the school of medicine is not a matrimonial agency and I have not time to respond. It is for this reason that I suggest the creation of a committee of French women who can impose respect and knowing the customs of America. We could thus come to the aid of the young French girls whose marriage prospects are an arithmetical impossibility because the war has killed off so many of our young men. We could thus draw to the aid of the young men of America, full of physical and moral health, who in such a case become good Frenchmen. From this marriage would finally be born healthy infants, the children of French mothers, who would remain French."

"By the side of the Americans I and the Canadian equally desirable husbands. Many of them come from French New England, many speak our language, and during the war we have admired their courage."

"We cannot hope by this process to make of the French girls whose sweethearts were killed in the war, but perhaps we may save some tens of thousands and thus reduce in some measure the great disequilibrium of sexes in France. Even the prospects of this limited success should give us the impulse to energetic and immediate action."
