WHITE REGARDS COX AS LEADER

New Chairman of Democratic National Committee Says Nominee Must Guide Party

WASHINGTON, July 29.—(AP)—Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, democratic presidential nominee, must be considered the new leader of his party, according to the opinion of the new chairman of the democratic national committee who said he had made an arrangement for a conference with President Wilson during his two days stay in Washington, declaring he had come here to take charge of party headquarters and meet democratic leaders.

"I will, of course, call on Mr. White," he added he would see the president if invited to do so. "White's statement concerning party leadership was made in answer to questions about republican charges that Cox allowed President Wilson to dictate his policy on the league of nations."

"The governor will make clear his position on that question in his acceptance speech," White said. "White also stated general campaign plans, financial plans, expenditures and a talk he had received at the University of Chicago last week."

"Mr. Cox placed his services at our disposal," White said, and added that Cox allowed President Wilson to dictate his policy on the league of nations.
