Sails To Find Out What Europe Teaches Children About World

Senator Hiram Bingham late today announced that he would withdraw his amendment to the naval appropriation bill for an economic conference after Senator Lodge had stated that adoption of such a conference would be harmful to efforts now being made by the administration to ascertain whether it can be of aid in adjusting Europe's economic trouble.

Lodge's statement followed a discussion which grew out of announcement by Senator Watson, Indiana, that the administration had put out feelers to foreign governments to learn whether the United States could afford to send a delegation to the London conference.

Senator Bingham's amendment would have provided for a conference of the world's leading nations to discuss the economic situation of the world and to consider the possibility of a world conference to be held in June and July.
