PARITY OF RIGHTS IN POZOLE

Honorable John Russell Denist He Is Father of Three-Year-Old Child; Divorce Action Is Attracting Widespread Attention in Social Circles.

LONDON, March 2.—A trial in which the decision will make a father, per se, an illegitimate child, is expected to begin today here, London society to court, where the alleged father's divorce suit is being heard.

The Honorable John Russell, son of Lord Russell, denies paternity of a three-year-old boy, the child of a woman who once walked in his sleep into his bedroom and that he is the father of the child.

His wife was a "gambler," who could be kept home only by chain-down.

The marriage had never been consummated, and his wife frequently stayed out all night, after which she would telephone home and he would carry the day down to her.

American Consul Overlooked Some Possibilities.

High and Mighty Ruler of Zanibar Suffered from Many Ills.

Nice little nation of the western world is being foisted and peddled and cuddled mightily by Uncle Sam these days. Hardly a month passes that the urbane and diplomatic secretary of state, Mr. Hughes, doesn't hold a levee feast with a group of them, writes William Pickell, Editor of the "Washington Star."

By OSCAR P. AUSTIN, Stationer, The National City Bank of New York

During a Bolshevik labor strike in Moscow recently some printers, turning out paper money for the Government, struck for higher wages. The strike was finally settled by an agreement that each printer should be entitled to the amount of money he could turn out in one hour each day, noting the notes for himself not higher in denomination than 500 rubles.

When, in comparison, we consider how Uncle Sam manufactures our money down in Washington and at the several mints and how carefully every penny is guarded against loss this loose method of money making in Russia at present seems almost unbelievable to a good many Americans.

A Private Mint

Yet it is a fact that at the present day a certain form of money once widely current in America but now quite unknown to most people is manufactured in this country in just as free and easy a manner as anything the Bible might suggest. Moreover, it is no more counterfeit than the Russian roubles, although our Government has nothing to do with its production and does not in any way recognize its species.

Quite recently there was placed on exhibition in the Bergen County, New Jersey, Historical Society

A private money making machine which had been in use for nearly one hundred years, no less than four generations of one family employing it for extensive money-making purposes.

With this new announcement the question naturally arises: What is the operation of the Uncle Sam's Secret Service doing to allow a private money making machine to go on without molestation? The answer is simple—

It is entirely used only recently when the last member of this family died, their people turned out vast quantities of wampum for domain of Zanibar had never heard it, so the ways of the white man on the bathing beach. Not knowing they had to avert for themselves in nature's lark.

By, by long-established custom, it became a common sight for the consul and his staff to behold the beach well filled with bathers unformed. For many years they came thus and bathed and were.

They protested. There was no bathing of the practice. In protest against and again, but still such bathing beauties cluttered up the view from his front porch.

One day, however, Major Riley had visitors from afar—white men and women who had come to spend a few days at the consulate. And, of course, the visitors were shocked and horrified. They hurried to their host.

"There are a thousand naked darlings in your front porch," they told him. "Are you going to stand for it?"

"I'm not," said Riley. "I've warned them once and I've warned them twice, yes, three times. Here, where I show 'em they can't get away with me."

So he took down a pretty old shawl, loaded it with hibiscus and went into the yard, while the visitors watched to see what would happen next.

"Kiddo!" he yelled. "Twenty-three!" All of which was snappy slang that day and night.

But the natives merely looked up and smiled. They kept on bathing. Riley put the weapon to his shoulder, squatted down the barrel and pulled the trigger.

Wild yells. Great animation. A chorus of wailing wails. Sentries from within the consulate.

The next day Riley received a note from the queen of Zanibar. In substance it read:

Grasshopper's Choice. When various spring grains are available the grasshoppers prefer ones to any of the others, reports a United States Department of Agriculture Investigator in Montana. However, when food is scarce the hoppers will not go far out of the way to search for the plants that please their palates most.

Monument to an Apple. At Proctorville, in Lawrence county, Ohio, there is a monument erected to an apple, "Home Beauty." More than a century ago—in 1817, to be exact—the first three of this now famous variety of apple was planted near Proctorville by a boy named Almon Gillett. It was a mere twig, which his father threw to him, saying, "You can have that; I don't want it."

The boy planted it carefully and it grew and flourished, bearing in later years fruit that proved to be of an extraordinary quality. Thousands of bushels of it yield for growing, and in the course of time many other extensive orchards came to be made up of its progeny and descendants. Today "Home Beauty" is the leading variety grown in Ohio.—Pittsburgh Ledger.

Still another who has realized the fact that Tangle makes you get better, sleep better and feel better is Newton A. Clark, pioneer citizen of Portland, Ore., living at 424 Second Street.

"Before I took Tangle," said Mr. Clark, "my stomach was all out of order and I was in a fairly reasonable condition. I suffered with indigestion, flatulence, gas, and I also suffered with constipation and indigestion. I could never sleep well, my strength and energy seemed to be sapped, and I was in a pretty bad fix."

"I read and heard so much about Tangle that I decided to try it, and the medicine worked just like it was made a possibility for me. I have taken five bottles of the treatment and everything tastes so good and I feel so much better. Why, the medicine has completely relieved me of that indigestion and stomach trouble. I sleep like a log at night. I have an appetite as good as King. Tangle has certainly put me in the best of health and I am now in a tip-top condition in every way."

dan usage. The second and third generations of wampum making "Campbell" family were Jacob and John Campbell, who used it in buying furs from the Indians. It was probably Mr. Astor who opened up the way for the Campbell's extensive wampum trade by the plant and the Indians have become more and more civilized and accustomed to the use of money. The white man's money. Yet some wampum is still made on the New Jersey Coast.

A Wampum Workshop

The interior of a wampum workshop is as different as it is possible to be from a regulation mint. In fact in its primitive nature it more nearly resembles a linoleum floor. The floors are hidden from sight by benches and tools are covered entirely with white-clothing dust as the floors are being ground and polished and suggests the application of linoleum coats of white wash.

The wampum makers purchase a cartload of cowls and clam shells—75 cents, delivered at their doors, and when a shell of sufficient thickness is selected it is broken with hammer and split into either of about two inches in length and one-third of an inch square. This piece of shell is then securely secured into a vice made of two pieces of wood, connected with a hinge in the center. The end of the vice is placed in a hole in the wall and the shell is inserted. Then the vice is closed tightly and held by pressure against the workbench. In this manner, in a short time, the edges of the shell are rounded and then the shell is brought into use.

Origin of Wampum

In the Hall of the Indians of the Woodlands, in The American Museum of Natural History, New York, may be seen a case containing strings and belts of curious-looking white and purple beads. This is wampum, and was used as currency by the Indians of the coast and traders, and the Indians first, from front to left, till the sharp end of the drill penetrates through the cube of shell from end to end lengthwise.

When a sufficient number of cubes are completed they are then rounded and polished with emery paper and strung on wires, green and white, and purple beads. The wampum that is made of purple shells is the most beautiful, and therefore more valuable and is harder and tougher to work. The price paid for the product of this now almost obsolete industry is 14 cents a running inch on the string, and the average shell money-makers is about $5 a day during the season.

In the Hall of the Indians of the Woodlands, in The American Museum of Natural History, New York, may be seen a case containing strings and belts of curious-looking white and purple beads. This is wampum, and was used as currency by the Indians of the coast and traders, and the Indians also employed it in their ceremonies, and as a lodge of authority. Among other traditions explaining how wampum first came to be used, the Indians have one to the effect that once Hiawatha, on a journey, came to a little lake, and was wondering how to cross it when a flock of ducks appeared and settled on the water. When they flew away the water had disappeared, and Hiawatha, looking on the dry bed of the lake, saw that it was covered with shells. From these he made the first wampum.

Since this legend and another one, however, it is believed that the earliest wampum was made of small pieces of wood of equal size, stained black or white. Foreign shells are also said to have been used. Later wampum was made from shells, sometimes of the form of starfish, but generally of the form of a shell.

Wampum was made from the hearts of the clam shells of one species. While shell beads were early manufactured by the Indians along the Atlantic coast, the first wampum was made by the Indians of the West of the Hudson River before the seventeenth century. With the arrival of the colonists, the Indians were supplied with tools which made possible for them to work a greater variety of shells and to produce more finished work.

Paying Fare With Wampum For age wampum was used by the Indians almost solely as money. The making of wampum the white men with tools supplied by them.

For a long time after their arrival wampum was in use as common currency among the Dutch Indians. Its value was at one time four for a penny, and at another time six for a penny. In Massachusetts, in 1666, wampum, of good quality, was legal tender to the amount of forty shillings. The white men were paid eight for

COUNTRY GETS NEW CAR IN TRADE WITH A LOCAL DEALER

As a result of a trade consummated last evening the county has acquired the ownership of a new Studebaker light six. The history of the story in the Times some time ago. The condition of the county cars had become such that their cost was enormous for repairs and that they could not be depended on in emergencies. The board has been canvassing the situation and last evening consummated the deal with the Studebaker agency. The new car is worth $1100 and the county allowed $550 on three old cars, two Fords and a Dodge. The board hesitated a long time about trading until it was felt that the situation demanded a new car.

POULTRY ROUP IS DANGEROUS DISEASE

Delicate Fowls Have Very-Severity Attacked and Recover Slowly—Isolate Sick Birds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) One of the most serious results of the wet and inclement weather of fall and early winter is the disease of roup, commonly called roup. It resembles the most malignant form of influenza in larger animals and, in man, attacks not only the respiratory tract, but also the digestive, the urinary and the circulatory systems. It is attended with high fever and is very contagious, but the nature of the disease is not yet known. However, it is known that contagion is brought into the poultry yard by infected birds, outbreaks of roup in the fall occur most commonly where the growing chickens are overcrowded in the coop or where the roosters are not kept separate and are poorly ventilated. Sometimes these birds are purchased from other flocks, and sometimes they are birds from the same flock which have been on exhibition and exposed to contagion. Again, they may visit with or pass on which fly from one poultry yard to another.

Delicate birds have very severe attacks and recover slowly, as pointed out in Farmer's Bulletin 557, published by the United States Department of Agriculture. Often a chronic cough has been noted for a long time and birds so affected give and spread the disease for a year or more, becoming a starting point for many new outbreaks.

At first symptoms are similar to an ordinary cold, but there is more fever, dullness and prostration. The eyelids are swollen and held closed most of the time. The birds sneeze and shake their heads in their efforts to free the air passages. Sometimes the eyes are entirely closed and birds are prevented from feeding food. This, of course, results in rapid loss of strength, and many of the birds die within a week.

Comfortable, Roomy Winter Lodgings for the Hens Means Plenty of Eggs.

On ten days. Some of the affected ones recover and others continue weak and have a chronic form of disease for months. The best treatment is to place sick birds in a warm, dry, well-ventilated room free from drafts, and away from the rest of the flock. An nutritious and heating mixture should be applied to the affected membranes. Lacking a suitable mixture, a small syringe and salt, or even a medicine dropper, may answer the purpose, or the bird's head may be plunged into a basin of the mixture and held there for a few seconds. The most suitable remedies are: Equal parts of hydrogen peroxide and water; borax in warm water, 1 quart; or permanganate of potash, 1 dram, water 1 pint.

SHOWS SUPREMACY OF MAN

Single Blast of Dynamite Has Power to Destroy What Nature Took Centuries to Build.

The next time you pass one of the excavations that are being made in the solid rock here, there and everywhere in New York these days for foundations of new buildings, stop and consider, says the New York Sun, every foot of rock that is destroyed by these workers with jack and steam shovel, drill and dynamite, nature spent a hundred years to make. For stratified rock forms at the rate of about one foot in a century. So it follows that if you see an excavation through stratified rock 30 feet deep "the instant that within a few weeks" that 3000 years of nature's labor has been destroyed through the brain and brawn of man.

This is one thing to wonder over when looking at such an excavation. That it is not all. When this rock was being formed man had not appeared on the earth. Yet the earth in those dim ages of the past teemed with living creatures. Creatures that, through the passing of untold millions of years, developed from weak Aquerbrates into huge, world-mastering, like anything known today. They ruled the earth, the air and the water. And part of their dominion was this region of New York where man's dominion is now asserted.

Some of these creatures, as they walked over the region, stepped into shallow pits and left the imprint of their footprints in the mud, which, as it hardened into rock preserved the imprint, a perfect outline on the surface of the rock. Other, sinking in the bottom of deeper water that was then where is now dry land, were buried in the mud. As this mud tended to rock, their bodies fossilized into the water from the mud and the streams, fossilized in the mud. In this way, was hardened into stone. And, as layer on layer, the rock was formed, miles in depth. As it formed it impregnated and cured by fossils the bones of many a bizarre creature that no man ever saw, but whose likeness and history may be found in those strata of stone.

A host of dinosaurs! The rock falls scattered. Men hit the pieces late in centuries. The great cranes, as by magic, lift the containers and dump the contents into the wagons waiting above. Who cares if the work of 30 centuries is destroyed? Soon this great hole will be the basement of a skyscraper. It will be filled all day and every day with men carrying on their busy bustling activities with no thought of the strange animals that made this very spot their home millions of years gone by.

Daily Fashion Hint

BOTH SEEN AND "HEARD" Attractive enough for the most critical inspection and with a color scheme that makes itself "heard" without "screaming," this youthful model fulfills the first half of the advice about children, and ignores the second. Pink and green chambray makes the dress, the collar, cuffs and sash being of pink organza. The center of the collar are embroidered and there are tiny frills to outline the edges, separating themselves on the cuffs. Medium size requires 3 yards 30-inch chambray and 3/4 yard organza. Fictorial Verse No. 9911. Size, 4 to 10 years. Price, 25 cents. Embroidery No. 1139. Transfer, blue or yellow, 20 cents.

He is desirous of greeting old acquaintances at his new location. (Signed) ROBERT ROGERSON, Pres.

JACK DAW ON ICICLE ISLE

Drawings by Leslie Elton. Story by Hal Cochran. In a few moments you can transform even plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, gleamy and full of life. Just get a 35 cent bottle of "Dandergin" at any drug store. Then moisten a soft cloth with the "Dandergin" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Instantly you immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be as mass, so soft, lustrous and so easy to do up. All dirt and excessive oil is removed. Let "Dandergin" give new life, vigor and brightness to your hair. This, along with the tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful. Jack Daw seemed to be living over there. Not just little snowflakes which Jack was used to, but great quantities of it, over head, and on both sides. Jack felt some of it slipping down behind his coat collar. He began to think that he would never get all this way through the big bank. Then Jack felt himself coming into the open air again. And his sled seemed to be slowing down a bit. He opened his eyes and was very much surprised at the beautiful slits to which he had made his way. The sled was now traveling slow enough for him to get a good look at all the scenery. Great heavy bugs in every direction and they seemed to come from nowhere. Jack was afraid his sled would crash into one of them but he managed to steer it safely through the little paths between the hanging-ice formations. By this time his sled had almost stopped. LOSE LOWER CHICAGO, March 2 - All grains closed lower on the Chicago Board which developed late in the day.
A statement issued by officials of the Armour Grain company that they will be a large carry-over of last year's grain crop, caused the decline in wheat. The statement held the United States must export about fifty million bushels of wheat by July 1 and Canada approximately 100,000,000. Due to the Argentine surplus and the foreign situation, the statement said, this market has possible. Export trade was at a standstill.
Corn was extremely dull with no export trade reported. The late Argentine corn crop surplus was practically exhausted and exports will be confined to the new crop available in about six weeks. A decrease in the monthly visible supply of corn over last year was reported. Receipts were moderate.
