FIRPO MEETS BRENNAN ON NEXT MON.

South American Heavyweight Plans to Go Back to Buenos Aires on the First Ship After His Fight. He Does Not Understand American Love Smitting Lasses and Has No Manager! May Get Chance at Jack Dempsey, if He Beats Brennan.

(By HENRY L. PARREL)

NEW YORK, March 8.—On the first boat that will sail after next Monday night, Buenos Aires Firpo is going back to Buenos Aires, the heavyweight champion of South America said today.

Only the mere matter of a fight with Bill Brennan that will bring him in $10,000 and the chance to fight with Dempsey that should be worth $100,000 to him makes Santos Angel willing to stay here until Monday.

DIPPING EGGS WILL PREVENT BAD TASTE

Flavor Disappears When Immersed in Preserving Fluid.

Creasible Eggs Abandoned From Fillars and Fats Becoming Slightly Moist—Summer Product is to Be Preferred.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Probably the best founded reason for preferring creamed egg-storage eggs has to do with flavor. Everyone recognizes the "soft storage taste." This taste," says the specialist in the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, "develops in eggs that have been in storage for several months, and is especially noticeable when they are unshelled or poached. The flavor is not so marked in the white as in the yolk, which contains a large percentage of fat. It is known that fats have an affinity for odors and flavors. The fact indicates that the soft storage taste is due to the absorption of surrounding odors. When stored the storage fluid itself, but some odor, as have been the cases and excellent, but the storage fluid, fillars and fats have an odor more nearly resembling that found in storage eggs. The fillars and fats lose some slightly damp in storage, due to the absorption of moisture vapor."

GOOD BOOK AT LIBRARY

(By JAMES D. WHEELAN.)

Among the last consignments of books which arrived at the public library in this city, is one entitled "The Washington Conference" by Raymond Leslie Buell of Princeton, the well known author of "Contemporary French Politics."

The work is well worthy of perusal as a sample of fair and discriminating consideration by a friend of the thing discussed. Buell favors the treaty, because while it allows Japan to become for the moment practically unrestricted dictator of the Far East, by rendering the United States impotent to interfere with her domination after naval reduction has become effective; it also will if carried out, preclude the possibility of Japan's coming over here. In this regard Buell stresses somewhat, one cannot help but think, the benefits of the conference, even should the treaty finally be ratified by all concerned, yet the points he makes, if too strongly emphasized at least exist.

Buell is lively conscious of the relative worthlessness of any agreement between a small coterie of nations and points out from time to time what might have been had the United States entered into the League of Nations and through its mighty influence into the balance whole-heartedly to make a success.

His concluding words however to readers here that reasonable concessions may be made to Japan which will bring her people into a better state of mind, show his ideal. "But since these concessions are made, the western world will be able to bring the tremendous force of international opinion—effectively organized through a League of Nations in which the United States should be a full and equal member—to aid Japanese liberalism, and thus make possible its eventual ascendancy and success."

Nor in discussing concessions is he unmindful of the fact that such economic concessions as must be made will benefit the countries not less than the Oriental nation. He realizes that the "National Economic Society" of Japan, with its antipathy toward foreign nations has its counterpart of hate breeding associations in all other countries since the war, and that, at the bottom it is monopolistic and militaristic in character.

While the cry has gone up in America that we must have a prohibitive tariff against Japan and while appeals to prejudice against the race are made to accomplish that result, it is interesting to learn that monopolists in Japan have effectively raised similar campaign slogans there. Buell quotes Japanese authority to show that one American produces 10 times as much in a day as a Japanese workman and that "Three and a half days wages in Texas raised one-third more rice than 110 days labor in Japan."

He shows, too, that Japan has failed to hold business by "strong-arm" methods in its dependencies, and pointedly says: "Japan's experience has thoroughly disproved the antiquated adage that 'Trade Follows the Flag.' Political control is absolutely unnecessary to successful commerce. * * * If the United States can manufacture steel more cheaply than Japan, Japan should buy from the United States. But if the United States devotes itself to the manufacture of steel, it cannot fill its other needs. If Japan does not manufacture steel because it is unprofitable to do so, she will raise silk which is more profitable. She will exchange her surplus silk for surplus steel of America. This, in its simplest form, is the principle—indeed, axiomatic—on which foreign trade should be conducted. Human wants are unbounded. Japan or any other nation need never fear that her manufacturers will not be disposed of, if international trade is free."

Still, it is not by means of free trade, but by means of reciprocity, good republics doctrine for Garfield, Arthur, Blaine, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft, that Buell would attain his objective. He says: "This (opening of trade) should be done, not by means of free trade, but of international reciprocity agreements. Reciprocity is necessary to compel the hierarchy in Japan to surrender its own protectionist policy which is likewise making the industrialization of Japan impossible. Such a concession on the part of the United States may disappoint a few monopolists who have waved the flag of 'industrial independence' as vigorously as opponents of the League of Nations have waved the flag of 'political independence.' Such a concession will disappoint a few monopolists in Japan who have made and who wish to make great fortunes from exclusive concessions in Asia."

Current Business Conditions

By GEORGE E. ROBERTS

(From the Monthly Bulletin for January Issued by The National City Bank of New York)

The most important feature of the business recovery during the past year has been the improvement in the price of agricultural products. This has restored the normal relationship between these and the products of other industries. The final estimate by the Department of Agriculture upon the crop of 1922 crops gives them as $1,800,000,000 over the value for the year 1921. This means an increased purchasing power to be expended among the producers, and they are all being benefited.

The year ended with the best holiday trade yet known, and practically full employment for the available labor supply. The report to higher wages, and prices shows that the slack has been taken up and that the situation is nearly as good as it can be. Some readjustments may be desirable, but the industries are operating at capacity or to the limit of their labor supply. This means no more, except as methods may be improved. Moreover, when they have reached that point there is danger that additional pressure will start a cycle of rising wages and prices, which is unhealthy and arbitrary. After every period of either depression or activity business is likely to swing past the point of balance in one direction or the other, and to be avoided as far as possible. What is wanted is stability, permanent regular wages, and a steady state.

Aside from the threat of inflation, and with a reservation as to European conditions, the outlook for 1923 is excellent. The principal industries have all the business in sight they need to have to make a good year; the only question is whether it will remain in sight. If industrial costs move higher, the margin of profit upon which employers are working, however small, will be narrowed, and the industries could be held today on a replacement basis. Such a situation would mean a making up materials bought at lower prices than are now being paid.

This is because certain industrial costs have been maintained at a high level after the buying power of a portion of the consuming public has been reduced. Unfavorable conditions of increase in costs must be passed on to consumers, who for the most part are the producers themselves and the farmers.

Wages, Prices and Employment. This article on the part of the wage-workers due to the common habit of thinking of wages as a matter between employer and employee, and not as a part of the cost of production. When it is known that wages, prices, consumption and employment are all closely related.

Another Withdrawal. Marks Contest for Commissionerships

"Day by day, in every way," those who claimed that withdrawal from the contest of the Gold Dust Twin machine with the candidates of the two commissioners seeking reelection, advised that they are digging up additional proof. This morning they pointed to exhibit in the possession of V. C. Blandhagen, who, like the late J. B. Harnhart, had been accepted. That the Gold Dust Twin machine double-crossed those men, after inducing them to become candidates in good faith, in order to use their candidacies as leverage on the trail, is the conclusion drawn by those who have kept tabs on the situation.

Much Good Sense in This. The continuance of clean lines in, and of itself, a source of moral strength, second only to that of a clean conscience. A well-paired collar or a strong glove has carried many a man through an emergency in which a wrinkle or a rip would have defeated him.—St. Paul.
