BY HENRY H. GRAHAM.
OT content with winning the first two games of the series, the Bruins went home Saturday evening with a clean 3-1 victory over Caldwell, making a clean sweep of the three games.
Though most of the fans expected Evans to settle Gar里 to the right field fence, he did not do them by using Lefty Larson and it was a fortunate choice, for Larson enjoyed the day, which came easily to him.
The Bruins' bats were not up to scratch, however, and Caldwell down to earth, but the team must let Caldwell down with one run and four safeties and had three well hit home runs.
Dodge, who had been a real snappy left despite the quiet of batters pulled, Caldwell went error free throughout the game and held off the Bruins' bats, though his ability to hit by Jarman effectively, Earwood, who was the losing pitcher in that memorable contest, which Gar里 won at the end of the ninth inning.
For three innings there was a profusion of goose eggs. Then in the fourth, Grom singled through Bardsley. An infield pull hit him on second, and therefore he scored on L. Jarman's clean single.

The last two for the Bruins came in the fifth. Hammond cracked a double and Nye followed with the right field fence with a home run.
The lucky seven encouraged the Caldwell boys to the extent of one run, but the Bruins' bats were silent. Jensen dropped his fly ball in left, Smith hoisted a long skyrocket to Nye, on which the fleet Lawton scampered in.

On the third, Nye had a fine fettle, permitting him to hit for none more than one cushion. It was a pitcher's battle with the edge slightly on the home team.

T. F. BATTERS LEAD, CALDWELL FIELDERS BEST

(By MARSHALL)
Caldwell shows better fielding than do the Bruins, but when it comes to hitting according to the loop sheet, the fielding and hitting average for Caldwell is far below that of the Blue and White sluggers, who averaged .310 against .164 for Caldwell. The Bruins' batsmen let the locals easily in fielding; their average being .316 against .084 for the Bruins.

The president, according to official usage fixed by the first congress, is simply "the president" in official communications, but it may be questioned whether a letter addressed to him, not for the formal records, by a cabinet officer comes under that head. Anyway, Secretary Hoover in addressing him as "his excellency the President," didn't break the law very badly.

In Washington some perplexity seems to exist as to what the British under-secretary for foreign affairs meant in saying that there had been no response from America to suggestions that he help in solving the Ruhr problem. Probably his purpose was merely to make it plain to the house of commons that proposals dependent upon American cooperation were futile.

It was hardly necessary for Secretary Hughes to deny that he had advocated using the French debt to the United States as a means of acquiring the French Antilles, yet the "amusement" with which he dismissed the report may have been of the diplomatic sort. Too many malicious inventions in regard to the United States and the Monroe doctrine are appearing in the Paris press.

An "inspirational art center" in Paris for Americans, sponsored by the American Academy of Design, is to be established soon by the purchase of the fine Hotel de Lauzon, a historic building on the Ile St. Louis in the Seine. It will mean that "American art has arrived," according to Edwin H. Blashfield, who is an excellent authority. For the present the contributors to the purchase fund are anonymous.

While the Harvard Liberal club, by a vote of 28 to 7, adopted at its meeting last week a resolution opposing any restriction of admission to college based on religion or race, a minority report has been issued in which the ideal of the "open mind" is affirmed together with a belief that no stand should be taken upon a question of so great complexity that "complete or even substantial agreement is impossible." Emerson defined the scholar as "one thinking," and perhaps the proper definition of the undergraduate liberal is the "undergraduate thinking." This is surely much nearer the truth than the popular idea of the youthful liberal as a Bolshevik without whiskers.

Senator Walsh's contention that motion picture films of historical events should be stored by the government for the instruction of future generations is worthy of consideration. The Congressional library undertakes to preserve the essential printed records of the ages; there is no reason, as Senator Walsh says, why the preservation of films "should be left to the hapless storage of commercial companies." While films will not last indefinitely, their durability, with proper care, is sufficient to justify preservation of the most important pictorial records. As a preliminary condition, the government should make better provision for the protection of its archives.

IDaho Falls Talks Dam

The American Falls dam will be built. The railroad will be built from Twin Falls south giving that section of the country a southern outlet. The greater Fort Hall reclamation project is to be constructed. Southwestern Idaho has already mapped out its plans for extention and sharing in the benefit that is to come to southern Idaho. Northern Idaho is forging ahead with its timber and mining interests at full capacity.

It is our move and the first step in that direction is the community meeting to be held here Wednesday morning, May 16.

At that time, according to program, representatives of the civic and commercial interests of the Upper Snake River valley are to meet in Idaho Falls and devise plans, ways and means to get community interests working in harmony in order that we too, the premier section of them all, may be able to take full advantage of the opportunity that is loudly knocking on the door. It is our move and we must make it and move fast.—Times-Register.

PERMANENCY THE REAL THING

While the American Falls dam is a long way from being built or even started, the fact that the bonds carried by such an overwhelming majority, is very encouraging, and should have tendency to stimulate business throughout this section.

The greatest benefit to come from the construction of this great project will come from a positive assurance of sufficient water for all irrigation projects now existing along the mighty Snake river. Even if not another foot of land is brought under cultivation, this assurance alone is of incalculable value. Temporarily the commencement of construction will mean a great deal to local projects, as a ready market will exist near at home for all that can be grown for both man and beast. This same condition will exist concerning the building of any new project.

It is not for these transitory benefits that the great dam will be erected, but for the permanent things which will follow its completion. And it is for the permanent benefits that the people privileged to vote at the election of last Saturday, cast their ballots.

It is to be hoped nothing will in any way interfere with completion of this tremendous undertaking—Rupert Pioneer Record.

GREAT QUANTITY OF SPAWN TAKEN FROM CEDAR CREEK FRIDAY

Fish. Commissioner George Isaacs much pleased; Ten Thousand Are Taken in Hatchery Near Pocatello; Man on the Job at Creek.

The Cedar creek and Spring creek are now running rather fast and the water is very muddy. It was noted last evening by George H. Isaacs, fish commissioner, who was here to get a second consignment to take of 5,000, 50 per cent arrived at Pocatello alive. This is a high per cent. The fatalities were mostly because of lack of ice.

Five thousand more were brought yesterday and as there was no
ice available, the hatchery men had to use the ice which was brought in by the Indians.
