QUESTION AND ANSWER BOX

Q. Dear Auntie Sue: Since you have been so kind and answered my first and second letters, I am going to attempt the third. So here goes: I have written a short story and a two-part play and I would like to send them to a magazine company that don't know how to publish. I should I send them to the editor, editor or not? How do I get a copyright of don't I? Please answer all my questions as soon as possible.—Mr. Myself and I.

A. Glad to help you again. I suggest that before sending me any way that you stop into the library and read "Practical Authorship and How to Sell a Story" by Ruess. This gives the correct way of sending a story. Also which sort of copyright you should obtain at the publisher. If you cannot send what you want from those, write me again and I'll be glad to do further service to you.

Q. Dear Auntie Sue: I read with great interest and surprise your explanation of the name "don't." I had often wondered where it had another for you. Where does the name "Gob" on the authors are thought to come from? I think you write Sue—M. K. Y.

A. The appellation "gob" is of Chinese derivation from the Chinese word meaning "bald." The word came into use when the fleet was in the Far East and has "stuck" ever since.

Q. To Mrs. W. Ruessing: Write to the following address and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope to get the information on copyright: Mr. A. Evans, Information Bureau, Washington, D. C.

W. I. will send the list of books at all my questions as soon as possible.—Mr. Myself and I.

POPING the Question in Switzerland. Swiss parents that a young woman told her parents that she was engaged to a certain young man, and that when he called at the house the parents offered him an old cheese. What would he do? In the Zermatt valley, Switzerland, that means consent. When they approve of the match, the parents offer the father a taste of their old cheese. JACK DAW IN CANDY LAND

Jack was very much pleased over the fancy parading of his little friends, the Jelly Beans. And when he told them he was going to leave them they said they would do more tricks. This time they turned into a stretch line that spotted Pips. Then they did Jack ready and marched away. "Shall we follow the Jelly Beans or shall we go over to Sugar Forest?" shouted a tiny little voice. Jack looked around and said, "Who asked me that?" "Here I am," answered the little voice. And looking down Jack saw a funny little square camp. "I'm a piece of milk," said this sweetmeat.
