CRIMINAL COURTROOM, Chicago, July 25

Clarence Darrow, chief defense counsel for Nathan Leopold,

Robert Franks, has definitely decided to make a bid for the imprisonment for the defendant. Darrow has abandoned hope for anything less than confinement for life. But he will fight just as desperately to keep the millionaire youths from the insane asylum as he is fighting to save them from the rope. Darrow told the United Press that he has cast legal jurisdiction to the winds; his sole aim is to show the youth were not wholly responsible for their crime.

"I want the court—and people to believe we were sincere in entering a plea of guilty," Darrow said. "There is no trick about it. Everywhere there has been an idea that because these prisoners are rich that legal trickery would be resorted to to save the boys from punishment."

"Well, our cards on the table. We shall attempt to show the boys were not in entire possession of their minds for some time before, during, and after the crime was committed. We do not want them to hang. We do not want them to be placed in an insane asylum."

"We want them to be sent to the state penitentiary where they will have a chance to recover their abnormal minds."

"These boys are too young to hang; they are only 19, barely more than children; it would be without precedent to hang such youngsters after they pleaded guilty."

George Will Dharwad, State's Attorney Crowe, however, is determined to fight to the last for the outrageous penalty. He has argued matter repeatedly that the boys' maintenance nothing less than banking. For this reason he has refused the defense suggestion to dispense with questioning witnesses to build up his murder case.

Crowe will force many more links in the chain of proof of murder. And with his witnesses disposed of, he still has the confessions of the youths to read. Crowe plans to describe certain phrases of the confessions, at least in part as the public is concerned. He said he would have the confessions and papers read those excerpts in private. One of the excerpts dealt with "a certain pathological incident between the boys."

Crowe holds the public reading of these excerpts would not aid the prosecution's case in any way and on the other hand, might cause unnecessary pain to the already hapless parents of the defendants.

Leopold and Loeb laughed silently when George Lewis, Chicago university student, told how Leopold lost several pieces of a rare steel and missed. The incident occurred the Sunday preceding the murder, when Lewis and Leopold were pursuing their ornithology studies near the spot where the body of Robert was crammed into the railroad car. Lewis described Leopold as a close and successful student of ornithology. Leopold took his class of students, including little boys and girls, to this scene of the finding of the body on many occasions, the witness testified. Lewis said that Leopold was scheduled to take a class to the same spot the day after the murder but asked Lewis to take charge of it.

Lewis was asked whether he had two pairs of glasses and he replied he had only one pair. The prosecution is trying to show that Leopold had attempted to show the incriminating spectacles found on the scene belonged to Lewis.

Captain Thomas Wolfe told of the investigation following the finding of the glasses.

A Super-Clay

Brought me beauty and perennial youth

My Thing Wallace Hopper

I look back on a glorious career. First, as a famous beauty. Then for 25 years a stage star, and now at a grandmother's age, beauty is still my friend.

I owe all that I am to a beauty clay. It has given me a complexion that is the envy of all. It has given me a skin that is as soft as a baby's. It has given me a face that is as young as a girl's. It has given me a beauty that is as permanent as the stars.

It is a beauty clay that is as soft as a baby's. It is a beauty clay that is as young as a girl's. It is a beauty clay that is as permanent as the stars.

It is a beauty clay that is as soft as a baby's. It is a beauty clay that is as young as a girl's. It is a beauty clay that is as permanent as the stars.

My White Youth Clay

Old days were crude and muddy. Miss Wallace Hopper and family. I have found that mine bring multiplied results, but better the old type than none.

The magical effects.

My white Youth Clay purifies the skin of all that claps or marks it. It draws out the impurities of black heads and blemishes. It brings the blood to the skin and nourishes it. The result is a pure, clear, and healthy skin.

It is a beauty clay that is as soft as a baby's. It is a beauty clay that is as young as a girl's. It is a beauty clay that is as permanent as the stars.

S.S.S. stops Rheumatism

"My Rheumatism all gone."

When I feel a wonderful relief again in the free motion I used to have, I thank S.S.S. for it. I can't close my eyes and think of my rheumatism and pain. I thank S.S.S. for it. I can't close my eyes and think of my rheumatism and pain.

SATISFIED WITH BOTH

The clipping of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and General Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church issued from 110 Maryland Avenue N. W., Washington, D. C., in its number of July 19, just received today says in the headings of a long article on the temperance and republican conventions: "Wets utterly routed at both party conventions; candidates and platforms constitute a bitter pill for prohibitionists to swallow in November."

THE POWER COMPANY MOVES

The Idaho Power company made a clever move, legally speaking, when, Friday afternoon, it filed in the federal district court a complaint asking a review of rate valuation on the theory that the present valuation is $1,000,000 too low, that the rates now in force and purporting to be based on such valuation, are also too low and that relief should be given from certain alleged non-compensatory rates, like those for heating and irrigation power.

Entrance into the federal court will provide means for delay through appeals from one court to another. Had the matter been heard on petition for rehearing before the public utilities commission and appeal taken to the state supreme court, a ruling might have been received much more quickly, though of course, even in that case the matter could be taken to the federal courts.

A possible danger in this case will lie in the impression which may get abroad that since Attorney General A. H. Connor is made joint defendant with the commission; the duties of the Southern Idaho Light & Power Users' association will be at an end.—If such idea should prevail to the extent that the association should withdraw Captain Everett M. Sweeley and Attorney C. S. Hunter from the case, it would doubtless mean victory for the company. The attorney general is not a man of unusual legal attainments even in the lines of practice in which he is most proficient. He is not a specialist in the matter connected with the power hearing, and he has too much to do in performing the ordinary duties of his office to devote much time to the defense of this case. The federal courts are undoubtedly unbiased in the matter, but judges cannot be entirely free from parties, or, as private investigators, practically witnesses. They must decide cases on issues presented to them. Unless valid testimony is given and the arguments to sustain contentions put before them they have no means of getting them. For that reason it is imperative that legal talent proficient in the line in litigation should be obtained.

The possibility of long litigation will probably once more arouse interest the subject of municipal ownership and the necessity for the formation of gas companies and competing concerns.

HOW ABOUT JEFFERSON AND LINCOLN?
 (BY JAMES D. WHELAN)

The criticism levelled at John W. Davis resolves itself into the implication that because he had, for a short time, wealthy clients and that his firm has represented great corporate interests, he is necessarily affected by such employment and will as president allow the interests and privileges of these powerful concerns to take precedence over the rights of the people. The same argument was used against McAdoo, who accepted a retainer from oil interests in an effort to further policies backed by the Wilson, the Harding and the Coolidge administrations in Mexico. Both McAdoo and Davis have progressive public records, both retired comparatively poor from the service of their country and accepted employment, the legality and legitimacy of which nobody denies.

If the attorney always sells himself to his client personally, politically and for life and is irrevocably bound as a slave not merely of the individual represented but of all in a similar class, then we must revise our conceptions of Jefferson and Lincoln. Jefferson, a Virginia aristocrat by birth and association, took up the practice of law at a period when, to use the words of James Schouler, the great historian, "tangled titles and inheritances, and imprudent liabilities besides, made the gentry of that day a choice vantage among professional clients." He practiced sedulously at first among rich fellow counsel, for he needed the income. Most of the gentry at that time have spoiled Jefferson's sympathy, but that does not seem to

In her summary of the legal attainments of her subject, Ida M. Tarbell, the warmest of all the admirers of the famous Civil war president, points with pride to the fact that Abraham Lincoln was able to represent vast railroad corporations. In her "Life of Lincoln," Volume I, page 278, she says: "The few cases briefly outlined show something of the range of Lincoln's legal work. They show that not only his friends like Hannah Armstrong believed in his power with a jury, but that great corporations like the Illinois Central railroad were willing to trust their affairs in his hands."
