Burn Destroyed by Fire.

US REAR SERVICE PHOTO

Wanted: Another Army

The great fire raging in no less than 20 areas in California and Oregon are a mighty object lesson of human stupidity.
We need at some points, federal rangers are conscripting youths and old-timers, in order to save towns. The necessity for it is a demonstration of governmental folly, national helplessness.
Uncle Sam keeps a standing army that is merely standing. The nation's great expense, support militia of one sort or another, and here they are, a puny organization of fire-fighters. Every one of the uniformed men should be a fire-fighter, when the fire strikes. Instead of turning a few squads of rangers and conscripted youth state and national fire-fighters at these forest conflagrations, these should be the organizations of men especially equipped for fire-fighting, and subject to instant call and service.
A few well-mouthed disease preachers had for centuries and have. The federal government sends an adequate force of rangers, well equipped and trained, but to do so and the rangers are as good as dead. But, when, annually, it breaks out that threatening clouds of fire, a few rangers and a more than a hundred times the value of all the state fire-fighters that could be conscripted, in order to do a few rangers and let the fire burn.
The first question with California, Oregon, Texas, there is no more than 2000 men as dry as the present one and it means a catastrophe to tens of thousands of ranchers and agriculturalists and injury and starvation to the vast majority of them—and there is no doubt as to the extent of devastation of the land upon the result. Yet, right now, here, the fastest growing crop and the most valuable of them, the fruit supply, is being destroyed. Good food, good clothing, good shelter would be abundant if only the present fire-fighters could be conscripted with the fire-fighters with the harvesting of all the water possible, it is no more than to save the nation's disappearing supply of lumber.
It is within the power of the law to immediately train an army of 200,000 men for fire-fighting and to have them ready to go at any moment.

Allen Crowd in Harbor to Get In HAVANA, Cuba, July 26.—Waiting parties were waiting in the harbor to get in.

Throng of those whom Uncle Sam designates as undesirable aliens, crowded the harbor, waiting for the arrival of the poorer quarter of Havana.
They are waiting their turn to demonstrate the immigration barrier that has been erected around the United States.
From every land and clime they come.
Sambardians Syrians and Armenians had shoulders with bearded Russians of the frozen north.
Slant-eyed orientals, their stolid yellow faces unresponsive, watch the violent gesticulations of the fiery ones of Italy.
And although they are all different from each other as day is from night, each breath is dominated by the one desire—to reach the land that is the land of opportunity.
Each one waits for the summons that is to bring to him the fulfillment of his dream.
Back behind it all is an organization—a vast sinister thing—that feeds itself upon the heart-burnings of the miscasts of the world.
An organization that has its agents in every port in Europe.
Those representatives may be found in far-off Avila, Hamburg, Marseille, Naples, Constantinople, Barcelona, Hongkong, and other ports know them.
To those barred from America by the quota laws, they make their appeal.
From 10,000 francs (about $200) they offer to put them ashore in the United States.
The aliens are brought ashore to Havana.
There they are put in the slums, surrounded on every side by the underworld and the rapacious hunters, who soon rob them of the few pennies that they may have left.
Many are compelled to go out into the streets, peddling small articles from pushcarts, in order to make a living while waiting for their "Great Day."

ALIENISTS TO PROVE KILLERS

but save up the idea for fear of being without someone to share the thrill.
Leopold imitates.
"Then about the report Leopold is pleased, as the lawless and follower of Loeb, less daring and showing something of a distaste for their adventures in crime.
On the other hand Loeb is plicated as the supreme criminal, showing no remorse, driven on by the urge for a thrill, excitement, adventure.
When discussing the Frank's murder, Loeb is quoted as saying he shared excitement from the adventure while Leopold was inclined to be horrified by the sight of the blood flowing from Robert's head. Loeb said he laughed and joked Leopold out of the mood. At one time they discussed assassinating the boy each pulling on the rope so that the guilt would be equal.
The report touches on the sex life of the boys and shows a form of perversion.
In commenting on the report, Darrow said to the United Press: "This report is an the physical makeup of the boys, intended for me by one alienist for further investigation. Whether we shall use it, it remains to be seen."

The "Hirsh Horn," celebrated in a Welsh poem of the twelfth century by Iwan, prince of Powys, was "a grating horn, long, low and silver-rimmed," from which ocean drank his chiefs with a song.

No Room for Jealousy

"Aren't there some jealousies in your progressive circle club?" "No, indeed," answered the young Mrs. Torkles, "there are no jealousies, but always careful to select things that no one really wants, so that the winner will not be an object of envy."—Washington Star.

winners are quarrelled, and those who have been separated from their last case, are loaded into the cars, five or six to each.
Quickly under the cover of darkness they are whisked to one of his schools, of which he has more than a dozen scattered in the surrounding liquor and bootlegging.
There they are placed on board to huddle on the deck for the run to the coast of the promised land, where they are dumped ashore at night.
Then they are smuggled in other autos to some inland town whence they are shipped to their friends, if they are so lucky as to have any.
The other, less fortunate, are fangled out as poor labor, by the agents of the organization.
The profits of the smuggling game run about $150 a head.
