FRENCH ARE DIVIDED ON SECURITIES

Herriot and His Minister of War Diverge Bay France of Paris; Each Over-Week-End in Manifest; Germany Worried Over Transfer Problem.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Despite official denials the morning newspapers today were unanimous in their opinion that Premier Herriot from the London conference is due to divergences between the premier and General Nollet, his minister of war, regarding the security of France after adoption of the plan for evacuation of the Ruhr. Herriot, according to the newspapers, desires unconditional acceptance of the proposal of Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain that France and Belgium evacuate the Ruhr at once. General Nollet's acceptance of the above program as a basis of settlement of the reparations question.

Appeals to Cabinet

The cabinet is unwilling, however, to sign any agreement unless the entire cabinet approves him. Registration of General Nollet is foredoomed.

PROSPEROUS FALL-COMING

That the fall here will be prosperous and that many times will come to Twin Falls, was the opinion expressed in the Times interview yesterday with Secretary Charles P. Dwight of the chamber of commerce.

Similar views were expressed by a real estate man who said that not only are houses filling up but that people are buying residences. "We have been slow during the summer," he said, "because people feared that the water supply, the lowest in history, would be insufficient. When our crops are in next month and visitors see them, and when work begins on the new round-house and yards here, as I am informed that they will the whole country will go ahead. The railroad will be in operation into contact this year and that will mean a great boon to the city and country, and will furnish conclusive proof to doubters that we are going to have an outlet to the coast next year for all our products."

MOORE'S BLUNDER IN EXPRESSION

We learn that Governor Moore at Pocatello yesterday declared that he stood fairly, squarely and unconditionally behind President Coolidge in his plan to set aside a day for the instruction of citizens in their rights and to show the world that the American people stood ready at all times to defend their rights.

It is that last implication, containing a combination of bluster, hyperbole and nonsense, that gives offense here and abroad. No foreign nations is under any illusion about the readiness of our people to defend their rights.

It is true that in the campaign of 1916 when by a vote of 102 to 93, the republican minority in the lower house under Floor Leader Mann, had supported the McLenore resolutions which would have scuttled American rights on the high seas and when the pro-german press had lined up for Hughes to punish Wilson for standing up for American rights under international law, there were some anti-Americans who got the idea we would not defend ourselves. That error was soon dispelled. In justice to Hughes, while he did not repudiate the impression with sufficient emphasis at the time; he would have stood up for America had he been elected. The world realizes very thoroughly today that we will defend our rights. And now when we are seeking to bring about international peace, we only alarm the masses abroad by talking mobilization; saying to others as in substance Governor Moore does, "we want to show you birds that we will defend ourselves." When the most ignorant know that we always did so, the word "defend" has a tendency to make one the sinister meaning that it has had abroad under old monarchial regimes.

The opposition to the exercises next month has grown so much out of the movement itself, which is not without commendable features, as out of the bombastic language and faulty diction of swashbucklers who have sought to call attention to themselves, more than to a movement for a test in coordination.

SECRET REBATES LIKELY DESPITE NEW TAX LAW

(By CHARLES P. STEWART, National Editorial Service Writer.) Congress aimed at publicity when it passed the next tax law. According to national lawmakers who were influential in getting the law through, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has taken steps already to set it at naught.

The law provides a board of appeals to handle tax disputes. Its proceedings are to be public. The avowed object of the publicity was to prevent secret rebates in influential taxpayers.

Previously, not only were such rebates made secret, but to give out any information concerning them was an offense punishable by a prison term.

The treasury department is organizing the new board, and at the same time it has received an absolute board, rounded off the division of tax review, and announces that this latter board will hear all tax appeal cases before they go to the new body.

They will not reach the latter at all except upon appeal. If the claimants get what they want from the division of tax review, naturally they will not appeal.

Only those cases will be appealed which the tax review division has turned down. The treasury department will not mind this.

The tax review division's proceedings will be secret, but have before.

"It's just an evasion of the new tax law," says Senator King of Utah.

"It's a subterfuge for continuing the old secret methods," agrees Senator Jones of New Mexico.

Both were supporters of the new law. Not many of the congressmen who did support it are in town, but when congress meets in December it is certain the democratic and progressives combined will call Secretary Mellon and Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair to account.

Income taxes principally are involved. Mellon and Blair have opposed publicly and outspokenly all along.

OUT OUR WAY—By Williams

Through the... the law is being defied, experienced politicians are of opinion that the treasury officials know their ground so well they are most likely to take any action leaving them open to legal attack.

DR. FREDERICK R. OWEN Letter of HEALTH

WHEN Nebuchadnezzar carried the Jews away captive to Babylon, he told his court chamberlains to select "young men of royal blood, handsome and without blemish," to serve in his court.

Daniel, Shadrach, Meshack and Abednego were selected and put in a school for couriers, along with a lot of young Babylonians.

That they might have the best of food the king commanded that they be fed from his own table.

But Daniel and his companions refused the rich foods and demanded that they be fed "pulse and water."

When their training was complete the chamberlains found that the young captives were "more comely and of better appearance" than their Babylonian companions.

Why? It has taken us three thousand years to find out.

Daniel and his three friends ate plain, fresh food. The Babylonians ate heavily spiced and richly seasoned diets.

We know now that the human body must have a certain amount of fresh, living food and methods preserving food were limited, sailors kept too long on their voyages their food became rancid and staled.

The food was good enough, but there was no living matter in it.

As soon as the sailors got home, lemons, oranges, bananas, apples, cranberries, and the berries disappeared.

Recent experiments show that animals given a proper amount of green food are longer lived and better developed than those deprived of such food, no matter how abundant their diet.

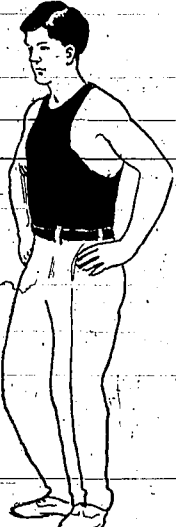

The substances in your food, most necessary for health and growth are called vitamins. From the Latin word vita, meaning life, and amines, which developed then were deprived of such food.

So the agedness of the human race and the latest scientific research agree that the human body must have fresh living matter in its food.

It is to be strong and healthy, cabbage, lettuce, celery, radishes, corn, apples, oranges, grapes, berries and other fresh foods should form a regular part of our daily diet.

Attend Concerts to Digest Dinner.

An English orator, W. J. Turner, has written that "most students go to the concert hall on the theater, more or less flustered with food and drink." He points out that every athlete knows it is impossible to do good work after a heavy meal, and that people can scarcely expect to be able to listen well with music if they are not fit to grapple with what is set before them. Large numbers of patrons of symphony programs, he avers, sit through them in a state of torpid somnolence, unable to make but signaling their dinners to orchestral accompaniment.

Many of our tools were in common use among savages many centuries ago. As they are now, we can design no better craft to find the "axe" in which the South Sea Islander dug within the New Guinea land day at a speed which would leave an American's eye-patch far behind. In Korea and South America, they were also used to bridge hundreds of years before Thomas Edison discovered his invention over the Menlo Park. Nor must we forget, in our tribute to the savage, that the same tool was used as a representative of sin by the native East African long before Jesus was crucified; or that the mechanism of the Tumbaco reported several years ago for cartons more than three centuries ago, when such an operation was never dreamed of in this country.
