Storms Brewing in the Monster's Path Cause Some Concern but ZR-3 Is Expected to Weather Gale and Alight in Lakehurst, N. J., Tomorrow.

Her wireless cracking out cheering messages that all aboard are well, at least three of her four motors roaring rhythmically and speeding her toward her goal, the Zeppelin ZR-3 of four Americans and 28 German officers, met men was drawing near to the United States tonight.

MUSCLE SHOALS PROPOSITION TO BE PUSHED NOW

Alabama Company Intends to Press Its Proposal Since Henry Ford Has Withdrawn His Bid.

HIMMELHARDT, Ala., Oct. 14.—With Henry Ford's bid for Muscle Shoals out of the way, the Alabama Power company will continue to "push" its proposal for the development of the Muscle Shoals power plant.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Henry Ford has withdrawn his bid for Muscle Shoals and will develop his own power project in the south.

Muscle Shoals is no longer a live issue with "Ford" said in an interview with "Collier's Weekly," made public today.

"I have, three years ago, written the book on the subject. No definite action has been taken on it since the day of the third day of the month of August, 1921."

"A simple affair of business which should have been decided by anyone within a week has become a complicated political affair. We do not intend to be drawn into politics."

"We have made our bid," the manufacturer said when asked if he has withdrawn absolutely from Muscle Shoals. "and everything that pertains to it, now let them make up their minds. They will not have to wait three years."

Giant Zeppelin May Be Used to Fly Over Arctic

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14.—The dazzling dream of being the first to fly over the North Pole will be realized by the United States navy with the Zeppelin ZR-3, according to the Secretary of the Navy, William D. Mitchell, today.

The flight will be started next spring provided the president, congress and congress provides the money, Mitchell said.

No longer restrained by the argument that the navy cannot afford to fly the only ship in the world, ZR-3 and the Shenandoah, it has two the navy has taken out of the pigeon-hole plans of the general staff.

Willbur will be the question before the president for approval.

Some such sort of expedition was planned by Willbur to the north with the ZR-3 to practical use. Under the terms of the Venetian treaty, the dirigible was to be used for military purposes and this restriction is to experimentation of training.

BRUIJNS MEET OAKLEY TEAM IN NEXT GAME

Locals to Travel Friday for Tilt With Oakley; Bruin Teamwork is Improving Steadily; Albion Springs Surprise.

Friday of this week the Twin Falls high school Bruins will journey to Oakley to tangle with the Oakley team. After a good workout with the Albion Normal last Saturday the locals are ready to resume play against high school teams and are looking forward to the coming week.

Albion Normal is expected to have a soft-time at Albion, but the Bruins have fought hard and have won a victory at Albion. The Bruins have probably will start in the backfield Friday and they are a nice band to draw to. Albion Normal is expected to work their end runs and cover backs well. The latter will give Albion and smash.

SALMON FALLS PLANT HAS BIG ALLEGED VALUE

Power Company (Claims $2,100 Valuation in Plea Before Hillbillies Commission, but Protests that Improvements Are Worthless as They Asked to Pay Taxes on Same.

Whether the Idaho Power Company will appeal to the board of equalization in December to have its valuation at $2,100 on the "structure" at upper Salmon Falls stricken from the records or not may depend upon the action of the public utilities commission in allowing its "improvements" there to be held as assets for the purpose of collecting extra charges from consumers. In the opinion of folk here a number of years ago, the power company acquired from another company the site in question, on Salmon Falls creek, but making was done beyond certain construction work already reported that this had been entered on its books as assets.

Report that this had been entered on its books as assets by the company before the utilities commission in the estimate of value, caused investigation. His year by Alexander S. Labor always has been and will be the victim of excessive tariff rates. Congressional lobbyists in the interests of some private, profitable protection will be the cause of the tariff. "THE SEA HAWK"
 by RAFAEL BABATINI

That was the beginning of a friendship between Sir Oliver and this man, whose name was Yusuf-Moktar. The Mokhtar concluded that in Sir Oliver he saw one upon whom the grace of Allah had descended. One who was ripe to receive the Prophet's message. Yusuf devoutly believed and applied himself to the conversion of his fellow-slave. Sir Oliver listened to him, however, with indifference. Having discarded one creed, he would need a deal of talking on the score of another before he would be adapted to it. It seemed to him that all the glorious things urged upon Yusuf in praise of Islam he had heard before in prison at Constantinople. He kept his counsel on that score, and meanwhile his intercourse with Yusuf, by dint of the effect of teaching him the Islamic faith, so that at the end of six months he found himself speaking in the manner of a Mauretanian with all the Mokhtar's mannerisms and with none of the ordinary associations of Arabic.

It was toward the end of that same month that the day came which was to restore Sir Oliver to liberty. In the meanwhile those things which had ever been his weakness beyond the common word had acquired an elephantine strength. It was ever thus that the sufferer first dies under the strain, or was torn and shreds away to be equal to their relatives and he, Sir Oliver, was no exception. As months became a man of steel and iron, impervious to fatigue, unimpressionable to pain and endurance. They were returning home from a trip to Genoa when one evening he was seated at a dinner table with the hotel-keeper and was surprised by a fleet of four Molesian galleys which came within a few paces of the ship and engaged them.

Aboard the Spanish vessel there were a number of Molesian soldiers. The name of the most reliable Molesian corsair since the Italian conquest of the island of Dacia who had been killed at Lepanto. Trumpets blared and drums sounded and the Molesians in motion and armor, armed with calivers and pikes, stood to defend their lives and liberty. The galleys were set to anchor, and just as the cannons about was fired toward the grapples of the Spanish vessel, the Molesians struck the Spanish bark.

The shock of the impact was terrific. The armor of the Molesian galley—Aasad-Din's own—smote the Spanish a slanting blow, which penetrated the plating of the hull as if they had been so many withered twigs.

There was a shriek from the Molesians, for they were struck in such pitiful manner as the damned in hell may emit. Fully two score of them had been struck by the shots of their own ships. Some had been buried under the plating of their own ships, some with broken bodies, others with shattered limbs and others with broken hearts.

Sir Oliver would assuredly have been of these but for the warning advice, an example of which was well versed in calley tactics and who foresaw clearly what must happen. He thrust the car upward and forward, but as it was so close, compelling the others at his back to accompany his movement. Then he slipped down upon his knees, raised his hand to his forehead and crouched down until his shoulders were on a level with the beach.

It had occurred to Sir Oliver to follow his example, and Sir Oliver's name—knowing what opportunity he should stand, but attaching its importance from the other's urgency of tone, promptly obeyed. The car was struck by a slanting shot, and it snapped off its axle and, breaking one of the large ribs of the hull, mortally injuring the others, but passing clear over the heads of Sir Oliver and Yusuf. A moment later the bodies of the corsair of the beach immediately in front were knocked up from them, with yells and curses.

When Sir Oliver staggered to his feet he found the battle joined. The Spaniards had fired a volley from their calivers and a dense cloud of smoke hung above the bulwarks. Through the smoke he saw a corsair, led by a tall, lean, elderly man with a flowing white beard and a stern, eagle face. A crescent on his turban indicated that he was a Moor.

He raised his right hand to his forehead, above it rose the crescent of a Molesian, and his body was cast in chain mail. He swung a great scimitar before which the Spaniards drew down like the scythe before the wind. He fought like a lion, man, and to support him poured a never-ending stream of Molesians to the front.

"Din! Allah, Allah!"

Back and yet back went the Spaniards before that irresistible onslaught.

ALWAYS VOTES

Mrs. W. H. Kavanagh, of Pocatello, believed to be the oldest woman who is eligible will be at the polls in November to cast her ballot for a president. Since given the right to vote Mrs. Kavanagh has cast her ballot at every election. She was born in Tridale county, Ky., May 1, 1824.

Held as Slayer

Lawrence M. Hight of Jns. Hill, has confessed to the murders of his wife and Wilford Swelin, a member of his congregation, according to authorities at Jns. Vernon. The second trial of Hight, who is blamed by officials. The minister confided he planned both while they were ill and to other relatives.

Corn, Potatoes, Broken Arches, etc., at the Idaho Oil Refining Co., 1000 N. Woodville. The plan involves the erection of a single boiler in the vicinity of the vicinity of Green Hill, Idaho.

Secretary Jeter of the state department wants the license law in regard to trucks rewritten. Jeter need not have gone to all that trouble had he not so often defined the law himself. Early last year he defined the meaning of the word "truck" for the assessors and after they had collected licenses under this constitution, he changed his mind and claimed that more was due. More, or included in the assessors going out on the highways and by-ways and making a decision, which got his friend, Attorney General Conner, to hand down a decision, which sustained the last definition. Still, it would be a lot safer to elect a new secretary of state and attorney general so that they may feel sure that their definitions will "stay put." Jeter might indulge in minor speculation on a second state.

"Gypsy's Warning" is a regular Polyanthia, ditty compared with the things that republicans are forecasting for democratic candidates, and the progressives are very little behind. The republicans said that Davis would be a bad third in the nation, and that LaFollette would lead five to one over him, while a progressive said that the only states Davis would carry would be Mississippi and Virginia. The experts do not so figure. The straw vote is admittedly untrue. It is pointed out by impartial observers that in 1912 Roosevelt led Wilson and Taft together on the straw vote, and that Wilson was a poor third. Yet Wilson got 435 electoral votes; Roosevelt, 88, and Taft, 8. The situation was similar to that now existing. Roosevelt, like LaFollette, had the heat and enthusiasm, which always accompanies a new movement, for if there were neither heat nor enthusiasm there would be no new movement, and besides he had a fine organization. Taft, like Coolidge, had the regular organization of the republican party which always gets out a big straw vote. Wilson, like Davis, had only the relatively unorganized democrats, representing the plain people. The democrats will win in the nation and in the state this fall.

BORAH, SAMUELS AND THE COURTS

(By JAMES D. WHELAN.)

Two proposals for straitjacketing the supreme court have recently been made by two senators of the United States," said Thomas J. Norton, of the Chicago bar, in the American Bar Association Journal for July, 1923. "One is that a bill passed by congress (which is powerless to renege its co-equal creator of the constitution) forbidding the court longer to hold an act of congress unconstitutional by a majority vote (5 to 4) and requiring that at least seven of the nine justices in the holding, which would, of course, lose the minority over the majority."

This is interesting not only because the author did not fail to point out the fault, that power thus to regulate the coordinate branch of government implied power to deny the right entirely, but, and principally, because the senator who introduced the bill February 5, 1923, thus to limit the power of the supreme court, was none other than Senator William E. Borah, who made a powerful plea in favor of upholding the power of the courts to the utmost in Idaho Falls last week, just about a year and a half after he introduced the measure which, if effective, would have shorn them of all of practically all power and influence. While the writer is neurotic to the last stand of Borah, then to the stand of LaFollette, or to that of Borah's stand in 1923, yet the sudden conversion of the senator is a matter of surprise to many. Reversion is the better word, perhaps, since Senator Borah points out in his Idaho Falls address that he held similar views to his present ones, away back in 1912 when he supported Taft against Roosevelt. In the meantime this latest announcement, which is the most powerful argument yet made in Idaho against LaFollette, leaves the progressive silent and helpless. Under the leadership of Samuels and McKaig, they were anti-Lafollette, but now the nomination, which he now rejects with thanks and almost without a dissent, which Borah could have secured the nomination for Borah had he redefined his position, on the courts earlier in a field far unpropitious, speculation. Certainly, their organs cannot repudiate him now without seeming ridiculous. Thus there has come to pass that with which the writer warned the progressives for six long years. The republican committee announces that it will send the speech broadcast over Idaho.

The Borah seven to two bill would have been held unconstitutional if it passed. The progressives make a demand on sweeping that it is dangerous.

Congress has power to limit the jurisdiction of inferior courts, which are its own creatures and under its power. It may limit the supreme court, where the latter seeks to usurp power, and a modified constitutional amendment which would, under the balance lost by continuous judicial encroachment, be more accurate definition and by providing a well guarded possible recall in five to four decisions, are all advisable. But this is drifting away from the main point which is that the senator senator from Idaho has the progressive party just where he wants it and that he felt quite safe in firmly if softly, breaking the news to it in Idaho Falls in its cloistered plen for Coolidge.

GREATEST GAS FLOW IN THE WEST LOCATED

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 14.—One among the greatest gas flows so far discovered in the west was encountered yesterday by the Utah Oil Refining company in its test well about two miles northwest of Glendale. The flow is estimated by Ed Stewart, field superintendent at ninety million cubic feet a day. The pressure at the well is well in excess of 1,000 psi. The gas is estimated to be anywhere from 800 to 1,200 pounds per cubic foot. It is in telephone contact with the local office of the company yesterday afternoon Stewart declared it was the largest gas flow he had seen west of the Mississippi river.

"Without warning the drill crashed into the big sand yesterday morning at a depth of 1,560 feet. The flow was so great that the rig had to be raised from the hole and the rig was lowered into the hole at a depth of 1,560 feet. The well is now being pumped and is producing a gas flow of about eight million cubic feet a day. The gas is estimated to be in the neighborhood of the Salt Lake City and is being used for the production of oil and gas." Stewart said.

THIS WOMAN'S MARVELLOUS RECOVERY

All Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Truman, Minn.—"I was badly run-down, had lost my appetite, and sometimes I could hardly move around my room. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it a few days I began to feel better. I am now in good health and my appetite is as good as ever. I can now do all my usual work and feel like a new woman."
 Mrs. Anna J. Truman, R. No. 2, Box 84, Truman, Minn.
 Women suffering from troubles common to their sex should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.
 The Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has relieved women of such troubles for so long that they have rarely by drugs and poisons.
