

GERARD TAKES THE STANFORD SENATE PROBE

Treasurer of Democratic Committee Presents a Statement of Campaign Finances - Before - Slush Fund Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—James W. Gerard, treasurer of the democratic national committee, took the stand today when the senate committee resumed investigation of Senator La Follette's "slush fund" charges. Gerard presented a statement of democratic finances, brought up a total of $58,449.02 which had been contributed to the La Follette campaign.

Gerard said that he had no three percent collection, but some reports indicated would be raised by the democrats. "I had assumed," he said, "that we would accept it," he said. "But I believe that $750,000 is an excessive amount for the campaign."

DAVIS REBUKES NATION'S CHIEF

Coolidge is Criticized for Failure to Act on Sugar Rates.

WITH SENATOR EN ROUTE TO LOUISVILLE, Oct. 21.—Morning through southern Kentucky in the final stage of his campaign, John W. Davis today severely rebuked President Coolidge for his failure to act on the sugar rates in his 1 1/2 typical manner.

COOLIDGE IS CRITICIZED FOR FAILURE TO ACT ON SUGAR RATES.

CONCLUDING AN ARGUMENT that the chief executive must have lowered the cost of sugar to the public by ordering a lower tariff on imports, the democratic nominee added: "While yours to me as if there was something about a presidential election that had a peculiarly objectionable effect upon the judicial process."

COOLIDGE IS CRITICIZED FOR FAILURE TO ACT ON SUGAR RATES.

DAVIS pointed out that 18 months ago the tariff commission proceeded to a study of the sugar problem, and gave to Mr. Coolidge. Now the word has come to him, he said, that the chairman of the tariff commission had called upon the president to furnish more information on the sugar problem.

BAN JOHNSON TO FIGHT FOR CLEAN SPORT

American League President Promises to Do All in His Power to Keep Baseball Clean; Returns From Recent Vacation.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—After an absence and with very little to say, Ban Johnson, president of the American League, today was back from his vacation. The bonnie which he had at Camp Minto, near Landis, and John McGraw, manager of the world's series champion New York Yankees, had been the time being.

"I have nothing to say right now," Johnson said. "I hope may return home later." He pointed out that it took more than a year to bring out the details of the Sox scandal, and that he is going to take care of my.

Johnson admitted that he had no reasons to believe that "Ozzie" (Ozzie) and "Jimmy" (Jimmy) were "in" but that only clean players had been admitted to the game. He said it looked funny at the time and it was very strange that a player should be in without having it known to others.

Last winter Landis offered the right when Johnson was making it warm for him.

Landis is also remaining warm about the case. "It would not come upon a report that a Philadelphia pitcher had been called in to be investigated before the series.

If the commission had not published testimony that was taken when Erlich, Young and Kelly were called before him, there may be some interesting facts made known.

So far the public has been allowed only what it has to see for itself in the way of real information about the case.

Landis doesn't want to talk about Ban Johnson but it is quite obvious that he is thinking a hard nut and he is willing to do some more flouting.

There is no chance for Johnson to meet his threat to get Landis out only because the commissioner has a contract that runs for two more years but because he has the support of the entire National League and at least half of the American League.

MERCHANT TEAM SUFFERS DEFEAT

After an evening of exceptionally high class bowling the scores showed that the Citizen team had won all three games of the match, with the Alco Glass Shop five.

The Citizen team was in wonderful form, hitting 265 for the evening. The mark of 200 in the third game also topped the list.

In each of the three games the morticians bowled over 200, striking 259 in the concluding contest. The morticians banded the coveted 200 mark but once, that being registered in the initial ball.

GOODNIGHT TO PLAY BRUINS HERE FRIDAY

Friday of this week the Twin Falls High school basketball team will meet with the Gooding High school eleven here in one of the important games of the season.

The northwinds have an unusually strong team this year, making a good showing against the first place Bruins despite the fact that Gooding has the same players as last year.

Friday with the strong intention of putting the locals out of the race, after a good rest, during which the wounds of battle have been allowed to heal, both teams are fit and ready to face each other.

Gooding this year has a formidable array of players, being, starting from the front, each other, "Chummy" (Chummy) Henderson of U. S. C. is an overconfident and he feels that the evening battle will test the Bruins to the limit.

SCHOOLS GET MANY PUPILS IN EVERY DAY

There were at least 25 new enrollments yesterday in the various schools of this city, it was stated at the high school today.

For the first time since the results and eighth grades were taken into the high school, the enrollment in the Bickel school exceeded 100 and the number in this and other schools is augmented daily. The exact number of students and pupils was not available today.

This growth has taxed the capacity of the faculty and teachers' conferences are being held, whereby plans are devised to take care of the swelling attendance.

The growth has kept pace with the growth of the city. Housing are filling all over and the fine prospects for the future are being realized when the road show is finished by striking.

The crops have been much better than expected and the amount of cash that is coming in and will come in has proven attractive to people here in the last few weeks.

WEATHER OBSERVATIONS FROM BALLOON

A project for the investigation of the atmosphere by means of manned free balloons, unique in the annals of meteorology, is about to be undertaken by the United States weather bureau in cooperation with the United States army air service. A series of about 15 flights in free balloons, each flight starting from the army's station at Scott Field, Ill., near St. Louis, will be begun about April 1.

The weather bureau's representative on these flights will be Dr. C. LeRoy Meisinger of the central office at Washington. During his service as meteorologist in the signal corps during the world war, Doctor Meisinger received free-balloon training, and is a licensed pilot of this type of craft. Since the war he has been engaged in meteorological work of the weather bureau, particularly aeronautical meteorology, a phase of the weather bureau's work that is becoming increasingly important as aviation advances.

While several kinds of observations will be made from the balloon, such as the collection of dust samples at various elevations and the measurement of sky-brightness and visibility, the principal object of the flights is to obtain information relative to the path of air at high levels in the atmosphere, with respect to the ground. The balloon, moving subject to the wind, only becomes an index of the movement of the air at the same level, hence an accurate chart of the balloon's path is at once the path of the air in which the balloon is riding.

G. O. P. TARIFF ADVERTISEMENT AND PROSPERITY

Each democratic administration, following a republican administration has revised the tariff downward, which has been FOLLOWED by hard times and disaster for many industries. Republican Committee Advertisement.

The statement is incorrect and the inference even more strikingly so. There were great panics under republican administrations, and laws in 1873 and 1907, and smaller ones under republican laws and administrations in 1884, and in 1890. The great panic of 1893 began in May of that year, long before the democratic congress was called; months before the same congress took up the tariff question at all, and a year and a quarter before the passage of the Wilson-Torrey act, which was enacted in August, 1894.

The panic of 1890, which started when the republicans had control of every branch of government was the signal for the enactment into law of the great farm associations of that time, which laid the foundation for the organization of the populist party, universally known as a hard-time party.

This "hard-time" party pulled its greatest vote during the republican administration of President Harrison, when the McKinley law was in operation.

"I take it for granted that every member of this body knows that there is widespread agricultural distress in this country," said the head of the Farmer's Alliance in presenting a plea for the substituting plan before the republican agricultural committee in February, 1891. The election following the 1890 panic gave the democrats a "148 majority" over the republicans in the lower house, and elected a lot of alliance members, besides laying the foundation for the great Cleveland victory of 1892, and the casting of more than a million votes by the populists for Weaver.

How similar to present hard-time conditions in this country in the foregoing states! Congressman Addison T. Smith in a speech delivered in the house of representatives, May 20, 1924, correctly said:

"The prosperity of the manufacturers and lack of it in the farming section is proof that a rearrangement of our economic system exists. What logical or satisfactory answer can be made to the farmer who asks why he should pay greatly increased prices for agricultural implements, harness, shoes, and, in fact, everything that he and his family must buy, while his wheat has steadily declined from $2 a bushel to 70 cents, and during this time he must face a substantial increase of his taxes?"

What has gone up since in response to the world demand, but the general farming condition is as he describes it, and this is largely true because of the tariff legislation, and almost entirely due to this and other republican legislation.

SEA HAWK

By RAFAEL SABATINI

Of this she reminded Sir John on her return to Cornwall after an absence of some two years, writing three letters as routine way of an alliance between herself and Lionel Trevelian must be impossible. Sir John did not at all agree with her.

"My dear," he said, "there is your father to be thought of. You are one of full age and therefore of your own actions. Yet it is not well for a woman and a gentleman to dwell alone. As long as I live, or as long as I remain in England, you will be well. You may continue indefinitely your residence here at Arwenack, and you will be lonely, I think, in quitting the house of Godolphin Court. Yet considering that loneliness may be yours again when I am not here—"

"I should prefer that loneliness to the company you would thrust upon me," she answered him.

"Ungracious speech!" he protested. "In this your gratitude for my kind words is shown. For as to loneliness, had you not been married, it is the only alternative to the life of a spinster."

"Is this Oliver Trevelian's brother?" she asked.

"And has he not married enough for that already? Is there in his heart a woman who is not his wife?" she asked.

"Yes, too closely," he said. "You must have seen me well. I have just had no other husband."

"He was persistent, and his persistence was increased when he saw me," she said.

"The sea arid. His comeliness would not permit him to leave me, and he had no other way to escape. In a quiet, almost self-satisfied way, he had taken his seat upon her patience; and she was therefore the more difficult to equal."

"And she came away under the pressure of these men's wills, and did as with the best grace she could be expected to do."

"From her heart and mind the one great obstacle of which, for very long, she had made no mention to Sir John. The fact is that in spite of all, her love for Sir Oliver was not dead. It was stricken down, it is true, until she herself failed to recognize it for what it really was. But she caught herself blinking of him frequently, and for all that she had hidden Sir John had her some other husband than Lionel, she knew full well that any other husband before her must be submitted to that same comparison to his inevitable ending."

"She was so sure that she would well in herself. It was in vain that she loved her mind with the remembrance that she was married. As time went on she found herself actually making excuses for her sometime lover; she would admit that she had loved him to the death, that for her sake Sir John had suffered a loss upon insult from her heart, and for her sake the cup of his endurance had overflowed in the end, and weary of waiting for the other blow he had risen up in his anger and emitted in his own hand."

"She would even, however for such thoughts as these, yet she could not deny them. In yet she could be strong—as witness how she had dealt with that letter which Oliver sent her out of Barbary by the hand of Pitt—but her thoughts she could not control, and her thoughts were full of open traitors to her will. There were longings in her heart for the man who she had loved, and she would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and she would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and she would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him."

"Such thoughts bore a weakness in him; but he made a quiet remark every when his mind went on about the man who he had loved, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him."

"When he considered all that he had done for her, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him."

"First to Arwenack to Sir John and Hammond to compel them to give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him, and he would not give up the hope that she would one day return to him."

"He found the massive iron door of the gate locked, as he had been expected at that hour. He knocked, and presently the porter opened, and a lantern was advanced, and he saw that the lantern was dashed against the door."

"That done, they poured silently through the black gap of the porters into the spacious passage. On he led them, at a run almost, toward the tall partitioned windows of the house. He had a light toward himself, to be seen by the porter."

VAUDEVILLE IN GLORY

Vaudeville in its glory, consisting of novel songs, plenty of beautiful songs, lots of fast and snappy dances and no end of comedy will be seen at the Orpheum theatre tomorrow night.

A real treat are the Aerial Hawaiians presenting "Paradise in the Tropics," a serial novelty and tropical settings—something entirely different from other acts of this nature. Many difficult and daring feats are performed by these clever artists. Herber & Rose, a comedy pair, appear in a side-splitting act called "Gimme a Dime." There are plenty of laughs, singing and dancing. Queen Trio offers a novelty musical act in Original costumes. They are intricate and his costumes beautiful selections of weird and popular music. Leonard Kane, the dancing king, illustrates the mystery of motion in a manner that will charm and captivate an audience. His steps are intricate and his costumes beautiful. LaFerre & Potter, formerly with Hugging Brothers show, are all-around entertainers with tricycles, do everything but talk. Watch their funny antics and their dancing.

John Oliver appears in a powerful drama—"California, entitled, "Hawaii." His Trio offers a comedy and aerial music by the Orpheum orchestra completes a double show.

ELIZABETH MINTHROP. No company before the public stands the wear and tear of time as well as does the famous Gloria Swanson to appear in this city. In the hearts of the theatre-going public she is always popular. The brilliant "Gloria" has been copied by many other stars, but she has never been withdrawn from the American stage for a single season, and during the 22 years of her existence it has been kept up to a high standard and this year the management has adopted all previous efforts.

The announcement that they will appear at the Orpheum Theatre will be welcome news to the theatre-going public.

Telephone Company Has Better Service Meeting This Week

An up-to-date electric service campaign in which the Mountain States Telephone company is constantly directing its efforts, this week has been set aside as visitors' week and the first day a large number of callers were conducted through the local exchange by Manager Ralph W. Williams and saw the intricate details of the switchboard and the often undervalued centrals at work.

Everything proceeds in a very orderly and well regulated fashion in our exchange, the operator being constantly advised to keep the plates clean, speak quietly, etc. by placards placed on the switchboard, all of which makes for better service. In the Twin Falls exchange 11,167 local, 425 toll calls, 426 toll calls, 250 through-toll calls, and 40 repeated calls per day distances call for the current is bolstered up or reestablished to normal by devices known as repeaters, the parties being brought closer together by the additional power which is recoupled by a key on the line device switched, and provides amplification.

Each operator has the entire local switchboard under his hand and it is wise that a Chinese guard to the uninitiated, red white and yellow paint indicating change numbers, and phones, disconnected phones, etc. The company has announced that they intend placing an automatic system in Idaho, the choice of location being between Boise and Idaho Falls. The public is urged to get better acquainted with the finer work of its good friend, the telephone.

Joe-K Says: Some people are making a habit of picking up forgotten articles left in the theatre and taking away with them. If the lady who picked up the fur-sock piece last night will call at the theatre we will present her, with a fur cap to match.
