

TRAIN WRECK IN CALIFORNIA COSTS LIVES

Between Seven and Fifteen Persons Dead in Disaster at Oakland; Many Hurt; Scene Described by Passenger.

OAKLAND, Cal., Dec. 4.—Two electric trains, loaded with people crowded in San Francisco were wrecked here today with loss of life estimated at from seven to 15.

Approximately 30 others were reported severely injured.

Intense confusion followed the wreck which occurred on the Key route interurban system's Oakland "tunnel" west of Fortich and Hollis streets, Oakland.

Careful check of the dead accounted for seven known; many two of whom were identified.

The identified dead were: C. C. O'Laughlin, 25, San Francisco; F. J. Gibson, a machanic at the Goat island, Calif., Highlands; Two unidentified women, with heads crushed, are dead at the Oakland morgue.

Three others died at Oakland hospital during the morning.

It was believed that others of the injured will die and others were reported dead but in the confusion verification was impossible.

The trains were a Twelfth street key route train and a Sacramento flyer on the San Francisco-Sacramento short line.

"I was a passenger aboard the Twelfth street train of the Key route," W. Seaberg of the Western Electric company told the United Press. "Our train was on the Key route just about to run out on the tracks and a section of the pier. A train ahead of us was running more slowly and I felt the brakes applied to our train."

"A local to the San Francisco-Sacramento short line was running behind and to the right of the Twelfth street train. The front platform of the short line train hit the rear of our train above the floor level and it seemed to sweep right through the car, killing and injuring as it went.

"It was a terrible scene.

"Men leaped from the cars; women screamed and there was general confusion.

"Most of the injured were in the rear car of the Twelfth street train, I believe.

"Accurate count of the killed and injured was impossible two hours after the wreck had taken place.

President Tells Chicago Commercial Club That America's Well-Being Depends Upon Sympathetic Co-operation.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Without referring by name to the league of nations, the world court or any other form of international machinery, President Coolidge today made a straight-away appeal for sympathetic cooperation with other nations as the new firm foundation for this country's well-being.

"At the last, those of us who are partners in the supreme service of humanity being for above that of other people, said President Coolidge.

"We can no longer assume permanent and stable justice without cooperation among nations, and we cannot assure victory in war without alliance among them."

IS OPTIMISTIC OVER OUTLOOK

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Congress must act swiftly to reform the present, our taxing system on a sound basis or not a subject which will cause for our future, said Secretary of the Treasury Mellon today in his annual report to Congress today.

"It is clear that we must look carefully at the present state of existing taxes and to their economic stability if we are to have further tax reduction. In my opinion, it is not to be foreseen in less prospective tax increases," the treasury secretary declared.

"The attention of Congress should be directed principally to the excessive tariff rates and to the continuing sales tax rates. The gift tax is unworkable and unduly burdensome to business. The public health provision, in the revenue law, in my opinion, is a matter of judgment, but it will be detrimental to the revenue."

Mellon recommended that the maximum rate on the production of oil be 15 and 25 per cent, which, with a normal tax of six per cent, would make the maximum tax on oil between 21 and 31 per cent of the price at present. "What the exact ratio of maximum profit may be is a matter of judgment," he said.

"Tariff should not be used as a field for socialistic experiment, or as a club to punish success, but as a means of raising revenue to support the government. It has been the belief of the treasury and it is borne out by experience, that if taxes are too high, the source of revenue declines and the tax becomes less and less productive. It taxes are reduced, the source of revenue expands and the lower rate may be even more productive than the higher rate and the source of revenue assured for the future."

"The law now says to the man of large income: 'If you lose one year of income, you will pay 20 per cent of the loss; if you win, the law will take 50 per cent of your profit,'" he said.

"There are no other odds which encourage adventure in the production of iron ore, which will yield far more to the government. No man will continue to sow where he can not reap."

"We have then the blighting effect of excessive rates, which compel avoidance and destroy initiative, and by both means, diminish the returns from the upper brackets, from which the government has been taking a large part of its revenue."

"The nation must look to the foreign, as well as its domestic trade, for sources of revenue. The adoption of the Dawes plan presages industrial activities among our European competitors, and the new tariff schedule recently abroad we must be sure our taxation system does not put too heavy a handicap on our industry and trade."

Mellon attacked the economic philosophy of the "high tariff." "Our country has become the victim of taxation to the rich."

"The argument is made that the wealthy should pay substantially the whole burden of the tax. It is impossible for the government to live by taxing the wealthy alone."

"The wealthy should pay substantially the whole burden of the tax. It is impossible for the government to live by taxing the wealthy alone."

NEW GERMAN OIL SOLD UNDER WRITTEN GUARANTEE RUBS OUT RHEUMATISM

A remarkable new discovery of German Chemistry, called Bubler Oil, for the relief of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuritis, is now being sold in the medical world. This marvelous oil seems to kill rheumatic pain just as effectively as the other German pain killers—Sodium Chloride, Menthol and Aspirin for headache.

Bubler Oil when applied to the affected parts, seems to quickly penetrate and break up the body tissue. Even in the most severe and stubborn cases almost instant relief has been obtained.

No remarkable have the results from the use of Bubler Oil that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to incorporate it to rheumatic, gout and neuralgia sufferers in this city with a positive written guarantee to return the full purchase price of the FLES bottles if it does not bring wonderful relief. Dazzy Vance Selected As National League's Most Valued Player

BY HENRY L. FARRILL.
NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Selection of Dazzy Vance by the committee of club baseball writers named to pick the most valuable player in the National League was a flimsy honor as popular as the nomination of Walter Johnson for the same honor in the American League.

It is collateral and unusual that the two players selected for the best club in baseball ran out to be the best players in the National League. White Johnson's choice was unanimous, there was a lot of sentiment behind the honor, although no one will attempt to indicate that his honor was not earned on the field. Vance's nomination was not unanimous, but it was by a margin wide enough to make it convincing.

Vance deserved the honor because of his brilliant work in the box that brought a very early clean-up from an assigned position in the second-inning to second place in one of the latest dramatic races of 1921.

The first ten players turned in by the committee were Vance, 71 points; Rogers Hornsby, 62; Frank Frisch, 43; Zach Wheat, 40; Ross Young, 37; George Kelly, 34; Walter Marandino, 24; Lissen Fowler, 22; Jack Connelley, 21; and Eddie Hahn, 17.

The committee of writers, which made the selection was Fred Lieb, New York, chairman; Thomas Rice, Brooklyn; Jack Ryder, Cincinnati; Irving Vaught, Chicago; William Brandt, Philadelphia; Edward Hillebrand, Pittsburgh; and Sid Fowler, St. Louis.

From the voting of the committee it was possible to get what might possibly be the best qualified opinion on an all-National League team. The players who received the most votes for the various positions were:

It was interesting to note that Brooklyn got the most votes for seven players. New York got 115 votes for four players. Pittsburgh 72 votes for three players and St. Louis got 66 votes for two players.

The Hornsby-Frisch controversy which caused so much noise to be had last summer in New York and St. Louis, has been settled in favor of the St. Louis second baseman if the committee's vote is accepted as being the most competent available. Hornsby had a rather comfortable majority of 62 to 43 over the Giant second baseman.

It is quite possible that Frisch would have received more votes if he had not been injured and out of the game when the Giants were making their hardest fight for the National League pennant. The club did just

ALCO BOWLERS ARE VICTORIOUS

The Alco bowlers conquered the Golden Rule team in two of the three games of last night's match. The "The Unto Others" team copped the first game but dropped the next two. The Alco squad first took dominance during the match, the result of which is, therefore, surprising.

The bowler was the rule for the entire evening. Thompson was a heavy doing for honors with each game. Thompson had high score for an individual game, 182.

Alco	1	2	700
Dunnery	125	125	405
Dunnery	115	125	405
Thompson	182	125	193

Shawlow 159 118 119 436

Knefel 135 125 181 441

Totals 775 719 696 2490
Dunnery during first two games.

The Alco hardly could get along without Hornsby, who has been shown several times when he was on the bench that he was the biggest part of the team. Brooklyn might have been in the cellar if Dazzy Vance didn't win twenty-eight games for the club.

In the voting Vance received eight first places, one second and one third. Wheat and Hornsby were on seven; Marandino and Cuyler on five; Kelly on five and Young on four. Frisch got three first places and finished third.

This is the first year that the National League has presented a player voted the most valuable in its team in the American League.

It has been done 11, with success for three years. George Sizer was voted the most valuable player in the American League last year. Babe Ruth was voted the most valuable player in the National League last year. It is interesting that that had nothing would be caused among the ball players and that dissatisfaction might exist in some of the clubs where there were there were more than one star player.

The Giants, for instance, had three star players this year in the running for the prize, Frisch, Young and Kelly all received a number of votes and Travis Jackson received one. The contest hardly will cause any hard feelings among the Giant players, as John McGraw is not backward about giving his opinion on the ability and value of his players.

The ballots marked by the committee indicated that while there are a number of the young ball players, the real star players are mostly veterans, in experience if not in years. Rikl Cuyler, the sensational young pitcher, was the only youngster in the first ten, while in that group such veterans as Wheat, Marandino, Young and Hornsby.

Clay Wright, the fine young pitcher, Brooklyn, was included especially in the contest, and Jackson, the Giant pitcher, was favored down the list. Practically all of the players who were checked voted were veterans such as Jimmy Johnston, Cy Williams and Alcy Carey.

While drives and counter drives are coming like breakers on the sea, yet some of these are worthy, as we have stated before, of our consideration. The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce has endorsed the Stemenberg Memorial proposition, and this should be sufficient guarantee that it is a worthy cause. However, if there are those who want more light on this subject we invite them to read more complete description of the proposition in another part of tonight's paper.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction of Idaho gives two important reasons for discontent in Idaho among the teaching profession. These two reasons are "Lack of accommodations and no recognition of good service." These two conditions cause unstable situations to develop throughout the state which are very injurious to this profession. We are informed that about 50 per cent of the teachers in this state this year are new teachers. In other words, only fifty per cent of our teachers taught here last year and the other fifty per cent are largely from other states and are new to the conditions in Idaho and are therefore more or less handicapped.

William Jennings Bryan's daughter is following in her father's footsteps in decrying war and making it a strong plea for peace. She praised Wilson's League of Nations and former President Taft's work for peace during his administration and afterwards in supporting those measures which were for the upbuilding of the peace movement. She stated that the individual who could not favor a peace program which was not conceived in his own party was a poor sort of citizen. Various opinions were heard concerning Ruth Bryan Owens' lecture, but a great majority of her hearers were much pleased with her discourse here and the plea she makes for better conditions both at home and abroad.

A city or town is judged very much by the way they treat their visitors. If, when we entertain athletic teams or lodge organizations, we are inclined to be cheap about them we are classed as "cheap bunch." If by this we do not mean that a city or town need spend lavishly on their guests, but we do believe that there are certain courtesies due and the common law of fraternity makes it right and proper that these rules should be obeyed. Last Friday when our football team visited Nampa they were not provided rest rooms at the hotel, and no place to rest or to confer between the halves of the game with the coach. These are small matters, but they reflect the attitude of a city or a community and should be given attention by those in charge.

WHY IS A THIRD PARTY?

The United States has as much use for a third party as a hen has for twilight sleep when she lays an egg. Our parliamentary system with its numerous checks and balances was designed for a legislative machinery consisting of two parties, the dominant one to be heeded, hurried and supervised by the minority party. When the straight-line tug-of-war becomes a triangle, the great legislative game is likely to stop. At best it will become a confused affair in which the responsibility for the various moves cannot be easily apportioned.

During the past fifteen years there has not been a division on fundamental issues between Republican and Democratic politicians. The one great difference has been the condition of their respective appetites. Seeing this blending of the party lines, the liberal element in 1912 bolted the Republican party, throwing the victory to the Democrats. This year the Democrats had a real chance to win by nominating a liberal ticket. Their appetite was keen, but not keen enough to overcome the conservative inclination of the Democratic bosses. Hence the spectacle of the "forward-looking" Brother Charlie facing the head and the handsome Mr. Davis grabbing the tail of the Democratic donkey they ride.

The votes that came to the La Follette ticket were in protest against the truce and the virtual merger of the two major parties which became Siamese twins heading in the same general direction, but feeding different stomachs. If the Republicans, now frankly conservative, can break the solidity of the white South by adopting the hereditary Democratic attitude toward the negro problem, the Democratic organization will have a chance to become a genuinely liberal party, thus giving the voter an honest choice between honestly conflicting viewpoints and eliminating the possibility of legislative chaos through the monkey wrench of a third party—December Sunset.

THE SEA HAWK

Substant's greatest story of love and adventure

By RAPHAEL SABATINI

Let the punishment be as he deserved, he had thrown all his weight into the past strokes of the oar, until by the time the oar was raised the sweat was running down his body and his heart was thudding against his ribs. It was not possible that he could have lasted, and his mate spoke to him as he realized it, and saw himself face to face with horrors, inconceivable that man should have exhausted his strength. He was not naturally robust, and he had had a not unpaired life that was very far from equipping him for such a test as this.

But as they reached the Point they felt the fall of the water breeze, Sakr-el-Hahr, who by Adam's command remained in charge of the manning, ordered the starting of the oarsmen laterally, on one man and foremost. They had, however, out, swelling to the wind, and the oarsmen started at a speed that was more than double. The order to cease rowing in that order, the oars were left to return, thanks to heaven for their weight, and to lie in the water until such time as the oars should be required again.

The vessel's star prow, which ended in a steel ram and was armed with a sharp iron point, quarter, was crowded with lungeing corsairs, who took their chance to catch small boats, and a crowd should be upon them. They leaped on the high bulwarks or squatted in groups talking, laughing, and singing, others brandishing their weapons of their armor, and one nearby youth, whose hand was thrust into a scabbard and near a melancholy Shilua love song to the delight of a score of adroit chivalry ruffians squinting about him in a ring of variegated color.

The gorgeous power was fitted with a spacious cabin, which admitted was gained by two archways curtained with stout silks, and the entrance was through a bright red carpet. Above the cabin was a row of staterooms, great staterooms of the cabin surrounded each by the stairs and crescent. As it to continue and the crew increased in size, a grown avenger was erected from it to shade almost half the vessel. The deck was covered with a row of other officers who had escorted him aboard and whom he had retained beside him for that purpose, they standing upon a gilt balustrade at the point forward end, immediately above the stern's benches.

Sakr-el-Hahr alone, a solitary figure, resplendent in red and turban that were set about with the jewels of the bulwarks of the larder quarter of the poop-deck, and looked moodily back upon the receding city of Algers which he now saw no more than an agglomeration of white cubes, piled in hillside in the morning sun, above.

And watched him silently a while from under his beetling brows, then summoned him. He came at once, and stood respectfully before his prince. When he had taken him a moment solemnly, whilst a fervid, multi-colored play unfolded over the beautiful countenance of his prince.

"Think not, Sakr-el-Hahr," he said at length, "that I bear thee resentment for what I have done to thee. It is not that that has happened to me, nor the sole cause of my present determination. I had a duty—a long-expected duty—to Marzok, which at least I have undertaken to perform."

"It seemed to excuse himself almost, and Marzok smiled both at and for him. Why, he wondered, must this forean old man who had made his name a terror throughout Christendom be ever so soft and yielding where that stalwart and arrogant infidel was concerned?"

Sakr-el-Hahr bowed solemnly. "My lord," he said, "it is not for me to question thy resolve or the duty that has been laid to thee. If it suffices me to know thy wishes, they are my law."

"But thy duty is to carry out my wishes," he said sternly. "Thy duty does not cease—bear out thy protestations."

"I obey," he said, "I obey."

"I obey," he said, "I obey."

"I obey," he said, "I obey."

"I obey," he said, "I obey."

"I obey," he said, "I obey."

Yes, it's true—the world progresses. All you have to do nowadays is lumber up that stiff, rusty knee joint with a new and better material—working substance from a tube. This is what is on the offloading part of the knee in a quarter of a minute, and it soaks through the skin and disappears in its grand effort. Then read the evening newspaper, you go to bed.

... AT THE THEATRES

A NEW "GLOHAM" AT THE IDAHO THEATRE

Algiers, the French "Foreign Legion and a colorful love story as you've ever seen on the screen. That's "Wages of Virtue," Gloria Swanson's newest Paramount picture, an Allan Dwan production, which was shown for the first time in Twin Falls at the Idaho theatre yesterday.

BIG STAR CAST IN "SINGLE WIVES," AT ORPHEUM

The cast of "Single Wives," the First National Production which is now showing at the Orpheum theatre, is significant of the quality of the much discussed photoplay.

MELTON SAYS

Melton argued strongly for a much simpler tax law on the ground that Congress had overreached itself in seeking to check the evasion which of highly-taxed capital for methods of evasion by an intricate system of barriers. The present revenue laws are so complex, he said, that the average man finds it difficult in enforcing them.

"Taxation in America is not the simple question of garnering a tithe of the product of a purely agricultural people," he said. "We are now becoming experienced in instruments outside the country which the federal tax collector's hand does not reach. The solution of the problem lies not in making more reason. A reasonable rate of tax will make elaborate expensive methods of avoidance unprofitable. A reasonable rate of tax will make the administration of the tax laws more simple of accomplishment."

In this connection, Melton renewed his recommendation that Congress vote a constitutional amendment prohibiting the issuance of tax-exempt securities, but declared he believed this remedy would be too slow and urged that the attempt be made to reduce taxes so that tax-exempts were not so attractive—be carried out immediately.

Melton agreed the publicity provision in the present law, saying "it is wholly unnecessary," and declaring he may promptly expect renewed use of many means of tax avoidance." He recommended its repeal.

Of the general situation, Melton said: "With other nations of the world we are just emerging from that most difficult period of readjustment which the inevitable aftermath of a great war. We are perhaps the first nation to attempt to present reasonable assurance that we have come through successfully."

"Various theories inconsistent with economic laws have been advanced as remedies to this or that feature of our system. The sober judgment of a great majority of our people in the election just passed repudiated these theories and expressed itself in favor of a constructive, and orderly program of handling our government affairs."

"Three months before us, if we approach them with intelligence and vigor, we may find that the conditions since we succeeded the election of 1896. We have already made much progress in this direction."

Pointing to the great reduction in public expenditures since the war and the reduction of the public debt by $5,000,000 between August 31, 1919 and June 30, 1924, Melton said:

"These accomplishments have placed the government's finances on a sound footing and with the tax reform which must ultimately come, the burden on private business and credit should grow progressively smaller. The urgent need is for constant guard against additional undertakings or outlays which might interfere with the orderly program of debt retirement or make additional taxes necessary."

ENDS CATARRH

Chronic catarrh of the nose and throat is a common ailment which is often overlooked. It is caused by a germ which attacks the mucous membrane of the nose and throat. It is characterized by a constant discharge of mucus, and by a feeling of fullness in the nose. It is often accompanied by a headache, and by a general feeling of weakness. It is a disease which is easily cured by the use of the Catarrh Remedy. This remedy is a powerful antiseptic, and it kills the germ which causes the disease. It also soothes the inflamed mucous membrane, and it restores the normal condition of the nose and throat. It is a safe and reliable remedy, and it is available in all drug stores.
