GET UP AND GO ON

Your wee foot slipped on the floor, my son!
Get up and go on!
Your game of tag is far from done—
Get up and go on.
That dimpled knee got an awful hurt—
See the rouged-up skin and the ground-in-dirt!
But you're good for a stronger, swifter spurt—
Get up and go on.
Sometimes there are terrible bruises, lad,
But get up and go on.
And your father's arms—if it's quite too bad,
To get up and go on—
Will gather you close and gently say:
"There, there! Has it spoiled the baby's play?"
But you'll find in the end that the better way
Is "get up and go on."
All through your life it will be the same,
Get up and go on.
Grin over your pain and play the game—
And whenever the fall too cruel seems—
To get up and go on,
When hope has hidden its faintest gleams,
Get up and go on.
And the arms of the Father-who-knows-what's best
Will hold you close to a loving breast
Till your baffled soul finds strength in rest—
Get up and go on!
—Strickland Gilliland.

CAN THE RAILROADS SMOTHER DEBATE IN CONGRESS?

Advocates of the Gooding long and short haul bill are indignant at the obstructive tactics of the house committee on commerce. The Gooding bill passed the senate last May, 54 to 23, and went to this house committee, of which Congressman Winslow of Worcester, Mass., is the chairman. There it has lain pigeonholed for seven months.

The house committee on commerce deals with railroad legislation. If the railroads can control it they can block any bill not to their liking and can speed along any measure that they may want to manipulate through congress. If they control the house committee they practically control railroad legislation.

The railroads are hostile to the Gooding bill. Its enactment would interfere with their purpose to destroy boat competition through the Panama canal. If they can smother it in house committee, as they have so far succeeded in doing, they will prevent consideration by congress, as they have already prevented its consideration for many months. They are afraid of open debate on the floor of the house. They don't want a discussion of the measure on its merits. After a long parliamentary battle the friends of the Gooding bill got it squarely before the senate in open session, and after a week of debate only 23 of the 96 senators lined up in support of the railroads' opposition to the measure. Only one senator west of the Mississippi river voted against the bill.

This revelation of railroad control of a powerful committee of congress will shock millions of citizens who had been thinking that these old-time, throttling influences of powerful special interests were of the past. These disclosures bring a rapid awakening. They are a convincing demonstration that the railroads are playing the old political game in their old way and still have the dangerous power to smother important bills in committee and prevent discussion on the floor of congress of measures of profound national importance.

It is such exhibitions as the house committee on commerce is now giving the country that incite radicalism and dangerous distrust of the country's institutions.

Twenty-one members constitute the house commerce committee. They are: Winslow of Massachusetts, chairman; Parker of New York, Cooper of Ohio, Denison of Illinois, Sanders of Indiana, Merritt of Connecticut, Mapes of Michigan, Graham of Illinois, Newton of Minnesota, Hoch of Kansas, Wyant of Pennsylvania, Burtness of North Dakota, Barkley of Kentucky, Rayburn of Texas, Eads of Alabama, Lea of California, Hawes of Missouri, Parks of Arkansas, Cresser of Ohio, Shallenberger of Nebraska and Corning of New York.

How many of those are controlled by the railroads? Undoubtedly some of them are independent and in a position to vote in the public interest. But they seem to be in the impotent minority, —Spokesman Review.

CHAPTER XXXII

THE THREE HOURS
In the absence of any woman into whose care they might entrust her, Lord Henry, Sir John and Master Tobias, the ship's surgeon, both amongst them, looked it over as best they could when, mounted and half-dressed, she was brought aboard the Silver Heron.

Master Tobias had supplied some medicine restoratives as he commanded, and, having made her as comfortable as possible upon a couch in the spacious cabin interior, he had suggested that she should be allowed the rest of which she appeared so sorely to stand in need. He had ordered on the command of the surgeon's lieutenant, and himself had come below to a still more urgent case that was demanding his attention. There, amidst the confusion, and amidst the groans and wails of the patients, he had found the surgeon kneeling over Lionel. As he entered, Master Tobias turned and placed his hands in a mortal agony placed upon the floor and sobbing, "I can do no more, Sir John," he murmured in a despondent voice. "Is he dead?"

"Dead, yes, master," cried Sir John, a catch in his voice. "The surgeon touched under the temple, and slowly drew down the upturned sleeve of his black doublet. "All but dead," he answered. "The wonder is that any spark of life should still linger in a body with that hole in it. He is still breathing, but his pulse is scarcely perceptible, and his eyes are closed. He is dead, imperceptibly, he passes away. You may count him dead already, Sir John," he answered.

"A merciful, painless end," he added, and sighed perceptibly. "I have seen many a man die in this way, for all that such scenes as these were commonplace in his life. "Of the other four," he continued, "three are dead, the other three should all recover."

But Sir John gave little heed to the matter of those little lives. His eyes and dimming eyes searched for all hope for his friend provided any other consolation at the moment. "And he will not even realize consciousness?" he asked, looking at the man, although already he had been informed.

"As I have said, you may count him dead already, Sir John. My skill can do nothing for him. Sir John's head dropped, his countenance drawn and grave. "Not can my judgment," he added solemnly. "I think it better that I cannot give me back my friend."

He looked at the surgeon, "You mean, Sir John," he said, "that you are the only one of all the medical men that I can make up to?" "Yes, Sir John," replied the surgeon, "is one of justice, not vengeance."

"I am glad, when all is said," he stepped to Lionel's side, and looked down at the pale handsome face ere which the dark shadows of death were already creeping. "If he would but speak in the interests of his justice that is to be done, he would not have the evidence of his own words, but I should ever be asked to justify the handling of other men's lives."

"Sardon," the surgeon ventured, "there can be no such question ever. Master Tobias's ward would alone should justify, if indeed so much as that even were required."

"And His offences against God and man are too notorious to leave grounds upon which any should turn a blind eye to deal with him out of hand."

There was a tap at the door and Sir John's own servant entered with the announcement that the mistress of the house was asking urgently to see him. "She will be impatient for news of him," Sir John concluded, and he groaned, "My God! How am I to tell her to crush her in the very hour of her deliverance with such news as this? Was ever long so cruel?"

He turned, and stepped hastily to the door. There he paused. "You will remain by the door until I tell her to crush her in the end?" he had the surgeon interject, "I will not be long."

Sir John looked across at Lionel as he passed out. "God rest him!" he said hoarsely, and passed out.

It was in the next instant that he turned to a kind of lounging sofa, and bade them throw a halberd over the yardarm, and into the sea. The other two men from his prison. Then with slow heavy step and heavy heart he went up the companion to the vessel's capstair, laid out.

Master Tobias bowed, "Of course, Sir John," he added, "I will not be long."

CHILD RAPIDS, Iowa, Dec.
 Investigation was under way today to clear up the murder of a two day old baby girl, found along the Illinois Central tracks Saturday, strangled to death.
 Finger prints on a piece of wrapping paper, the same as that in which the infant was partially wrapped, was turned over to authorities. An embroyed handkerchief, stuffed down
 the baby's throat was another clue which authorities believe will help to solve the gruesome crime.
 The best way to mind your own business is to tell others about it -
 through their newspaper.

Big U. S. Made Telescope Goes To South Africa

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 22 - Prof.
 Fred Schlegel, director of Yale University observatory, is enroute to London on his way to South Africa.
 His specialty is the study of variable stars in the galaxy.
 For ten years this telescope will be employed in observing stars more than 1,000 light years distant in the southern heavens. The examination will take 10 years.
 "There are three other telescopes in the world that are capable of doing this kind of work," says Schlegel.
 Professor Schlegel's work before he sailed. It is connected with the study of the most modern principles and methods of observation in the field of which I have any knowledge. It was built for business."
 The telescope has been mounted in the observatory at Yale, where much of it was built.
 It is 26 feet long and is set on a cross bar the same length, with a mirror at the end. The telescope is one of the great weight, eleven tons, it is easy to handle and may be directed at any point in the heavens.
 The exact location of the new observatory had not been fully decided, but will probably be either Johnson or Hartebeesthoek, both of which are in the region of clear weather and steady atmosphere, the points of parsonal
 consideration for astronomical work.
 Besides determining the distance of the stars visible in the southern hemisphere, the observatory will determine the proportionate motion of a large number of stars in the galaxy. Although no definite plans have been made beyond
 the ten years necessary for this work,
 it is possible the South African observatory may become a permanent institution.
 It is hoped to have the new observatory in full operation by next June.
 Prof. Schlegel will leave for South Africa later to assist Professor Schlegel in the work.
 Professor Schlegel designed the 27
 telescopes and the lenses, which are 27 inches across, were made in America.
 American firms make far better lenses than anywhere in Europe. Hereafter has been thought necessary to obtain lenses from European manufacturers.
