BASEBALL COSTS TOO MUCH SAYS A RRELL

Rising Generation Are Turning to Other Sports and Forgetting Great American Sport Is Claim of Many Sporting Fans Interest Must Be Revived.

(By HENRY L. FAIRRELL.)

NEW YORK, March 25.—Major League baseball officials are said to be ready to reorganize the game.

It has been pointed out that baseball has been "played" as a game in an American boy's life "as a game" that is now turning to go to tennis and to other sports.

With one or two exceptions such as Bob Jack, Duper's major league club owners are the wisest set of business men extant.

There was some concern that last fall when a plot among the New York Giants to have a game thrown by the Philadelphia club was exposed.

It is an admitted fact that the world's series has become too much of a big money proposition and that it is reducing the price of admission.

In this campaign to revive the game, the same narrow vision is being employed.

Instead of appealing more to the people's spirit and to the people's sense of fair play, the managers should reduce the price of admission.

The club owners would be justified if the suggestion to let all the kids in "short pants" into week-day games.

Several years ago, a professional major league club owner was asked why he did not make his club boys to see the big league games.

There is a lot of truth in this, but it might be arranged that if a ballgame is not more than $1000.

Announcement

I wish to announce to my friends, former patients, and the general public that I will open offices and resume practice of Chiropractic in Twin Falls.

During the last year I spent six months in post-graduate work at the Palmer School of Chiropractic, Davenport, Ia., which is the largest and best equipped institution of its kind in the world.

THE NEUROCOLLECTOR Chiropractic, like many other discoveries, is undergoing continual development. We now have a new command—a scientific instrument, called the Neurocollector, perfected in the last year and which is proving to be a most wonderful boon to the Chiropractor.

First—The Neurocollector proves pressure upon nerves. Second—The Neurocollector proves the exact spot where the spine where the pressure exists. Third—The Neurocollector proves the exact location of the pressure which is interfering with the transmission of the vital force within the body, causing ill health.

Fourth—The Neurocollector checks the best location and Chiropractor may see why the patient is ill. Fifth—The Neurocollector removes all doubt as to the real cause of disease. It shows the Chiropractor and patient where the part is located and where it is located.

I am very proud to have the privilege of having these instruments at my command. For I can help my patients in the most up-to-date, scientific and successful health service obtainable.

What occurred was this.—Lord John had shot an arrow which is a small, black animal and which it having been given to the Indians was worn cooking the other things upon the fire. There is a chill in the air after dark, and we had all drawn close to the blaze. The night was moonless, but there were some stars, and one could see for a little distance across the plain. "Well, suddenly out of the darkness, out of the night, there swooped something with a swish like an aeroplane. The whole group of us were covered for an instant by a canopy of lurid wings, and I had a momentary vision of a long, snake-like neck, a fierce, greedy eye, and a great snapping beak, filled to my amazement, with little, gleaming teeth. The next instant it was gone—and so was our dinner. A huge black shadow, twenty feet across, skimmed up into the air for a instant, the monster wings blotted out the stars, and then it vanished over the brow of the cliff above. "We all sat in amazed silence round the fire, like the heroes of Virgil when the Harpies came down upon them. It was Summerlee who was the first to speak.

"Professor Challenger," said he, in a solemn voice, "I am answered with emotion, 'I owe you an apology.' Sir, I am very much in the wrong and I beg that you will forget what I said."

It was handsomely said, and the two men for the first time spoke together. "But if prehistoric life existed upon the plateau, it was not superfluous, for we had no further business at this time than to spend a few days. During this time we traversed a barren and forbidding country, which alternated between rocky deserts and shallow swamps full of many wild-fowl, upon the north and east of the cliffs. From that direction the place is really inaccessible, and, were it not for a hardy ledge which runs at the top of the cliff, the party which should have had to turn back many times we were up on the summit of the mountain, which is an old, semicircular swamp.

To make matters worse, the place seemed to be a favorite breeding place of the Jararaca snake, the most venomous and the most numerous of the serpents of South America. Again and again these horrible creatures came within range of the party, and it was only by keeping our stockings and shoes ready that we could feel safe from them. One funnel-shaped depression in the morass, of a livid green in color from some ichthol which featured in it, will always remain as a nightmare memory in my mind. It seems to have been a special nest of these vermin, and the slopes were alive with them, all within our ken, for it is a peculiar quality of the Jararaca that it will always attack man at first sight. There were too many for us to shoot, and so we fairly took to our heels and ran until we were exhausted. I shall always remember as we fled back to the camp behind, we could see the heads and necks of our horrible pursuers flailing and snapping at us. Jararaca Swamp we named it in the map which we are constructing.

The cliffs upon the farther side had lost their ruddy tint, being chocolate-brown in color. The vegetation was more scattered along the top of them, and they had sunk to three or four hundred feet in height. In places they stood any point where they could be ascended. If anything, they were more impossible than at the first point where we had met them. Their absolute steepness indicated the photographs which I took over the stony desert.

"Surely," said I, "as we discussed the situation, the rain must find its way down somehow. There are rocks to be water-channels in the crevices."

"Our young friend has glimpses of facility," said Professor Challenger, "longer, patting me upon the shoulder. 'The rain must go somewhere,' I repeated. 'It keeps a firm grip upon activity.' The only drawback is that we have absolutely proved by our own demonstration that there are no water channels down the rocks. 'Where, then, does it go?' I asked. 'I think it may be fairly assumed that it does not come down, but wants it must run inwardly.' 'Then there is a lake in the center.' 'So I should suppose.' 'It is more than likely that the lake may be an old crater,' said Summerlee. 'This whole formation is, of course, highly volcanic. But, however that may be, I should expect to find the surface of the plateau slope inward with a considerable shade of water in the center, which may drain off, by some extraordinary channel, into the marshes of the Jararaca Swamp.' 'Of evaporation might preserve an equilibrium,' remarked Challenger. 'The two learned men ventured off the one of their usual scientific arguments, which were as incomprehensible as Chinese to the layman.

On the sixth day we completed our first circuit of the cliffs, and found ourselves back at the first camp, beside the isolated pinnacle of rock. We were a disconcerted party, for nothing could have been more minute than our investigation, and it was absolutely certain that there was no single point where the most active investigation could possibly hope to scale the cliff. The place which Mapple White's chalk-mark had indicated as his own means of access was now entirely impassable.

TWIN FALLS LIBRARY IS WORTHY INSTITUTION.

The request for a considerable increase in the library fund for the coming year, made at the meeting of the city commission Monday night is one that will command the sympathetic interest of all who are familiar with the value of that public institution. When 6000 books have a monthly circulation of about 7000, it is certain, as pointed out by the board members, Frank L. Stephan and W. E. Nixon, that some of the books will wear out rapidly. The library is a democratic institution. Anybody can get there and read. Anybody who is a resident here can get out books regularly. Non-residents, by making a temporary deposit, can get books out while spending a short time in the city. The librarian, Miss Jessie Fraser, has always shown a disposition to consider suggestions regarding the purchase of books, and to secure volumes requested where by reputable authors, where funds permitted.—There is a wide range of reading here and it is well patronized. The library tax is a special levy and does not interfere with the general levy. The greatest latitude possible should be given in this regard. There is, of course, great merit in the suggestion of Commissioner W. T. Leslie that civic organizations should also help in adding to the book list. There is also merit in the suggestion of Mayor Shad L. Hodgkin that the salaries of firemen and policemen in this city are too low. He might have added that an extra policeman or two with somewhat increased salaries are needed. But, the library should not be neglected.

WILSON ADMINISTRATION HAS ADVANTAGE

That the after-war scandals of his successors were far more serious than the war scandals of the Wilson administration as shown by the results of investigations, was one of the facts stressed by Mark H. Sullivan, the noted writer in his weekly letter Sunday. He points out that Vice President Dawes won fame by his vigorous language in denouncing the character of the attacks on the Wilson administration. After discussing several later scandals he continues:

Probably that future historian will go further, will contrast this record of the Republican administration just after the war with the Democratic administration during the war. The comparison will be highly favorable to the Democrats.

The Republicans charged—and many of them sincerely believed—that the Democratic management of the war had been tainted with gross waste, and with fraud. During the first post-war campaign, the Republicans promised that if elected, they would go to the bottom of the Democratic management of the war, find the beneficiaries of fraud and extravagance, and make them disgorge.

The Republicans were elected. They appointed committees to investigate. They appointed a special group of lawyers to investigate and prosecute. They appropriated half a million dollars to pay the expense. They extended the statute of limitations from three to six years in order to have time to find and indict the criminals alleged to exist.

The end of that extraordinary six-year statute of limitations came on the twelfth of last month. At that time there had been just one conviction, not important; and one plea of guilty, also unimportant. Twelve cases were pending trial of hearing. Six criminal cases had ended in acquittal of the defendants. Fifteen had been, or were about to be, dismissed on motion of the government, under a new attorney general who disapproved the bringing of indictments without sufficient ground.

That record tells its own story. The facts are supplemented by the judgments of Republican lawyers and officials of position to know, who say frankly that no serious or wholesale fraud was found in the Democratic management of the war, and who deplore the effort made by the Republican administration to fasten wholesale charges of wickedness on the Democrats.

It should be added that what has so far been said applies to criminal cases. In civil suits the government has done somewhat better. And yet, during six years following the war, only six million dollars had been recovered as unlawful gains, in a total war expenditure of more than twenty-five billions.

It may be that more yet will be recovered in civil actions, for the statute of limitations does not run against these. During the recent congress, the department of justice asked, and received another million dollars to pay the expense of prosecuting further civil suits.

The net judgment, shared by orthodox Republican leaders, is that the Democratic administration managed the war creditably. It was to make this point, and to drive it home to the public, that Vice President Dawes used his famous "Hell and Maria" explosion. He had been called as a witness by one of the Republican "smelling committees."

The whole group of us were covered for an instant by a canopy of lurid wings, and I had a momentary vision of a long, snake-like neck, a fierce, greedy eye, and a great snapping beak, filled to my amazement, with little, gleaming teeth. The next instant it was gone—and so was our dinner. A huge black shadow, twenty feet across, skimmed up into the air for a instant, the monster wings blotted out the stars, and then it vanished over the brow of the cliff above.

NEED FOR EDUCATION IN ELIMINATION OF ACCIDENTS

By S. W. STRAUSS,
President American Society for Prevention of Accidents

LACK of care which leads to accidents is productive of many forms of waste. Even human lives are often sacrificed on the altar of improper precautions.

A man who is afflicted with a case of the nation's leading occupational organization, usually made a state worthy of more than passing mention. He stated that in connection with building operations 75 per cent of all accidents are preventable. He also said that out of all preventable mishaps in that field, only 25 per cent can be prevented through mechanical devices. The remaining 75 to 40 per cent of all preventable accidents in connection with building work can be forestalled only by education.

What is true in building operations is true in greater or less degree in all lines of work.

The construction industry is, according to some statistics, responsible for only about 18 per cent of all accidents. It is safe to say that the percentage of preventability does not differ greatly in different lines of occupation.

What an enormous field for the prevention of fatalities and the elimination of waste thus lies within the domain of education!

Safety and thrift are closely allied. It is just as advisable to take no risks physically as it is to take no risks financially.

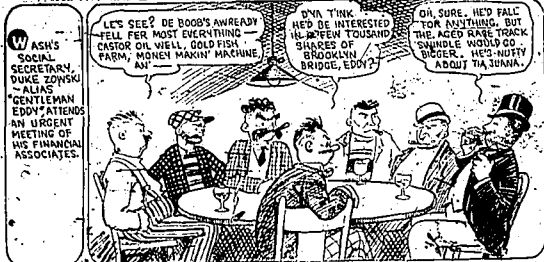

Don't take chances with yourself or with your money. Carelessness is aagrant violation of the precepts of thrift.
