BUHL GIRLS WIN FROM MILWOOD

Waiting Team From Washington Play Fast Game of Basketball and First Half
Closes With 12 to 8 Score
in Their Favor; Buhl
Looks Like Pacific Coast
Champions.

(Special to The Times)
BUHL, April 11.—Buhl's basketball team kept up their victory streak here by winning over the Milwood, Wash., champions in the first game of the championship series. The girls' greatest and hard fought battle that has ever been waged on the local court. The final score was Buhl, 21, Milwood, 18.

The reading at the end of the first half was in favor of Milwood by 12 to 10 points. However, the Buhl team worked to good advantage and came out and the locals took the lead and maintained it until the final whistle. The Buhl girls proved the stronger opposition throughout the entire history of the series. The sextet is composed of experienced players who know how to play basketball to perfection. Most of their shots were worked up to short range, while the Buhl ladies dropped a number of nests outside, from long range and difficult angles.

There were no outstanding players on the Milwood side, but they did their share in helping part in the victory. Milwood's guards are hard to shake and it was due to their splendid defense that the final score was held to the low figure.

The one advantage in Buhl's favor was the up-off, which the Buhl center got, and which Milwood did not have, usually broke up the play in the first two quarters. This was a factor in putting the visitors in the lead at the end of the first half.

The game was attended by about 700 fans. However, Saturday night's game is expected to draw at least 1,000 spectators. But the Buhl girls would have an easy victory, but they have concluded that Washington has proved a real contender for interstate honors.

The game tonight will be called at 8 o'clock.

The lineup for Buhl was: Wiford and Metz, forwards; Hay, Baker and Vinegar, centers; Scully, Ralph and Hawkins, guards.

Milwood's lineup was: Brader and Harrington, guards; Vandervall and Sampson, centers; Phillips, Ingraham and Jones, guards.

J. H. Davis of Twin Falls was referee.

They're Teammates Again

Here we have Steve O'Neill, catcher for the left, and Mattie Jones, pitcher, back together again with the New York Yankees. Steve, a native, O'Neill and Jones were acquaintances on the Cleveland club. A true-blue fan of the Yankees. Oddly enough, O'Neill later followed a similar route. The recent arrival to the Wilson Library, Maucke, hit a home run with one on.

Senators Should Win, Says Manager

(By Stanley Harris, Manager of the Washington Senators.)

With a factor here and there, I am perfectly satisfied with the Washington Senators. We are going to win another pennant because there is terrific opposition; but I will say that the Senators will do well. There are few experts who believe that few of the experts are giving us a chance and I feel that such a result will befall us. Our reserved strength is better and I feel that we have a greatly improved team. We did not have a good spring break last season and if they do go against us this season we are fixed better to meet them.

TWIN FALLS DAILY TIMES

Published Every Evening Except Sunday by the Times Publishing Company, Twin Falls, Idaho.

Entered at the Twin Falls Postoffice as Second Class Matter as Daily Publication, April 11, 1918.

Twin Falls won second place in the declamatory contest last evening in Pocatello. Blackfoot and Salmon carried off first honors but we feel proud that our little girl did so well among such a host.

Filer will hold their city election on April 28 and at that time two councilmen are to be elected. Thus far the campaign in our village to the West is not warming up much but later some real pre-election stuff is expected. Buhi plans to hold an election and have renominated practically the same members who served during the past year. Dr. A. F. McClusky heads the list as candidate for re-election as mayor.

Some splendid music will be rendered tomorrow in the churches of Twin Falls and if you haven't any interest in the discourse it will be worth your while to go and listen to the splendid musical programs which are to be rendered. Twin Falls has a large number of gifted musicians and few cities the size of this one can boast of so much talent in this particular line.

Every purchaser is suspicious when he is told that the seller gives him a cut price on a given article for particular reason. Whether a special price is given because of the purchaser's good looks, friendship or for some other reason. This is especially true of advertising space since it is sold the year around at a given price based on a guaranteed circulation. But if some fellow gets greedy and cuts the price for one customer what reason has he for the other buyer of space across the street. The only policy which will win in the long run is one price to all and sell your customer on results rather than a special deal between "We four and no more."

The celebration of the anniversary of the resurrection of Christ tomorrow, following the observance of the crucifixion yesterday, is the occasion of joy and of spiritual hope. "The darkest hour is the one before the dawn." There is a lesson for the world in this. The great war was a period of crucifixion for mankind. And following there came darkness and doubt and divided council among the nations and men. The ghost of dead hatreds walked abroad and like the spirits mentioned in the gospel appeared to many. If humanity will grasp the lesson of sacrifice and love taught by the death and resurrection of Christ, a new era of understanding will come to mankind, buried spirituality will open the tomb and the Spirit of Truth will come to dwell with all mankind.

MORE WORKERS NEEDED IN A BROADENING FIELD.

Six times as many boys and girls will be graduated from the public high schools this year as were a quarter of a century ago. Then what? Forty-six per cent will continue their education; 112,000 will enter college and 50,000 will enter other institutions. Guidance should be given them to assist in choosing and preparing for that vocation for which they are best adapted and in which they can render their greatest service to society.

Education offers one of the greatest fields of service. The teacher is entrusted with (1) preserving and passing on those experiences of the race most worth while and (2) directing the development of the latent ability of each child in order that he may make his fullest contribution to society.

Women are becoming better prepared for and are entering more than heretofore the fields of administration and research. Men are entering the ranks as teachers in increasing numbers. The number of men students enrolled in teacher-preparing courses in normal schools and teachers' colleges during the last biennium for which statistics have been compiled increased over 71 per cent. The percentage of men teachers increased in the past four years from 18% to 22½ per cent of the total number employed.

The field of education is not a one-track affair; it offers a variety of types of occupation. (1) Administration has added new fields for specialization. (2) Research is of growing importance. (3) Teaching itself offers numerous new fields for specialization.

The field of education is not overcrowded. The increase in educational facilities to meet the needs of a growing population demands more workers. The development of better standards in education demands more adequately trained workers.

"Any Nolin" - Hal Cashion's DAILY POEM

WHEN we little ones have a dexterity streak, the things they can do are great. You never can tell by a fact that little neck what is gonna from morning till night.

I know of a youngster whose rule can be, and as daring a lot as they make. They're the ones who are the most. The ones that most are, who's surely the ones who can make the most.

A perfect perhaps is left lying around, and soon, from the kitchen to hall, a musical band and it readily follows the leader, and the leader is the boy.

"The band's hidden high, but a certain blunder nearly and the little one drops it in place. Then Mon was afraid, after regaining his voice there's something more.

He founds the delectable book that breaks out when she's caught in her dexterity play. "Why I didn't see it in action, but I shout to her typical

Still half awake, and unable to imagine what it all might mean, I found myself hurrying madly after him through the wood, a rifle under each arm and a pile of varnished stores in my hands. He dodged in and out through the thickets, and I was compelled to drop a clump of brushwood, late this he rushed, regardless of thorns, and rushed himself into the heart of it, pulling me down by his belt.

"There!" he panted, "I think we are safe here. They'll make for the camp as sure as fate. It will be their first shot. But this should be our last."

"What is it all?" I asked, when I had got my breath. "Where are the professors? and who is it that it is about?"

"The professors!" he cried. "My God, what brutes! Don't forget your voice, for they have long ears—sharp eyes, too, but as I could judge, so far as I could see, they were not blind. Where have they been young, foolish? You were well out of it."

In a few sentences I whispered what I had done.

"It was right to do so, when he had heard of the dinosaur and the pit. It isn't quite the place for a rest cure. What? Did I have no idea what its possible uses were until now? They've got hold of it. The managing partner has me bound, but they are Chesterfields compared to this crowd."

"How does it happen?" I asked.

"I was just so absorbed in the work of saving the dinosaur that I didn't even begin to argue yet. Suddenly it rained apes. They came down as thick as any snowfall in the dark, I suppose, until that great tree over our heads was heavy with them. I shone one of them through the belly of the boat, and saw that there were more than I supposed packed on our backs; I call them apes, but they carried sticks and stones in their hands and jabbed back and forth, and I had to stand up straight, turn our heads, and let them hit us in the face, and leave a great gash of trees across the edge of the cliff. It's three or four miles from here. The boat will be all gone, and all of us, and I feel I should be in a clean strait. They tied us up—their fellow who handles me comes to him a dozen—and there we lie with a iron grip on us, and the boat is being pulled up, beneath a tree, while a great ape holds a club in his hand. When I say 'we' I mean Summerlee and myself. Old Challenger was up a tree, trying to plug and haulin' away, but he managed to get some fruit to us, and with his own hands he loosened our bonds. If you'd been still sitting in layin' the trap, you'd be comin' in that cabin, I mean, in that cabin, in that cabin."

They carried off their wounded comrade, he was bitten to a pulp—and then they had another murder. I never saw a more savage murder it was, and the ones that were big fellows, as big as a man and a deal stronger. Caricatured gray eyes they have, under their brows, and they just sat and the thing was complete. Summerlee was a bit hysterical, and he began to yell and curse. The apes laughed, too—and at least they put up the devil of a cackle—and they set to work to drag us off through the forest. They wouldn't think them dangerous, I expect—but they carried away, all our food. Summerlee and I got some rough handlin' on the way, but I guess it was to prove it—for they took us along through the brambles, and their own hide is like leather. That Challenger was all right, but he carried him shoulder high, and he carried him like a Roman emperor. What's that?"

"It was a strange clicking noise in the distance not unlike castle notes."

"What is it?" they said, and my companion, slipping cartridges into the broadsword, dashed out.

"Leave them all up, young fellah, my lad, for we're not going to take alive, and don't you think we're safe?"

"Very fair," I said.

"Well, we'll go to good, but I expect those stench parts will be after the goods. Well; I was telling you my tale of woe. They are after us, and they are their friends, though, but we're bound and have in a great group of trees hooked the edge of the cliff. It's three or four miles from here. The boat will be all gone, and all of us, and I feel I should be in a clean strait.
