Hero Dead Are Given Tribute At Dedication

Solemn Ceremonies Mark Unveiling of Memorial by Daughters of American Revolution to the Victims of the World War From This County; Rev. Mr. Pearson As Speaker of the Day, Points to Necessity of Preventing Recurrence; Mrs. Packard, in Behalf of D. A. R., Dedicates Shrine.

In his address at the dedication of the memorial tablet in the program of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Sunday, April 19, on the one hundred and fifth anniversary of the battle of Lexington, Rev. A. G. Pearson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, dwelt on the heroism of the men from Twin Falls county who gave their lives, on the horrors which another war would bring and on the duty of all to strive to avert a recurrence of such struggle.

The occasion which calls us together this afternoon is both a solemn and a sacred one. Solemn, because it avails no memory which are saturated with anguish; sacred, for life is always a sacred trust. We stand beside a monument which gives its word less message, but these will give their lives, give their all.

RAFT RIVER CUT OFF FOR UTAH IS URGED IN BURLEY

BURLEY, Idaho, April 25—The commercial club on Thursday evening in regular session at the club cafe, discussed the proposed bill to cut off the raft river from Burley after what a lengthy discussion ended during which the proposed bill was passed by a vote of 10 to 2.

Another matter of some importance was a short discussion of the proposed Fourth Hill canal that the people residing between Burley and Oakley are asking in order to irrigate a number of acres of land that lie between the two cities and that are at present dry land farms.

Plans were also formulated for the celebration of the 125th anniversary of 125 business men from Salt Lake City that plan to visit Burley on May 13. A number of the members of the club have planned to use their cars to show the visitors about town and the surrounding country and in the evening a dance will be given for the relief of the unemployed.

NATIONAL BANKS MAKE TWO HUNDRED MILLION

The Comptroller of the Currency reports that profits of national banks in 1924 amounted to $195,706,000, out of which dividends were declared to the amount of $163,688,000.

The aggregate resources of the 29,348 reporting national, state, mutual savings, stock savings, and private banks and trust companies were $57,144,600,000, of which the resources of the 8,085 national banks amounted to $22,565,919,000. Of the resources of other than national banks, amounting to $34,578,771,000, capital stock amounted to only $1,780,192,000, while deposits amounted to $28,100,938,000—sixteen times as much. This is a new 16 to 1—but the stockholders got the profits, and the depositors chiefly made the profits possible.

COMMUNITY BUILDING IN VIRGINIA

A community must lift itself by its own bootstraps. That is the keynote of the Cooperative Education association of Virginia as sounded in its latest annual report which says that the genius of the organization is to develop the citizen and the community from within, and not superimpose some plan from without.

The association promotes better schools, roads, recreation, health, farms, homes, citizenship, and community leadership. It works under the direction of the Governor and state departments, higher institutions of learning, and a group of citizens. Its machinery of organization includes senior and junior leagues and a county council whose object is to bring the workers of the county closer cooperation.

It has grown from a few leagues in 1904 to 1,833 in 1924—1,302 senior and 531 junior. Its membership is 62,576—37,107 senior and 25,469 junior. Last year the junior and senior leagues together raised $166,125 for local improvements. Most of this money was spent upon the public school. The reports show that they give cover about every phase of school improvement from furnishing a broom to guaranteeing a school board $1,200 for the 1924-25 school budget. Either through public meetings or material accomplishments, 3,787 pieces of definite work were reported for schools; health, roads, agriculture, civic and recreational improvement. The association is financed by the state and by donations from various corporations and individuals. Its receipts for the past year amounted to almost $34,000.

POLITICS IN THE INCUBATOR

Senator Yeaman, writing in his Idaho Falls Register, sees the handwriting on the wall in recent happenings among would-be's. The southeastern statesman and editor says:

Senator Frank Gooding is being credited with having started it, although in fact it started some weeks ago. Senator Gooding simply hastened up matters a bit by letting it be known, in a manner which cannot be mistaken, that he not only intends to become a candidate for re-election but that he is a candidate now.

The announcement on the part of the senator may have the effect of quieting down other ambitions and will have the effect of bringing some others into prominence.

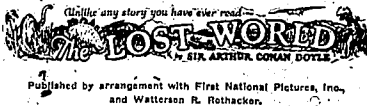

North Idaho feels entitled to the honor of naming a man for Idaho state senator, and makes the claim that the north possesses an abundance of good material from which to make a selection, all of which may develop into interesting conclusions and conditions before the time for the primary rolls around again.

When Scott Hall of Oneida county sang his swan song on the closing days of the legislature and left town before adjournment it was freely predicted that he had left the republican party and had gone over to the third party, or the Progressives, and from all present appearances and indications he is running his campaign right now as the prospective candidate for governor for the Progressives.

Ben Ross, mayor of Pocatello, is candidate for governor of the Democratic ticket, so many of his friends say, and both Democrats and Progressives avow there will be no fusion between the two parties, all of which means a three-way ticket in the field which is to the liking of many.

The economic condition of Idaho the next year and a half will have a great deal to do with the political situation and there will be little ground for opportunity for the preaching of the gospel of discontent. Idaho is working its way out. Idaho is liquidating and by election time the people of Idaho will be in a different frame of mind from that in which they have been, which will leave little opportunity for the mouthing of the demagog.

Idaho has been marking time. Idaho has about caught up with itself and within the next two years we will be glad to listen to the song of optimism and the chorus of the pessimist will be drowned out and down by the noise of industry as it moves forward.

Challenger obliged in safety one side of that savage curving back, a glint of his hand on his boot as if he had been cut with a knife. This time at least modern weapons prevailed and the great creature, twenty feet from head to foot, plucked out its own throat according to our meaning but assistant Professor went down before Lord Rogton's fire in a flurry of feathers and kicking limbs, with two resplendent yellow eyes glaring up from the midst of its hair. I try to see that flattened vicious skull in its own white mist of the trophies of the albatross. Finally, I will not venture a moment's account of the toadskin, the giant tin-tin goose pin, with projecting sharp teeth, which were killed or it drank in the army of the morning by the side of the lake.

All this I shall some day write in fuller length, and amidst those now ordinary days I will tenderly cherish the memory of that day, when, when will you lay my poor comrade, ship among the dead, graven by the wind and waves and sea and strange fowl that went over us and the quiet now creatures which were frozen from their burrows and holes, white above, as the boughs of the bushes were heavy with luminous frost and the night was lovely and heavy as a blanket of snow, when the hawk and the owl and the night heron, when you are up among the night herons, or when you are out upon the shimmering surface of the great lake and watched with wonder and awe the huge circles tipping out from the black surface of some phantom monster; or the greenish gleam, far down in the bottom of the lake, as the darkness, there are the scenes which my

I will tell of the huge bird that chased Chin as he shot the rocks.

My mind and my pen will dwell upon in very detail at some future day.

But you will ask, why these experiences and why this light, when you and your comrades should have been occupied day and night in the doings of some man, by which you could have seen what was outside world? My answer is, that there was no one of us who was not working for this end, but that our work had been in vain. One of us had had a very special discovery: The Indians would do nothing to help us, in overtaking our party, and our friends—our night-almost say our devoted slaves—but when it was suggested that they should help us to make and carry a plank which would bridge the channel, or some other way to get from them those of leather or skins to weave ropes which might help us, we were refused. They would smile, twinkle their eyes, shake their heads, and utter some such words as "Eh, eh, eh," but they would not assist us with the same obstinate denial, and it was only after we had looked wistfully at it and said to us by his gestures that it was a greater error to refuse. Ever since that crowning triumph with the spoon they looked upon us as superior to the mere victory in the tubes of their weapons, and they believed that we were the real victors. Each of us was so wrapped in our own people and dwell forever upon the plateau. So far all had gone well, and nearly all our food assured that our actual plans of a descent must be kept. It had been so long to reach the lake, and so long to reach the steersman of Challenger's camp. I was so tired at that place, that I would not go near it, and, although I was well as usual, I could not make it up through the deep marsh in which it was so large than a cow and had the strongest nutty odor. I will tell also the tale of the great animal Challenger to the shelter of the rocks one day—a great running bear that was the the creature of a vulture-like face and cruel hand which made it a worthy drink.
