PUNISHING NEGLECT

If a person is run over by an automobile damage is collected. In fact most machines are insured against accidents. In almost every activity of life men pay for the damage they do. But there is one exception. If a man carelessly sets a fire he goes scot free. If it is right to hold men responsible for damages done in other things, it ought also to be right to punish men for destroying property and human life by setting fires. The season is early but already the fire danger is upon us and warnings are being sent out. Every year millions are lost in burning forests. The time has come when the forest industry cannot stand such a toll. If the precaution so far exercised prove ineffective then it is time to hold the offenders personally responsible. If a few men were sent to jail for burning forests there would be more carefulness than this country ever saw before.—Exchange.

DOG POISONING IS MIXED FELONY

The statutes of Idaho provide that "Every person who willfully administers any poison to an animal, the property of another, or maliciously exposes any poisonous substance, with the intent that the same shall be taken or swallowed by any such animal, is punishable by imprisonment in the state prison not exceeding three years, or in the county jail not exceeding one year, and a fine not exceeding $500."

The above indicates the serious nature of the crime in the eyes of the law. It is what is classed as a mixed felony, because where there is great extenuating circumstances in a particular instance the court may let the guilty off with a fine, in more serious cases he may impose a jail sentence and in case of systematic cold-blooded work may send the culprit to the penitentiary. The wording of the statute indicates that the fine may be added to imprisonment in either jail or penitentiary.

In the eyes of the law the person who deliberately, persistently and systematically pursues a course of poisoning animals is a great criminal. It is to be regretted that so far nobody has secured the evidence necessary to give the Twin Falls dog poisoner his due.

THE CASE OF LYDA SOUTHARD

It is very doubtful if the people of this state will give their approval to any plan that will remove Lyda Southard from the jurisdiction of Idaho. The crimes she committed, in the poisoning of her several husbands that she might collect on their insurance policies, are too fresh in the memory of the people. Lyda Southard belongs in the state penitentiary where she is under sentence for from 10 to 20 years and it is the duty of the state to see that she is kept safely there for the general protection of society at large, says the Capital News.

Lyda Southard is now the only woman inmate of the penitentiary. She is, therefore, the only occupant of the woman's ward. The board of prison commissioners would like to use this ward for trustees who are worked outside of the penitentiary walls. For the sake of economy and accommodation it is reported that some of the members of this board believe that Mrs. Southard can be removed to the state prison in one of the neighboring states which are maintaining larger women's wards, thus releasing the woman's ward at the Idaho penitentiary for the use of the trustees.

This arrangement would be all right were it not for the fact the state of Idaho would shift most of the responsibility for the safe keeping of Mrs. Southard.

Mrs. Southard would be farmed out to another state and, because she was not within the confines of Idaho, interest in her case would drop. There would be no great surprise to learn, after a period of years, she had been released from the confines of the prison and was again at large on society.

It is suggested in support of the argument to send Mrs. Southard to another state to there be confined in serving out her sentence, that the woman's ward can then be released at the Idaho penitentiary for more extensive use. What is the state going to do if in the immediate future there are other women sentenced to the penitentiary? That is likely to happen. Are they, too, to be farmed out to other states in the same manner? Certainly it ought to be possible to release this ward for the use of trustees if that is desired, and at the same time prepare a smaller ward for women who are sentenced to Idaho's penitentiary.

For Sore, Lame MUSCLES

Ask for a tube of "Joint-Ease." You can use several tubes in one evening for quick results, because it goes right through the skin with only a few seconds rubbing and gets right to the seat of the trouble. It is surely a swift penetrator and when it gets under the skin, it starts right in to take the soreness out of muscles and chase away the lameness.

That's why athletes use it so much. Often over night the "lameness" and aches disappear and the ambitious athlete is quickly back in the game again.

Baseball players, golfers, bicyclists, riders, football players as well as those who play polo, tennis and other games, are fast discovering that "Joint-Ease" is far and away ahead of anything else they have used.

All drug stores have sold hundreds of tubes of it and any druggist should be able to supply you with it.
