Army and Navy Plane Capable of Flying to Paris or Tokyo With a Ton of Explosives Has Been Proposed But Is Balked by Old Fogies.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—A super airplane, capable of flying to Paris or Tokyo loaded with a ton of explosives has been patented in this country but its development is being balked by "old fogies" in the army and navy. Colonel William Mitchell, deputy head of the Army Air Service, declared in an interview here between trains to San Antonio, "I believe that the airplane that has been built is capable of flight to Tokyo with one stop at Nome, Alaska," Mitchell declared. "They will make it in less than 24 hours, but we can't prove it unless the army and navy head out in a race."

"Old fogies are talking back the inevitable," said Colonel Mitchell, whose persistence in making the airplane to be built again before the public is an issue.

THE FOREIGN DEBT ADJUSTMENT

(BY JAMES D. WHEELAN)

In the discussion between Senator Borah and those republican leaders who think that we ought to consider what other countries are doing in seeking to adjust debts with one another, the question of how the debts are to be settled when the adjustment is made is politely ignored. Yet this issue is the paramount one, existent but suppressed, which divides the dominant party today.

In its last issue (August 21) the American Economist suddenly wakes up to the fact that this danger to the republicans is a very live one and not only quotes in full an article by John P. Fennelly, which predicts that there will be a sweeping tariff reduction, but says that the danger of free trade is real. In a three column editorial on this subject the Economist quotes the following from the Fennelly article which it has also reproduced as written:

"The writer's contention is that free trade for the United States (if not free trade, at least a sweeping revision of the tariff downward) is a distinct, probability within the next few years, because the large business interests will demand it."

The Economist then proceeds to "answer" this by indulging in a piece of sophistry the fallacy of which any school boy who studies economics ought to be able to answer. It says:

"We believe that the writer points out a real danger. He is evidently the mouthpiece of the international banking interests. He says that 'the leading bankers of the country are now the one group of business men who seem to visualize the situation clearly.'" This entire argument is merely a skilled rehash of the arguments advanced by internationalists whether of the banking fraternity or some other free trade clique. It is, "we must buy if we would sell," all over again, although the unsoundness of the theory has been disproven by the facts of history, time and again. He argues that foreign debtor nations must ship us goods in payment of their debts, if we are to collect those debts. The folly of such claim is to be seen when it is realized that the debt is owed by the different governments, and that governments do not own the goods which are exported. The goods are owned by individuals, firms and corporations. The debts are owed in money and the only thing that our debtor governments have in which they can pay is money. Money is raised by governments through taxation, or by borrowing on the strength of taxes yet to be collected. The selling of goods to this country by private parties does not cancel any government's indebtedness to this government."

Of course, the foreign governments cannot raise money except by taxes, and, of course, they do not own the goods held by private persons within the borders. But they must get the gold wherewith to balance their obligations from those who are engaged in a profitable business, including those who directly or indirectly produce to exchange abroad. They do not own gold either. The total gold production from 1493 to 1923 in the whole world was $19,124,397,311. Vast amounts are used in jewelry and arts. In the United States in 1923, in gold and bullion alone there was the total value in gold of $4,490,716,289, so that assuming that none was used here or elsewhere in the arts, and none were lost absolutely or by abrasion, there would now be in foreign nations, mostly privately owned, the total sum of $14,633,681,672. Of course, there is no such sum in gold coin and bullion outside the United States, probably not more than half that sum, and very little of it consists of gold grooves. Foreign obligations on interest on some of the held by the United States amounted to $12,011,410,921. So it is quite evident that those who talk about foreign nations paying up at once in gold are talking rot, even if these nations did not owe a great deal to one another and to private investors than they do to this country.

Suppose they could and did dig up every dollar of the sum in gold and pay it, what would happen? The United States would have an immense surplus and could abolish all taxes for some time. That would solve the revenue question, also the tariff question, for a time at least.

Of course this cannot be done. But in the flux of international trade, where in every legitimate transaction each is better off than before, the foreigners trading with one another and with us, will have a clean profit at the end of the year. They must sell their products or they will have no profits which their governments can tax to get the money to pay the United States. Americans will not trade with them at a loss and they will not trade with us at a loss. Money is simply a medium of exchange. It is the counter whereby trade is carried on. Nor does it make any difference whether the goods from the debtor nations are traded with Americans, or with foreigners whose governments owe us nothing, provided that these other peoples can dispose of extra goods here. The matter will be settled by bills of exchange and a balance will be struck. If we close our markets and prevent Americans from getting good bargains with foreigners we bankrupt them and lose what they owe us and our own profits, for foreign nations cannot get blood out of a turnip. International bankers know this. Others are beginning to learn it, and what troubles the Economist still more, many manufacturers, as Fennelly points out, are beginning to realize it.

That is why the American Economist, organ of the greatest protectionist organization on earth, says that the danger to its system from this situation is real and no economic scrambling can obscure this fact.

WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
N.Y. Service Writer.

WASHINGTON—While Secretary of the Navy William, whose department runs the Virgin Islands, doesn't admit responsibility on his part for the deplorable conditions which Judge Lauran J. M. Mahan charges exist there, he does not seem to deny truthfully that especially the island population has been so far from the United States that the group over from Denmark is not. Commemorative medals aren't that there.

In 1922, before the effects of American rule had had time to make themselves felt, the islanders' exports to the country amounted to $2,276,512. Those for 1924 were $257,051.

That the decline was due to a lack of manufacturing doesn't necessarily follow. To some extent it certainly doesn't follow.

The application of American laws to insular industries and people have been to blame for the decay of the once busy, prosperous port of St. Thomas, the islands metropolis, until today it seldom is visited except by a very small, seasonal party of tourists.

Formerly a stopping place for the fast ships of sea mail lines, it is not now touched by one of them, and there is almost wholly gone. It is now a remote, remote, remote place.

The legislation which wrought this ruin was not of the islands' making.

It is the work of a Congress in Washington of whose members few care that the Virgin Islands on the map, without hunting and gunning, are probably the most beautiful islands in the world.

The United States government took an interest in the Virgin group and the people, who for centuries in their interest and turned their eyes to the United States as a shining colony. This country put them under the charge of a naval governor and for a time they had for husband and wife; and THE DIVORCE MORTGAGE COMPANY, a corporation, Defendants. THE STATE OF IDAHO SENDS WRITINGS TO THE ABOVE NAMED DEFENDANTS.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Eleventh Judicial District of the State of Idaho, in and for the County of Twin Falls, and answer the complaint filed herein within twenty days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this district, or if served outside of this district within forty days.

The said action is brought for the purpose of foreclosing a real estate mortgage made, executed and delivered by John Vreugdenhil and Mollie Vreugdenhil, husband and wife, to the above named plaintiff, which mortgage covers certain real property situate in the City of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and particularly described as follows:

PUBLIC FORUM

There are three vacancies on the school board to be filled at the election on Tuesday, September 1. Of the candidates for these offices, Mr. A. J. Peavey is running for a three-year term and Mrs. W. Z. Smith for one year.

Those supporting the candidacy of Mrs. Peavey and Mrs. Smith for the school board feel that there are many reasons why women should be represented upon that body.

One of the six members on the board, three before an election, one of those being Mrs. Scott, the only woman member. It would seem that the board in fact, and two women would be a fair representation of the school patron.

Women of broad education, who are property owners and mothers of children in school would appear to be most desirable members of the board, which is responsible for the education of the children of the community. Both women candidates are well qualified for these important qualifications.
