IDAHO HAS 93 MORE MILES OF U. S. ROADS

Idaho farmers and tourists now enjoy 93 miles more of Federal-aid highways than they did a year ago. This mileage, completed in the year ending June 30, cost a total of $1,212,987, of which the federal government furnished $722,936.

This additional mileage, while a convenience to the tourist in the state, is a godsend to the farmer, according to the Foundation. It is estimated that each and every farmer in this section of the country averages 60 tons of farm products hauled to market and nine tons of feed, fuel, fertilizer, machinery, supplies, etc., from town.

STANDARDIZATION OF BEANS

The commercial dry edible bean marketing of the United States returns to the farmer over $50,000,000 annually. It goes to the ultimate consumer largely in its original form and constitutes one of the important staple food products.

Equitable standards are based on actual conditions of production, marketing, practices and conditions. For the purpose of obtaining the essential facts relating to such conditions, practices, and requirements in the bean industry, as they relate to standardization, studies were undertaken by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture in 1923.

The commercial production of dry edible beans is confined largely to seven states: New York, Michigan, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, New Mexico and California, with small quantities produced in Wisconsin, Arizona, Wyoming and possibly other states.

Engineer Thompson Crushed to Death on Rogerson Branch

Brave Trainman Sticks to Place Until Throw Out in Opinion; Unintentional Error of G. W. Elice Who Was Contributing Work with Grader Borrowed from the District Is Held Cause of Disaster.

Blind from road grading unintentionally left on the crossing by G. W. Elice and his son, a wife and a half from Twin Falls on the Rogerson branch, caused the death of Engineer E. L. Thompson, who was killed and mangled by a freight train from the tender or tank after he was thrown in the track, according to the finding today of a commission of inquiry of the Oregon Short Line railroad, held in the private car of Supt. C. E. Johnson, Coroner P. J. Grossman stated that the investigation is being conducted in order that the cause of the accident should be ascertained.

Change Early Hours. Contrary to early opinion, the investigation of the accident did not jump but that when the engine was in the left, he was thrown in the opposite direction, through the window and in front of the tank, which was shifting along the track as the engine was pushing in his face, making six breaks in his jaw and cheek bones, crushing his nose, and shattering his teeth, both arms and left thigh. Although his head felt like a hammer, he refused to give up, and although he was not wanted in his face, it was the fact that he was refusing to give up, and although he was not wanted in his face, it was the fact that he was refusing to give up.

Prize Here for Frankness. The testimony of Mr. Elice and that of the witnesses corroborated at every point where they gave evidence in common and the investigators complimented him with his evident honesty of spirit and his unimpaired state of facts. Mr. Elice said that he had thought to get district aid for the road, which was at times impossible in bad weather and falling, finally decided to contribute some work to fix it up. He and his son, with two boys, worked a day and a half but that finished a short time before the train passed from Rogerson. They did not think of the possibility of anything they had done causing trouble. Immediately after the wreck Mr. Elice hurried to the scene and searched for the evidence of the trainmen and the engine. The name statement he did at the investigation. "The worked hard," trainmen said, "getting the engine out of the dead engine. It is a body that involuntary errors of this kind are common where unskilled work on a crossing, while contractors are experienced. Immediately after the side of the rails with shovels."

Train in Good Shape. Road Menkman said that the train had picked up a car of wheat and an engine at Rogerson, and at that time he had to make the sidetracks which they found were perfect. The track was in good condition, he said. He told about the inquiry of passengers to know whether they were hurt, how he sent them to town in autos and how the baggage was handled. His baggage was handled in and how the Thompsons' body was sent to the hospital in the fact hope that it had some life.

Those conducting the inquiry besides Mr. Dell, were D. E. Chalmers, trainmaster; H. C. Johnson, division engineer; J. W. Altshoff, division superintendent of the railroad, and S. W. H. Graves, president of the public. The track was not in shape before noon today by the workmen, which came down from Rogerson, no repairs could be returned on schedule then. The engine was moved up to one side in order to get it back after the train had gone by, and haul it to the yards in the Gate City.

The Early Story. The accident came down from Bogertville last night and began working at 1 o'clock this morning, straddling up the engine and getting it back on the track. It had run about 100 yards along the track when it left the track, and the engine turned on its side when it came to a point where the underlying ground seemed to give. The engineer and trainman stayed by their posts until the fact was finally ascertained on the engine left the track.

Engineer Thompson jumped toward the south or right side and in away from the direction in which the engine was falling. He apparently fell between the rails, then fell back on his head, the legs were pinned under the boiler and his skull and chest crushed by crushing force. The body of the engineer a short time afterwards.

Train foreman, who escaped unhurt, ran back along the train to the combination passenger and freight car on the right side, where the trainman and two passengers were seated. Roadmaster Guy Blinn, who left the engine cab to ride in the passenger car for the purpose of observing the condition of the road while traveling. Mr. Hatelund called attention to the condition of the road and said that the thing was over so quickly that he could not get the details. He was not clear at the time as to whether he had jumped or was thrown from the train.

Roadmaster Hoffer said that the train was running at a rate of 20 to 25 miles an hour at the time it reached the crossing. The road was in good shape at the south. He worked with Coroner Lambert King and the brakemen in the investigation. The engine was in good shape at the south. He worked with Coroner Lambert King and the brakemen in the investigation.

Engineer Thompson came here a year ago from Chemung, Ohio, he had been for a number of years in the service of the Oregon Short Line, with which he stood high in the estimation of officials. He lived at 1202 Riverside avenue east, and after the death of his wife, now made his home with his two daughters, aged 14 and 16 years, and a son, 12 years old. His mother, Mrs. Mollie Roberts of Glenn Ferry and his father, John, are both now 75 years old.

It Wasn't Here. I was on a single car one evening. A big upward looking suitcase fell into the aisle just behind my seat. I began counting and going madly until I reached to me about my baggage being in the way. At last I determined to make the first remark to the next person passing that way.

A young man stopped and looked in a displaced manner at the suitcase beside me, so I said: "If that were mine I would move it, but it isn't."

I was much embarrassed to have him reply: "Well, it's mine and I can move it."—Chicago Tribune.
