

ROAD TO FINANCE THE QUINQUENARY

President Expects Committee of Nine to Pay Own Expenses; Members Have Much Data for Study Over the Week-End Work Is Under Way.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 19.—President Coolidge has informed his special aircraft investigation board that it may finance itself.

It was explained at the White House today that the committee cannot be made by such bodies from government funds without congressional authorization.

Members of the board believe their work can be greatly facilitated if they educate themselves on the broad aspects of the issues involved in the existing aviation controversy.

With instructions from President Coolidge to investigate aviation's place in our system, the committee is already being made of the report of the emergency board on the relative value of the battleship versus the airplane.

Members of the board believe their work can be greatly facilitated if they educate themselves on the broad aspects of the issues involved in the existing aviation controversy.

Level, Massachusetts. "I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in one of the books that you send around and I felt very good after I had taken a couple of bottles of it. I feel well as if I had never been in hospital and feel pretty well as if I had never been down to nothing. I was weak and had to be in bed almost all day. I had dizzy and faint spells, pains in my head and lower part and was so nervous I could not bear my children around. I had to be in bed. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped other women as it did me. I do all my own work now and feel so well. I had to be in bed about it and my sister, my aunt. — Mrs. OLIVE AYER, 19 Howard Street, Lowell, Massachusetts.

SOME STRICTURES ON OUR COLLEGES

Not every critic of our colleges and college men lifts up his voice to swell the chorus of those who are declaring that the present generation of undergraduates is beating all the records of fathers and grandfathers for scholarship, application to studies, correctness of behavior and sanity of outlook.

We give the floor to a distinguished educator whose official position unfortunately cramps the style of his public utterances and robs them of the piquancy which enlivens his private conversation. This critic keeps in close touch with the activities of scores of American colleges, and has a familiarity with European universities which is scarcely less intimate and extensive.

"The reason our colleges do not give undergraduates sounder education is that only about half of them want to be educated. They go to college from a great variety of motives; a few really yearn for higher education, are fitted for it and are prepared to work to get it; many enter simply because, in their set, it is the thing to do and their fathers and mothers insist upon it. Others go for athletics, for campus activities, for club and fraternity life; from every motive, indeed, except for a chance to study and to be taught. Neither they nor their parents desire to have any real pressure put upon them.

"College faculties know only too well that it is next to impossible to impart much sound learning to more than a small proportion of the young men under their charge. Same time ago they faculty gave it up as a hopeless job. Now they are saying to one another, 'If we cannot educate these youngsters, we will do the next best thing. We will try to keep them rationally entertained during their four years in college. We may not give them much, but it will be better than nothing.' Hence many of the snar courses, hence much of the superficial and showy or futile work.

"We seem to be drifting toward the English classification of pass men and honor men, a system under which a very moderate amount of work is assigned to those who merely desire to win a degree with as little labor as possible, and intensive training, involving the closest academic honors. I have in mind one American college in which a modification of this system is being tried; but it is still too soon to say how it will work out."

In considering these strictures it should be borne in mind that they were made by a critic who had European standards before him, who was thinking of conditions in English and Continental universities whose students come to them so thoroughly prepared, especially in classics and in philosophy, that many enter the first-year class about on a level with the American sophomore, or even junior, classman. There is small room for wonder that young men who enter upon a university career with such a formidable educational armament, who have been trained in systematic and thorough methods of study and who have been taught to depend upon themselves rather than upon question-answering instructors and assigned sections of specified textbooks, should go further and deeper than American-trained boys of equal intellectual capacity. The young people of any age are the product of the civilization into which they were born. We may take them to task for the set of conditions they help to create for the next generation, but we can neither blame nor praise them for those of ancestral making.

Without attempting either to refute or to discredit the witness we have quoted, we must confess that our sympathies are, for the most part, with our own boys. Education of the privileged classes had for centuries been a vital activity in Europe when in the New World it was still a rare adventure, merely a softer phase of the struggle for existence on the edge of a vast wilderness. Give our American kids another hundred years and there will be a very different tale to tell. —Saturday Evening Post.

THE HONESTY-TESTERS

SYNOPSIS would court the roll of crisp new bills that Jack carried in an inside vest pocket; eager to display the lot of provisions and supplies which had been bought with part of our earnings.

"We must have been fifty a mile from the house when I discovered the first evidence of life. A little figure darted out of the shack on Twenty-two to the edge of the bluff; then for a few minutes sank from sight; then reappeared on our side of the stream and entered into the shack on Fourteen. Almost at once he came out, carrying a door; pushed it a moment, then swooped like wild things about the trail toward us. And we stood up on the top of the bluff and waved our hats and yelled like mad, until even Spout down on a necked Two must have heard us. And old Buck and Bright, their pulsating souls at last awakened by that strange power that lies at the front of all creation and which in religiosity and love and all the things of affection which lie between—or perhaps it was by the smell of the hayrack at their own stables—jolted forth in a most surprising gallop, their hoofs clack-clacking and their trappings clashing in the whifflores as they ran.

"Sow we came up, and there were the girls, wonderful, lithe, sunburned, radiant, hatless, gophers' hair streaming in the golden light of the out-of-day, arms extended, white teeth gleaming, measureless, invaluable, in the beauty and wonder of their young womanhood!

I Held Her and Kissed Her and Would Not Let Her Go womanhood! We sprang from the wagon and I saw how lithe and beautiful—Jean ran straight into my arms. Not Marjorie—I didn't see what became of her—I didn't get to hold her. Jean ran straight into my arms and held her there, held her with the strength of ten weavers' harvesting in my muscles and all my young manhood in my veins; held her and kissed her and would not let her go. For the best time since we had been little outdip together playing by the dam where the water wheel across the river tossed its dancing diamonds in the air, I held her and kissed her and would not let her go.

Across the fields of crisp and brittle grass we tramped together, disregarding the roll and the measureless acres of that sunset world as we swept onward on the roadside of our happiness. Her firm little arm pressed tight against mine and I held her young together in the rhythm of our stride. And when I looked down in her face I saw the light of the stars in her eyes, the glint of the setting sun.

But in that most poetic moment of her life Jean bent to be poetic. Once more she slipped and I caught her. "See, it's good to have you home again," she said. And in what should have been my answer hour I found myself wondering whether Jean's passion was love or just plain loneliness.

CHAPTER IX That was a busy night on Fourteen. The girls confessed that they had been on the lookout for as nice the first of the month. They had even borrowed Spout's trap guns so that they could sweep the horizon to the eastward far beyond Mrs. Alton's.

RIM TO RIM BRIDGE WILL BE ERECTED

President of American Association of Civil Engineers Makes Report Which It Is Felt Will Speedily Result in Construction Over the Snake River Near Blue Lakes Without Investment of Local Capital; Tolls to be Low.

No local organization for the purpose of securing a franchise and raising money here to help construct the bridge across the Snake river at Blue lakes is necessary, should the recommendation of Dr. D. B. Nicholson, president of the American Association of Civil Engineers that they construct the bridge here by his agency, as it is expected that they will be, it was stated here today. Some time ago a number of local citizens organized a tentative association which it was planned to incorporate and which will be the basis for the plan now drawn by Arthur Shad W. Hoight, but the capitalists, by the President of the Association, will do all the financing. The project is the largest bridge in the world, the largest bridge in Australia and the largest bridge in the world.

Method of Financing. In case of construction of a bridge of this magnitude over the line between two counties, it is necessary for the commissioners of both to act in concert. The board on the right bank of the river going down, in this case the Jerome county board, must take the initiative. The two boards are to get together and draft the details of the plan in consultation with the state engineer, and the state highway department supervisor the construction. Dr. Nicholson said tolls would be reasonable.

Dr. Nicholson said that he would recommend the financing of money for building the big structure to state capitalists who are to be represented and in whose behalf he made the trip to Twin Falls. He stated positively that he was convinced that it would be a paying proposition. The bridge can be completed within a year, he said, and when finished will be the sixth longest structure of the kind in the world and the longest in the United States west of Philadelphia, which is the longest bridge on earth.

The plan to finance the bridge, declared James A. Cron today, discloses the report made last evening to business men here by Dr. D. B. Nicholson, after he had returned from a trip to Jerome. "In fact," he continued, "it is a question of its construction as I am that I am doing." Similar sentiments were expressed by all who were present at the conversations with Dr. Nicholson after his final investigations Friday afternoon.

Will Recommend Investment. Dr. Nicholson said that he would recommend the financing of money for building the big structure to state capitalists who are to be represented and in whose behalf he made the trip to Twin Falls. He stated positively that he was convinced that it would be a paying proposition. The bridge can be completed within a year, he said, and when finished will be the sixth longest structure of the kind in the world and the longest in the United States west of Philadelphia, which is the longest bridge on earth.

They say our Nut is too small, But we sell more than they all, For our Nut the house wife does call. She says there must be something wrong with their liver, If they think we'll burn their nut and shiver, They say there is such a difference as between an auto and a flivver. They also worry about Detweiler's Egg. What they want is to pull our leg, They'd better go back and sit on a log, And let Detweiler care for his Nut and his Egg. If you want to get out of the Nut, You can do it by burning Spring Canyon Nut. The Old Lady said it was to laugh, When you can buy ten dollar nut for seven and a half. Even the Farmers say, Det is alright in his way, He knows how to make the Wheat Brawl pay. They started to pay a dollar and eleven, He got them to pay a dollar forty-seven. So all you farmers have to do is hold your feet to the fire, And sit and wait for the price to go higher. This is what the Bankers say, The Old Man is not far out of the way, He'll see that the farmer gets fair play, And has more money wherewith his notes to pay. Now, Bro. Farmer, nothing is too good for you to eat, You can afford to eat the choicest meat, If you let Old Man Detweiler buy your wheat. If you want to do your best for body and soul, You want to buy Spring Canyon Coal. Where there is a will there is a way, But you can't make hens lay by feeding them hay; In order to produce the cash, Feed Detweiler's Laying Mash. The price is only $2.75 cash.
