OLD WEST BELIEVES IN "THE DESERT FLOWER"
The real west was sought out to furnish backdrops for Colleen Moore's latest Paramount offering, "The Desert Flower," at the Orpheum theatre tomorrow.

"When it was necessary to show life in a railroad construction camp at a western terminus, the producers were able to locate just such a camp forty miles from Barstow, in California.

These scenes were prepared with players picked primarily for their knowledge of western customs and quirks, so that "The Desert Flower" truly holds up the mirror to nature and is atmospherically and, as to characterization, as true a picture of untrammeled life in the west that was as it is possible to present upon the screen.

Scientific Future Looms
The matrimonial reports of our day are undertaking to put love on a sound scientific basis. Let us skip a few hundred years and behold the synthetic marriage of a youth and a maid of some generation to come. The young man, armed with a stethoscope, a tape measure and the means of making a blood test, goes to call upon the lady whose charms have attracted him. He taps a vein, listens to the thump of her heart and to the wind whistling through her bronchial tubes and ends his labors with a careful examination of the soles of her feet. Satisfied with the showing, he makes a request for a glass of water, only to be denied through a strainer which prevents the young woman's saliva from entering the glass.

This Did Not Happen in Twin Falls County

Dear Subscriber: A few days ago we sent a letter to ten of our most valued readers, reminding them that their subscriptions were in arrears, and gently hinting that an early remittance would be appreciated.

Five of them promptly paid up. One replied that he would pay "next week"—but he died the following Saturday. Another said he would pay "the next time he saw us." He went blind. And yet another telephoned that he would "run down and pay some time." He has the rheumatism now and can't even walk. The ninth said he would "see us in—first." He got religion that night and will not be able to keep the appointment.

We have not heard from the tenth one yet, and the tenth one happened to be you. We have not taken your name off the list as yet because it seems "sorter" natural to see it there. We have been pretty good sports to leave it there all this time. Won't you be an equally good sport and see that it stays "nut"? You are sure you will. Let us hear from you.

Come in and see us rather than wait for the collector to call. We will help you by paying up promptly and we in turn will give you a better newspaper.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN
To Dr. W. D. Caldwell, well of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be "stirred up" with cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and castor oil. While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purg" or "physic" every time was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only cures a gentle, easy bowel movement, but it will also take a few months before another dose is necessary. Besides, the medicine is so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any drug store that carries Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See for yourself!

IDAHO PUBLICITY AT OMAHA

Few residents of Twin Falls have really stopped to give careful consideration to the fact that the Twin Falls Post of the American Legion together with the other Legion men of Idaho will do this state much good at Omaha next month when the National Reunion of the Legion is to be held there. It is too bad that so few of us have really given any attention to this fact because we are the people who will suffer because of this negligence. Idaho needs advertising and publicity more perhaps than any other state in the union and yet here is a chance for a little co-operation with an organization which is ready and willing to do most of the hard work without any compensation and yet we sit idly by and refuse to co-operate.

If we were long-headed business men as we sometimes think we are we would chip in small sums instead of making the Legion sell dollar tickets to a dance in order to raise some cash for such a splendid cause. Let's sit down and write our checks for what we feel would be our just share of this investment for a greater Idaho. Business houses have long since learned to fix a given sum for advertising purposes because it brings back results from ten to one hundred fold in new and increased business. Just so will some cash spent with the Legion men at Omaha bring home returns to the Gem State in increased population and new citizens.

Let's do our part before we forget it.

"WHY IS A LAWYER?"

BY JAMES J. WHELAN.

If iconoclasts keep on and people believe all that the idol destroyers imply in what they say, this world will have a lot of people who will be very suspicious of one another. For eventually they will attack everybody in all professions and callings.

Upton Sinclair, clever, but suffering from mental and moral stagnation, in "The Brass Check," made a sweeping assault on all newspapers, save and except the organs of the socialist party. Casting about for further worlds to conquer, where like Sodom, there would be no exception to iniquity, he picked on the colleges and universities, and wrote "The Goose Step." Since there was no regular socialist colleges to except from his attacks, he was in clover.

Then came "The Gentleman With the Duster," and attacked the political and religious leaders of this, and other lands in the most sweeping way. Now comes another errant knight, William Johnston, and in an article in the current issue of Collier's, reproduced Tuesday, assails the legal fraternity in the most caustic manner in an article headed "If I Were a Lawyer."

Part of all that these iconoclasts say is true. There are too many newspapers influenced by predatory interests, there are too many colleges that fear to put into effect great reforms such as Woodrow Wilson started at Princeton; too many lawyers are falling below the professional ethics of their profession. But this sort of thing is true of the medical profession and all other professions and occupations.

True if a person wants something crooked done in a legal, or rather illegal way, he goes to a dishonest lawyer; if he wants something done in the way of unlawful medical practice, he goes to a crooked doctor; if he wants something done in the way of improper propaganda, he goes to a purchasable editor, and if he wants to locate a still in the sagebrush and has no property of his own, he applies to a susceptible owner of the land. He will find an occasional person without conscience among all of the classes named and among others.

The mischief of the sweeping attacks like that of Johnson in Collier's is that it prevents people outside the profession of law, who do not realize the situation, from co-operating to bring about the reforms which the greatest lawyers, like J. W. Davis and Elihu Root, are seeking to accomplish. All those ignorant of conditions confronting the bar and existing in the profession are apt to be deceived and think, like the critics of old, that "Nothing good can come out of Nazareth" and that reform of abuses of the bar is hopeless. And the same is true of all other sweeping criticisms of other professions.

On the other hand, unfair attacks will make the small or the crooked lawyer, more frantic in maintaining the very abuses which the better class seek to reform.

The trifling character of the arguments of Johnson against the legal fraternity, may be judged by the fact that he seeks to prove that lawyers have "a very low place in public opinion" by citing the number of attorneys who leave it to enter other lines of business. Should he write an article castigating farmers he would probably point to the movement to towns to draw the same conclusion. People leave farms and law-offices for precisely the same reason that the person leaving feels himself better qualfied for some other particular thing. He may be right or he may be wrong in his judgment, but that is why he leaves.

Pursuing this line of thought (?) Johnson mentions the head of the United States Steel and many transportation companies as having ex-lawyers at their head. Yet E. H. Gary and his boosters refer to him as Judge Gary, and the friends of R. S. Lovett, refer to him as Judge Lovett, indicating that they consider a legal title of higher esteem than the title of president of a great corporation.

The fact is that lawyers are human, that the bar has many and grave abuses, that the tendency to defend the judicial emine by whomsoever worn as sacred is dangerous and unpatriotic and that reforms are need in many things. But lawyers are neither better nor worse as a class than other people.

This is the idea of the writer, who is not a lawyer, but who has, by intimate acquaintance and association, had many opportunities to observe the lights and shadows of the profession of law.

WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS LETTER

WASHINGTON—Major Frank State, who directs training for the National Association of Officers and Chaplains, isn't altogether in a club of gentlemen when he tells of the dangers of cleaning things with gasoline.

Maybe he wants to throw a scare into the public, so it will take its clothes from its associates' members to be cleaned, instead of trying to clean them off.

"What do you mean, dry liquid?" I interrupted. "Dry like this."

"I mean it's a liquid with no water in it," Frank explained. "That's why we say 'dry cleaning.' Like many dry liquids, gasoline's capable of producing electric sparks on being rubbed about. Didn't you ever notice that gasoline delivery wagons drag a chain ning the ground? That's to carry off electric charges before they accumulate and blow us away."

"Right," I said. "If you wool will generate friction electricity, too, Frank went on, and in a flash gasoline is dangerous. It produces sparks, often a quarter of an inch long—equal to a 500-volt spark."

"If the air's damp enough and the stuff that's being cleaned is damp enough also, the spark is displaced and no harm's done. But if there's a little moisture about, as on hot, dry summer days or cold, dry winter ones, the spark sets off a fire, and you know the rest of the story."

"First-class dry cleaning plants," related State, "do their work in an atmosphere of about 75 per cent moisture. To be better and sure insist on 70 per cent."

"I take hourly moisture readings and whenever the air's water content falls below the safety mark I'm critically dampened at once. Even at that careful cleaners have all their general ground connected to carry off any electricity that may be generated despite their precautions."

WASHINGTON—The Coolidge, you might say, may be the most remarkable Jeweler, ever entering all the stores the papers tell of their narrow escapes from being hit by automobiles.

"Twice, just before he left Washington for Stratford, the president had to jump like a kangaroo to dodge speeding cars."

Mrs. Coolidge barely missed being run over on one of her family's stays at the summer capital, and since their return here one of the presidential cars was so close that the driver responsible for it actually was arrested, which means there was no joke or exaggeration about her car's adventures were genuinely and thoroughly scared, and maybe the president was, too.

THE truth is the Coolidge automobile is no more reckless than any other peddler, but where as the ordinary individual is endangered right along without attracting the least attention, when it happens to the president or his wife it creates a sensation.

They have a bodyguard with them also, to make an effective job of "cutting corners and cutting the way to a pedestrian," even when an alarm is made, the average hotel required in Washington is about $50, but when Nathan D. Smith did it, to the property of President Coolidge's life, he had to put up $2500.

PROBABLY Nathan will be more careful after this. He may never cross the 15th street line again, but he always will be afraid he will.

Some authorities say these weeks President Coolidge took around the capital area a restraining influence on all the drivers in Washington. They never know what minute he'll come up dead again.

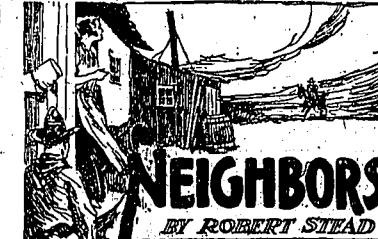

If there's anything in this that it might be a good idea to keep him traveling from city to city, turning up each week or two, unannounced in new places, to put the fear of God in local drivers' hearts by a series of random trips in the worst of their automobiles.

THE man it would be better to see how Nathan D. Smith's experience works on him first.

Locks Her Baby in Chicken Coop

When Mrs. Violet Stiles of El Paso, left her three-year-old son, Juan, at home alone, she forgot to lock the chicken coop, the child crept in and was locked in there. She was in the yard. So the mother decided the thing to do was to lock the coop instead of the child in a chicken coop. Neighbors became very uneasy and offered to admit the child. City health officials obtained the mother's consent to an adoption.

NEIGHBORS

BY ROBERT STAD

AUTHOR OF "THE COU PUNCHER" AND "THE HONEYEATERS"

CONVICT BY ROBERT STAD

But all of Spoor's urging-out got plodded stolidly along the white trail, now barely distinguishable from the gray wetness of the plains. Flakes of snow were falling, and on every side the path of light surrounded us, drawing its circle close and close. The trail soon branched, but the surrounding snow was loose and deep, and to make us Jeko would have to plunge the horses through it, at considerable risk of upsetting his cutter. The old land gully, however, led us to a moment for such a connection as that. Switching his horses from the trail he cut out at them with his whip, and they started by us, throwing a snowy spray like a torpedoes that would have killed us.

But as it is so often the occasion that makes the man, so now was it the occasion that proved Spoor's resolution. Gliding over the shoulder of the jumper he ran along the tongue and, seeing himself upon the edge of the precipice, he began to heave and grate with an outcry now and then. Whether it was a protest against the liberty which Spoor had given him or whether it was that the legs about his sides braced back memories of youthful days when he had been a member of the Y. M. C. A. team from the high school through the pasture field of the parental herd, matters not; the fact is that Spoor's horse broke into a most unprecedented gallop, and his mate, willfully followed suit. They were just in time to prevent Jeko's party from getting on the trail ahead of us, and in great haste we crept to the rear.

"Proceed promptly," shouted Spoor. "Fourteen hours!" But our triumph was short-lived. Unaccustomed to such speed, the oxen presently began to wobble in their harness and suddenly floundered on the trail.

"Hard sport, hard sport!" Spoor shouted. "You know how to get directions were misinterpreted. Over the jumper, flinging his freshly murdered and other contents into the snow, he sprang to the front and wrenched the topgus from the wreck, and they continued onward in great haste."

Spoor jumped free and barely escaped a defunct flourish of Jeko's heels as they flipped by him. Heutzel he caught up and followed.

"I told the badly folks to swing hard sport," he explained, "and instead that they slithered off to the steepest."

At last the shack on Fourteen came into view, and to our great surprise, it was empty. The snow had melted, and we came up close to saw a number of jumpers and balaclava about, and the tracks of many feet in the snow. "What a fine party!" said Spoor, "and amazing one. In the principal room a table had been built and now it was covered with a red cloth. The room was decorated with the back the yellow gilt of two great oil lamps, one of which I recognized as the one which I had seen in the corner of Spoor's shack on section Two. I had just time to catch a glimpse of a framed wedding cake in the room and the door was closed by a turkey at an end when Jean brought me out of my trance.

"That's wonderful, Frank—wonderful to think of it, and all of them so poor! Why, even there's Mr. Steadwell's wife. The whole community was present. They had warned to our presence in our absence, bringing the best of the country and the best of them, and now they were lined up around the walls, gully-faced but delighted."

"I said the whole community was present, but I was wrong. Mrs. Alton and the little boy, Jerry, were not present. They had been invited, but Spoor would have an opportunity. They must not have known about it. It was the explanation. But Spoor had originally been paid to make sure that all the others in the district should know. Why had he omitted Mrs. Alton and Jerry? It was in the puzzle of Spoor's peculiar attitude toward the widow on Eighteen. When we were settled Mr. Locke announced a dinner and the various women sobbed us for a minute, but it was only a minute. The situation was not so serious as it appeared and scalped potatoes and boiled turnips and creamed carrots would have stirred to jumpy hearts much happier than the women's. The turkey was a magnificent bird; the turkey was not entirely stripped. I remember that one of the little Hansens, venturing up the Oliver Street, with a demand for more, was solemnly rapped on his yellow head by a druggist in the heavy hand of Ole, but the children as a whole were well behaved, allowing for the example set them by their elders. Then we had beef and such and such and apple pie and cheese, and nuts and candy for everybody. Jean and I mentally fluctuated between amazement at the generosity of the local and speculation as to whence it had come. No one but me saw the secret, but we did learn that Spoor had a fat check from England just before Christmas, and that Mrs. Burke's cooking of turkey and apple pie was the talk of Humboldt county in Iowa, and that Mrs. Brown positively refused that place to anyone who had come to making plump pudding, and so we formed our own conclusions.

NEW TAX RULE FOR INCOMES ESTABLISHED

Being Attorney Points Out Latest Ruling of United States Bureau Dealing with Incomes and Losses from Profits Which Will Affect Many Estates.

Leslie J. Aker, well known Idaho income tax expert, was here yesterday on local business and while in the city discussed the recent decision of the United States board of tax appeals in the case of the estate of I. M. Davis, of Dewey, Ore., who he represented and in which the decision favored Davis and eliminated a tax on $15,000 of net profit.

Establishes New Rule. The case establishes a new rule in regard to the sale and reconversion of property either by voluntary assignment or under foreclosure proceedings, and reverses the regulations and rules heretofore adhered to by the revenue bureau.

Davis sold a ranch near Dewey for $30,000 in 1919, on which $15,000 was paid by the purchaser, who defaulted in payment of the balance of $15,000 due. In 1923, the purchaser voluntarily deeded the ranch back to Davis in consideration of the cancellation of the $15,000 indebtedness evidenced by notes and mortgages, and the revenue officials sought to assess income taxes against Davis on the $15,000 payment received from the purchaser on the ranch property, which became a profit to Davis in 1923, when he repossessed the ranch property.

Davis appealed to the United States board of tax appeals and hearing in the case was held at Portland on June 2. This board of tax appeals established a precedent in its determination of this case that will enable many Idaho taxpayers to recover taxes paid upon the theory adhered to by the revenue bureau that payments received from the sale of property became income when the property was repossessed by the former owner.

The board of tax appeals held that the reconversion of property, either by voluntary assignment or by foreclosure sale, did not involve any taxable profit at the time of reconversion or until the property was again sold or disposed of, at which time gain or loss might be ascertained. On account of the importance of the principle involved in this case, the revenue bureau officials sought the appeal through a circuit court, but the commissioners of internal revenue has finally announced his acquiescence in this decision.

U. S. AWAITS FRENCH REPLY ON WAR DEBT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—A high official of the American debt funding commission today swept away doubt concerning the scope of the French debt negotiations, declaring both sides are "working toward a settlement." While no joint session of the French and American commissions is yet definitely scheduled, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary Hoover, and Senator Smoot met Finance Minister Callaux and three members of the French mission at noon to discuss the "safeguard clause."

The American commission, it was said, is awaiting word from the French as to whether they will accept to maximum annual payments of $100,000,000, $100,000,000 or $150,000,000. The amount, it is understood, depends on arrangement of initial terms and the granting of the safeguard clause which would permit suspension of payments in the case of future French financial difficulties. The Americans have balked at the French version of the proposed clause and a mutually agreeable text was to be sought.

PIONEER CITIZEN URGES CELEBRATION THIS FALL

I want to say a word in regard to the matter of the proposed celebration commemorating the completion of the construction work on the Rogerston-Wells road. As stated in my editorial of a few days since, some of our people think it best to have our celebration at the time the new road is connected with the transcontinental line at Wells, so as to permit the bringing in of a train from the west, which will be soon. Others urge that it would be better to wait until trains are ready to run over the new road on regular schedules. The time for the happening of the later event is uncertain, but it will not be earlier than next year. No one knows what the character of the service will be over the new road, whether it will simply the running of local trains between Wells and Twin Falls, or whether there will be through service to the coast.

There are some reasons why we should observe the time when the road is so far completed as to have it joined with the other lines at Wells. Assuming that the occasion would mean a display of what we have here to show to the outside world it must be remembered that about all we have are our crops which, during good years, the fertility of our soil. The fall is the only time of the year when our agricultural products can be shown to advantage. This cannot be done in the springtime.

We are assured that the road will be completed as suggested about November first. We have the promise of attendance at a celebration of other officials of the Union Pacific system and also have the assurance that there will be present a strong delegation of business men representing the San Francisco chamber of commerce. There are reasons why it is of interest to the people of this section for our committee to have an early conference with the railroad officials in regard to possible further railroad construction and it is also deemed important that we bring to the attention of the business men of the San Francisco territory what we have here to send to them and what Southern Idaho means to them as a market for what they have to sell. There is no question for this section as to the display that now and I believe that to put it off for another six months, and perhaps a longer period, would deprive us of some of the benefits and advantages we are so anxious to secure.

Instead of a fitting celebration will be small. A few hundred dollars would cover it. I am sure that the benefits to be derived would largely outweigh the expense. There is an abundance of time to make the needed preparations.

Why wait? M. J. SWEETLEY.

HARRIS IS SENTENCED TO PRISON

Young Man Who Was Convicted of Manslaughter For Killing of Clifford Zacharias Is Given From Six Months to Ten Years in Penitentiary; Parole Pardon Is Denied.

Henry Harris was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of not less than six months or more than ten years, with parole for three years, by Judge W. H. Babcock, who ruled the defendant and his wife guilty of manslaughter in the killing of Clifford Zacharias, an attorney at law, on the morning of May 15, 1925.

On the evening of court and the hearing of the case, Mr. Wolfe addressed the jury in defense of his client, saying that in addition to the conditions named by him when he was arrested, he had no other conditions. ## Opening the Game Season

By FRED E. DRABEK, Filer, Idaho.
Hurry boys, and get things ready for tomorrow is the day that we open up the season on the Pleasant and the Jay.

Get your gun and ammunition while the cold winds from the north put some sting in the breeze. Make her shine and gladden bright.

For there sure will be some popping round the breaking of the day. It will sound like Dixie's Army to the Pleasant and the Jay.

Give your dog an extra pat. Give yourself an extra pat. And be thankful you are living. That you haven't struck the snail.

Get the coffee, and the bacon. Put it on the stove to fry. For you'll need it in the morning. When the birds begin to fly.

Trump the fields and feel the sunshine. Hit your laces with clean fresh air. Just forget your needless worries. When you see them flying there.

Use your limit, get plenty. Use it before you get to the square. You can find you in the bushes. You can see you in the air.

Then go home and talk the story. How he flew ten fathoms high. Almost twisted in the middle. Half way 'tween the earth and sky.

Buy a lucky shot, you get him. Dropping him and did it fair. For there is no doubt about it. You can see him lying there.

Just go on and keep a-living. Through the smiling and the tears. And you'll still be going plenty. For the next ten thousand years.
