TWIN FALLS RATED FIRST

The Babson Financial Map which is just out gives Idaho and Twin Falls a high rating. For the first time in the history of the state this statistician gives Twin Falls a rating ahead of all other cities of the state. Idaho is rated with Florida as one of the states that is in the best financial condition of the 48 in the Union. This speaks very highly for this intermountain region and especially for the Twin Falls tract.

This rating accords somewhat for the many efforts which the chamber of commerce has had for the construction of a Rim to Rim bridge across the Snake river. Three distinct offers have been made and now comes the last two and offer to build same without any local capital whatever. This indicates more than ever that people with means are looking toward Idaho with an idea of investing their cash.

PROTECTING IDAHO PRODUCTS

The complaints frequently filed with the state department of agriculture regarding the inspection of potatoes and other products shipped from the state are based largely either on a lack of understanding of the condition or a reckless disregard for the benefit of the state and the grower in whose interest the measures are passed.

The letter in the Times-Register of today written by W. B. Kjosness, state agricultural commissioner, will shed a good deal of light on the situation, saying as he does therein order for the Idaho producer to compete and place his product on the open market he must have a superior article which the critical buyer can select from in order to maintain his market and price.

The Idaho products, potatoes particularly, go on the market after a long freight haul, entailing considerable expense. Unless the product is good, above the average, the producer will realize little for his effort.

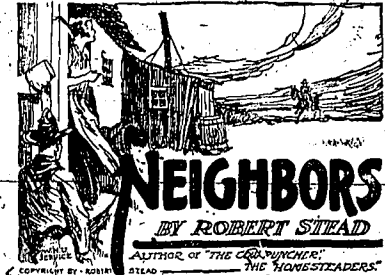

Inspection, grading and selecting and in that way putting a superior product on the market helps to insure a better demand and better price.

Idaho Falls, through the chamber of commerce, has taken the initiative in seeking to help secure a better price and a better market and a better demand for its Idaho potato by making the potato better known.

By using the same methods which have been successfully adopted by the raisin and orange growers of California and the apple growers of Oregon and Washington it is expected to make the Idaho potato, through publicity, as well known and in as much demand as the nationally advertised products of California, Washington and Oregon.

This can be done but only through the cooperative efforts of all interested.

In order to get this movement under way the Idaho Falls chamber of commerce has called a state meeting to be held at Pocatello at a date to be fixed by those interested in potato production and marketing. From Ashton, the head of Snake river, to Weiser on the extreme western edge of the state, encompassing as it does the entire Snake river valley of southern Idaho, for the purpose of completing plans to give the Idaho potato the needed publicity to increase the demand and price and to further the process of orderly marketing.—The Times-Register.

NEIGHBORS

BY ROBERT STAAD
AUTHOR OF "THE CARBUJINER," "THE HONESTADES"

"In the corner opposite to the lamp on the floor on a mat, sat Jean. Her feet were tucked up in front of her and her big, supple fingers were linked about it. It was as she had been to learn a new province here—new people, new problems, new ways of life. Instead of her present activities—More autonomy and more taxes, as I see it. "Yes, I suppose," I groaned. The fact is I know nothing about it. "Would seem more natural to follow the old district boundaries, though," Spoor continued. "They say they are looking to run the province from south to north—as far as the sixtieth parallel. There'll be an election next year. You might try to think about that, Frank. It's a good idea to be in the first parliament of the new province. "The idea struck me as grotesque. I said so. "Why not?" Jean demanded, and there was fire in her voice. "Perhaps not the first parliament, but some preliminary one, called. "Some parliament," I said to myself. "Perhaps, if I had Jean to go with me on a night do—something." Spoor looked a corner clear on the window pane, and said again those about "Snow cold—in snow." It was something about a soldier dying in the trenches, but would not say so. "I was not paying attention; the glimmer of her eyes, the glint of her teeth through her white teeth, was the thing that had me. What this all a thing of mind, or was it body? I had had myself that, and I had been to the top of the mountain. As I looked at Spoor's strong figure, well knit, well clad, I wondered. "In some way we put in the hour. I did not want to see the question of the suspicion which was troubling my mind. It was Jean's move. I waited for her.

CHAPTER XV

Spoor sat his little table with a linen cloth and a pair of brightly colored dishes. The menu was a soup of stewed rabbit, with potatoes and carrots, bread and cheese and tea. Spoor was up to cut the bread and make the tea.

"It was not until we had finished the soup and Spoor had lit a cigar, cigarette, and the dishes were cleared away and some sort of tapestry cover substituted on the table, that Jean saw it to refer to her behavior. "I promised you that if you didn't quit I would tell you all about it," she said, solemnly. "You have been a good boy, and I will keep my word. "By Jove, I haven't got the bullet," Spoor exclaimed. "The question of leaving company, I really should have a man. If the governor saw me he would give me a pair of binoculars, but he would be sure to get by humiliated. You won't mind, will you?"

"You think I'm a wild woman, and pretty much of a fool," said Jean. "I'm not, this is the best invention. Let's sit on the floor." She went back to her station in the corner, and made me sit down beside her. "You think I'm a wild woman, and pretty much of a fool," she said. "You'll give me the whole story with that." "You know, of course, why I cancelled our engagement. We've covered that ground, no use playing it again. I believed I loved Spoor; I hoped he loved me. But since Jean's wedding he had another one. After our talk yesterday I couldn't stand it any longer.

"I woke up this morning, about five o'clock, thinking of him, and as I thought a vague, wild plan which had been haunting me took form. I was humiliated, would climb to the mountain, the mountain would go to Mehemet. You see, I have never been married, as is right in this case. It was a wild idea, but once I got it clearly in my head, there was nothing to do but go through with it. I knew I would be found out; I knew all that you and Jean and Marie would find out. On the way I thought that there comes a time when none of these things matter—do you understand?"

"No, I don't," I said, truthfully enough. The fact is, I couldn't keep my eyes off Jean. Now she was sitting, but she didn't know I watched, her face seemed to take on something of melancholy, but mostly it was bright, responsive, cheerful. She seemed to fit so wonderfully—physically and mentally she fitted so wonderfully into Spoor's plan for the rabbit to stew, and Spoor and Jean chatted on. I was more the audience than one of the players. They were not in any dispute about atmospheric colorings; something that had to do with rabbits, windows, for present light conditions. It was technical, so obviously beyond me that Spoor had mercy and brought Jean back to earth.

"What do you think of it?" she asked. "To be continued."

Early Advertising as Practiced in Old Rome

The restored ruins of Pompeii still show wall inscriptions and regular election campaign posters which often are signed by women. The same notes tell us also about business advertising in ancient Rome. The show windows of Rome during the older time cannot be compared with the show windows in our modern trade world. For a long time it was impossible to buy the necessities of life without first making an expensive, besides, the window signs was milky and dim and often iridescent at any rate not sufficiently clear for the eye. The first step was taken in Frankfurt Zelting as translated for the Milwaukee Journal.

Only trays received a new stimulus by the conquest in the Orient. An ancient said the Romans were the first to adopt the business tricks of their tributaries, the Persians and Asiatic Greeks. They installed regular show windows in their shops. Their goods were safe from their belated buyers and were provided with price tags and merchandise tags and charts indicated on their shop doors. The floor was furnished and their own names.
