Green and red berries and tapers in silver holders were used as effective decorations. Salad was served at the home of Mrs. J. A. Carlson on Seventh avenue east. Hot chicken in crystal holders tied with red and white napkins comprised the table appointments. Dessert was served at Mrs. E. V.  These passions alternately stirred the heart of this bride who viewed her husband with loathing, until—
 Through the wreck and turmoil of a terrible railway accident, the souls of both are translated to another century and sphere—to a tavern on "The Road to Yesterday" in England—where they view life from a new and fearsome angle.
 Swashbuckling sword play—a duel—the burning of a witch—a renewal of love—then happiness. A thrilling, fascinating melodrama, splendidly developed and superbly mounted—a typical Cecil B. DeMille production.

... AT THE... THEATRES

DON Q AT THE IDAHO.
 As a compliment to the Duke of Alba, of Spain, Douglas Fairbanks duplicated one of the finest rooms in the Duke's castle palace as a set in current play, "Don Q. Son of Zorro," now showing at the Idaho theatre, under a screen Exotic Corporation release.

This room, shown on the screen as Fabiano's apartment, is an exact counterpart of the beautiful room of Alba's palace which was built by his ancestors in the sixteenth century. The magnificent features of the room are a decorated ceiling and carved stone frieze. There are many other features of great interest in the picture, which is highly recommended to those who are anxious to study pure types of Spanish architecture.

"Don Q. Son of Zorro" will be in view at the Idaho theatre until next Saturday midnight when it will be replaced by Rex Beach's "The House of Wonders."

CECIL B. DE MILLE MAKES HIT WITH "THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY"
 Just when any other director might overreach himself, Cecil B. DeMille, in his first independently produced, dramatically directed production, "The Road to Yesterday," has exceeded himself. It would seem almost as though the lavish scene production at the Orpheum theatre for a three day run, was the satisfaction of this director's best ambition, in perfectly has every minute detail been transferred to the screen.

It has scenes of lavish splendor never before equaled, even by this same DeMille. It has thrilling battle fields; a burning at the stake in medieval England; a breath taking train wreck; a race against time in a high powered car.

 The story starts out in the Grand Canyon of Arizona. The time is the present day. There is a young and not too happily married couple; an engaged couple; a dowager aunt and a handsome young suitor.
 Through the medium of a train wreck they are suddenly carried back over the years and find themselves living in the early seventeenth century in medieval England. In this past life they assume vastly different positions, and their relations toward one another are decidedly varied from their modern existence.
 The characters are re-created by Joseph Schildkraut, Jeta Gould, Vera Reynolds, William Boyd, and Julia Faye in featured roles. The story is an adaptation from a famous success by Jeanie Macpherson and British Marie Dik.

THE HOME MERCHANT

In these days of out-of-town buying, mail order houses and otherwise, and patronizing the home-to-home canvassers who contribute nothing to the community and who all too often sell an inferior quality of goods at a high price, it is good and refreshing to have a friendly reference to the home merchant, one of the greatest factors in the upbuilding of a community.

Idaho, as a state, is contributing millions of dollars each year towards the upbuilding of its competition through the medium of sending out of the community and state the money which could be invested to better advantage with home and state business institutions.

In order to build up Idaho it will be necessary to build up and help Idaho institutions and along this line the Boise Statesman uses this clever statement as the lead editorial in a recent edition:

"Over in Twin Falls, people are denouncing the activities of those who house agents who skim the cream of profit that should go to the home town merchants.

"The merchants of Twin Falls are probably not unlike business men elsewhere. They get kicked when prices are high. They are denounced if they happen to guess wrong the public demand for a line of goods. And if they do not join associations and contribute funds to the satisfaction of the town hurray boys, they are frowned upon, maybe boycotted.

"But Twin Falls is discovering that, after all, they are community assets. Towns are judged by their downtown districts, by the size of their stores and the service these stores can give. Stores are so important to the prospective citizen as paved streets, schools, churches and factories.

"Twin Falls is learning, too, that the home town merchant is not a parasite, jumping in to levy tribute on the people of the town because he sees a chance. He has come into being naturally in response to a demand. The individual citizen can give neither his time nor his money to the job of gathering from all parts of the country the diverse commodities he requires. The merchant comes to do this for him and for enough other people so he can spread out the cost of his time and his services over many commodities saving the individual from serious burdens. The merchant gives generously for what he gets. He supplies comfortable stores in which people may shop without hurry and annoyance. He provides attractive display of his wares, helping them to decide what they need and want. He has personal knowledge of his customer's problems. When credit is desirable, he gives it. If a customer makes an error, he is ready to correct it by exchange or refund. All his interests lie in the direction of honest service and he knows it. And the money he makes as profit goes back into the community as salaries to employees and expenditures for a thousand local services. He helps create home town wealth.

"The situation is the same in any city you pick. The home town merchant builds up a civic institution on the foundation of honest expectation of business. Making him carry his burdens while the irresponsible mercantile free lance steals away his margin of profit is neither good judgment nor loyalty."—Exchange.

RUSSIAN TRADE GROWS WITHOUT RECOGNITION

That it is not necessary to recognize Russia in order to get a large share of the trade of the people of that country is indicated by the developments of the past year. In its closing review for the year 1925, the "Guaranty Survey" published by the Guaranty Trust company of New York says:

According to a recent press despatch from Moscow, American exports to Russia in 1925 have been three times as great as in the pre-Soviet days and four times the 1924 volume. We sold Russia $102,000,000 worth of goods during the year that is closing, of which $50,000,000 represents cotton, $23,000,000 flour, grain and foodstuffs, and $1,000,000 machinery and similar articles.

The United States has been by far the largest source of Russian imports in 1925, England and Germany coming second and third with exports to Russia of $75,000,000 and $65,000,000, respectively. Russian exports to the United States this year have amounted to only $11,000,000, of which $1,000,000 has been in merchandise.

The Amtorg Trading Corporation, purchasing and selling agents in this country for the various Soviet industrial and commercial organizations, has reported that a contract has been closed with an American motor company for 10,000 tractors, with equipment, plows and spare parts, to be sold to the Russian government for an aggregate amount of $6,000,000. It is reported that shipment of the tractors will be made in time for them to reach the agricultural districts of Russia for next spring's work.

The Soviet budget for 1925-26 amounts to about $1,900,000,000, which represents an increase of nearly 50 per cent over the budget of the preceding year. The budget is balanced by crediting nearly $50,000,000 from loans. Mainly as a result of the re-establishment of the vodka monopoly, the estimated yield of indirect taxes has risen from $250,000,000 in 1924-25 to $475,000,000 for 1925-26.

There is no doubt that the reputed Russian surplus of grain has not materialized in the markets of the world. It is reported that Russian grain exports have stopped because the peasants refuse to deliver at existing low prices. On the other hand, it has been stated that the Soviet crop report for September represented a great over-estimate.

when Polon swung his back into the lighted space in front of the mirror; nevertheless, many people were about for Dawson was a city of sleep-walkers. The sight of a race-track equipped for a flying start, and the nature of his business was suspiciously altered; but his word that Joe and Frank McCaskey had fled by the double rail was enough to down the street, and caused even greater excitement.

HIGH SCHOOL

The Coyote staff held a lengthy conference in the staff room of the high school Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Miss Gladys Colver, one of the faculty advisers, supervised the meeting. Attendance at the meeting was from the various organizations, classes, and other departments took up most of the time. In an effort to make the annual of 1925-26 unique and original the members consulted school principals from several colleges and neighboring town high schools. The old annuals of the local school dating from 1898 were also under inspection.

Lower Interest Rates on Farm Loans

There is a close relation between rates of interest and farm land values. A rate of 8 per cent on present valuations has lifted an interest load of $10 to $15 per acre per year from farms here as compared to an 8 per cent rate on valuations prevailing a few years ago. DRAVO WITH-DRAWS OFFER FOR BRIDGE

Twin Falls and Jerome Commissioners Fix Terms of Franchise So Stern That Dravo Withdraws Offer to Construct Rim to Rim Bridge; Joint-Boards Refuse to Fix Definite Rate of Income.

In announcing the withdrawal of the Dravo Construction company of Pittsburgh from the bid, Judge E. C. Walters, the attorney for the company, made the following statement: The Dravo Company withdrew from the field. The proposed terms of franchise suggested by the county commissioners are such that Mr. Dravo cannot accept them. The proposal of the commissioners does not provide any definite rate of interest return. It is certainly true that any man who will come to Idaho and invest over half a million dollars in building a bridge will want some definite assurance as to what interest return he is to receive on his money. The proposal of the commissioners provides none. This proposal further provides that the county commissioners may, whenever they see fit, revise the schedule of tolls and may do so without any reference as to what interest return it provides for the bridge owner. These are impossible conditions. The attempt to impose these terms on the contractor is a business concern, the deal business on a strict business basis.

It is suggested that a law be passed, authorizing the public utilities commission to control the interest return and toll rates which should be satisfactory to a bridge builder. This is unusual argument, because it is certainly true that, if the people of Twin Falls and Jerome counties have it in their hands to control the toll rates and interest returns through their boards of commissioners, they will certainly see to it that no law is passed allowing this right to be taken away from them, and placing it in the hands of the public utilities commission. The public, as a whole, have in the past been critical of the public utilities commission, and the people will be satisfied that their county commissioners will treat them as well or better than any public utilities commission.

This will be the only toll bridge in the state and any bill sponsored by the bridge company to give the control under the public utilities commission will certainly be opposed by every person in either of the two counties and such a bill would have no possible chance of passage. This condition, it occurs to me, must be rectified by any man of sufficient financial means to build this bridge. If any applicant can be found who will undertake the enterprise under the above conditions, I am for him, and wish him well and I hope that his investment will always be found safe.

Child Smashes Head Through Windshield in Hendon Collision

While seeking to avoid collision with a Jay walker at the intersection of Main avenue and Shoshone streets at 11:20 this morning, Mrs. Betty Scott, currier, attempts ran to her Ford coupe head-on into the Ford coupe driven by Mrs. James A. Campbell. A little girl, daughter of Mr. Campbell, was standing beside her mother and the impact of the car drove her head against the windshield, smashing it. The child escaped without any injury beyond a slight abrasion of the skin on the nose and the lip and was in good humor almost at once, being less broken up than anyone else concerned. Her eyes were slightly injured, but as they were going at a low rate of speed the damage was small.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, who was stricken Sunday night with paralysis of the limbs of her son, Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Jones, is still confined to her bed in a serious condition. Mrs. Jones, whose home is in Killy Alley, Ws, arrived here some time ago for a visit with her son and family. She was apparently well Sunday evening when she retired. As she slept late morning nothing was thought of the matter when she did not get up with the family. Later her daughter-in-law called at her home and Mrs. Jones said she could not get up. She said that she knew she was paralyzed but was not suffering pain and did not call. Her condition remains much the same since.

HOUSE, Idaho, Dec. 21.—The Idaho higher education law may be considered by the mid-winter meeting of the Idaho State Editorial association at Twin Falls on January 5 and 9, 1926.

While some may urge that the merits of the controversy over the state board of education is considered, and that some expression be formed relative to the proposal for abolition of that body, it is more than likely any action by the editors will take the form of a constructive compromise. The all-Idaho congress will be considered at this meeting. It is stated, and the editors will probably suggest some plan to overcome this. The sentiment so far developed seems to favor an educational campaign at home as a starting point, rather than the expenditures of the comparative small sum that may be incurred in costly national advertising.

ing without any follow-up facilities. All editors of Idaho are urged to attend the mid-winter meeting of the Idaho State Editorial association at Twin Falls, on January 5 and 9, 1926.

REMEMBER, how it used to be when you could hardly wait to be invited. And then, sit down and eat several helpings of everything—enjoy every morsel and get up from the table feeling satisfied with the World, happy with everybody and ready for anything.

But what a difference in living when even the slight and small of food steaks you! Never hungry—no matter how tempting the food, is nothing tasting right. And then, after nibbling at a few bites, feeling worse, than ever.

Oh, life is hardly worth living this way. And yet, all in the World the matter with you is that you are starving for rich red blood. And it is everywhere everywhere that S. S. S. helps Nature build these healthy red-blood-cells (the million).

All you need to do to get back that wonderful appetite is to build rich red-blood-cells with S. S. S. It's simple. Just get it, like thousands are doing every day.

See for yourself what S. S. S. will do. S. S. S. means blood with a punch—brings of new life and energy. Get your S. S. S. at any good druggist. The larger size is more economical.
