Wayne B. Wheeler Reveals Work of Organization in Impressing Congress With Necessity of Passing the Dry Statute.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 2.—The Anti-Saloon league voluntarily all of the Volstead act, Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon league, told the senate primary investigating committee today.

In answer to questions by Chairman Reed, the legislative agent of the league told of the methods employed to impress congress with the necessity of enacting the 18th amendment and the correlated enforcement law.

"It is a fact that you wrote the Volstead act and picked out Representative Volstead as the man to champion the legislation in congress," Reed asked.

"No, but we consulted with Dr. Volstead frequently."

"What you desire what amendments should be added to the bill when it was being considered?"

"Only in part."

"You got all you wanted?"

"Not by a long shot. We had not corrected changes two years before we still are after changes."

"So you are still bringing pressure through personally introducing the measure of congress to get legislation?"

"Sure, we are here doing everything we can to get proper legislation enacted."

"What is your opinion," said Reed.

"Well, if the liquor interests will withdraw from the fight, we will win," returned Wheeler.

He said that the Anti-Saloon league has submitted to the committee the record of accounts of the Anti-Saloon league he obtained from files at local headquarters at Westerville, Ohio.

They showed $122,681.11 was spent by the national league in 1921; $45,831 for headquarters expenses; $1,025.61 for the Westerville office; $15,020.04 for the legislative work and the remainder in loans to local state branches which could not support themselves.

Interfered.

The league, said Wheeler, recommends men for appointment to dry enforcement offices but denied it "dictated" appointments.

"Your organization," Reed asked, "interferes with appointment of prohibition enforcement officers, doesn't it?"

"We interfere where they try to put over crooked men on us," Wheeler replied.

"And you interfere to get your own men appointed, don't you?"

"We try to get our own men appointed and they had men from being appointed."

Whether and no money was spent in the Pennsylvania primary because the organization had no money as a candidate. He said the league had spent money in the Oregon, Minnesota and Wisconsin primaries.

CHICAGO HAS MEAT SCANDAL

The conspiracy was carried out by causing the charges against the meat inspector to be reported on the condition of cattle. The amount of money involved was not disclosed.

NOVEL CASE ON TRIAL IN IDAHO COURT

West Side Irrigation District in Attempt to Untangle Finances.

BLACKFOOT, Idaho, July 2.—A novel proceeding is under way in the courts of Idaho by the case of the West Side Irrigation district, a municipal corporation, for which Justice Ralph W. Adair has appointed H. A. Jones as receiver.

According to attorneys this is the first instance known where a receiver has been appointed for an irrigation district and the present and outcome of the case is being watched with much interest.

The irrigation district was formed in 1923 and the lands owned by Schuabacher & Co. of San Francisco, which company holds bonds issued in 1923 and 1924, and with accrued interest and unpaid amounts represent an indebtedness of $140,223.44.

The financial affairs of the district have been impeded by reason of the high cost of maintenance of ditches and canals and the water rights and the lands within the bounds of the district, an represented by stock in the Peoples' bank, a private corporation. Another question to be solved is whether any water stock is appurtenant to the land, and whether under those bonds the land of the bonded indebtedness is to be sold to satisfy the water rights.

The district finances became so involved that the land owners finally petitioned the court for the appointment of a receiver, and in order to obtain the opinion of the various interests, such as the bondholders, the mortgagees, and the land owners, a special meeting was held at Blackfoot yesterday.

The meeting was informally presided over by Justice Ralph W. Adair, of the sixth judicial district, and was largely attended. A committee report.

The bank at Glendora refused to honor the check and Mrs. Dana was obliged to make good to the local institution on the indorsement.

The letter, it is alleged, contained credit for Mrs. McPherson was alive, and the Rev. Mother was shot before a marriage at Angelus, Tex. in 1914, when $100,000 was collected by Mrs. Kennedy and her sister from the sale of the Rev. Mother's body. It is also alleged that the letter had been tampered with to deceive authorities as to the time of its arrival.

County Police.

The county investigation plan to investigate Mrs. McPherson's disappearance and reappearance from being confined in jail, from the time she was arrested at Douglas, Ariz., to the dramatic discovery at Aca, Pinar, Mexico, Village near Douglas.

TWIN FALLS DAILY TIMES

TODAY IS SIGNERS' DAY

One hundred and fifty years ago today, the debate on the Declaration of Independence commenced in the Continental Congress in Philadelphia. Four days before, Thomas Jefferson had presented that immortal document, and in the interval the members had been meditating on the significance of the event its adoption would usher in.

It meant either the making of a nation or the hanging of the men who dared propose it.

It was a challenge to the most powerful nation on the globe with its tremendous resources and its army and its navy.

The men who gathered for the final consideration of the Declaration were of heroic mould but they were human. All of them, in their respective colonies, were men of commanding position, and the signing of a declaration of war on England would make them criminal in the event of failure in the inevitable clash of arms.

Not a few of them were men of great wealth whose property would be confiscated should the Revolution fail and their families, accustomed to comfort and luxury, reduced to poverty.

Looking in upon the debate, one familiar with the significance of American names, would have been impressed by the presence of John Hancock, Robert Morris, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Philip Livingston, Caesar Rodney, Edward Rutledge, Roger Sherman, Richard Henry Lee, John Adams, Robert Treat Paoli, Samuel Adams and Elbridge Gerry—choice spirits of their time.

Some would have waited awhile longer and petitioned anew; some would have moderated the fiery phrasing of the indictment of misrule. Thus the debate began.

And during this battle of wits the author of the Declaration sat mute and anxious, for Thomas Jefferson was not an orator.

And out from the ranks of the patriots stepped one man to defend the handiwork of Jefferson, with a brilliance and power that caused the author to press the champion's name down to posterity as the "Colossus of the Debate." This was John Adams.

That great orator, the horse flies from the iverly stable swarmed in to attack the silk stockings legs of the patriots; and these men, playing with destiny and staking their lives, rose, one after another, to speak on the Declaration.

Three days the debate went on, Jefferson pulsating to the passionate pleas of Adams, and then these courageous souls for the sake of future ages fixed their names to the document that might prove their death warrants and pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor to the cause of liberty.

HOW GOODING MADE McKAIG

BY JAMES D. WHILAN.

The declaration of Ray McKaig in Boise that, "Not because any of our progressive party leaders but because our progressives themselves are opposed to it," is fusion impossible, made as it is nearly two months before the state convention where progressive representatives from the primaries meet, is characteristic of the utterances of his ever since the necessities of Frank R. Gooding in 1918 made him a potent figure in Idaho politics. Bill Scholtz, a wily politician, controlled the committee of the Non-partisan league, of which McKaig was organizer. Gooding began angling for the non-partisan vote. His first move was to assail the Wilson administration and policies in an interview in Spokane. Then poor Taylor, his faithful worker, tried to inveigle Sholtz into a combination with a letter, on which was the signature of Gooding. He afterwards made affidavit that he forged this, but the circumstances and the character of the signature made many think that the affidavit was false. Rejected by Sholtz, it was necessary for Gooding to find an issue which would take attention away from his criticisms of the Wilson policies and also from the annoying alleged forgery, and McKaig was picked on.

An essentially harmless incident during the trial of Kate Richards O'Hare, which at worst would have been nothing more than a trivial indiscretion, was found and through the brilliant, spiritually inspired efforts of Guy Flenner, grew like a spectre. Afterwards lawyers for Gooding and the Statesman, in defense in McKaig's libel suit convinced a majority of the jury, that even had the verdict for libel changed been true, it was so immaterial no verdict for libel would lie. In fact, Karl Paine, the Statesman attorney, said the worst charge was a real virtue, and McKaig was a piker to complain about it.

In 1918, however, it raised a furor when backed by a series of page advertisements written as Flenner knew how. The present writer who was supporting the democratic ticket as nominated, held that it made no difference what McKaig was, as he was not the democratic party, or even the Non-partisan league; but Bill Scholtz, and his workers, fell for the McKaig issue, though there was no love lost between the man. At the same time, the Idaho Jews workers adopted a policy of deliberate insult which drove thousands of democrats, who were at first regular away from Samuels and some away from Nugent. Bill's policy was to boost Borah, primarily, and incidentally the Samuels ticket. In which he, as always, had the co-operation of the Deweys and I. E. Rockwell of the power trust; C. A. Barton of the lumber trust, and Borah's manager, John W. Hart, of the sugar trust.

So McKaig, attacked by Gooding on one hand, and defended by Sholtz workers on the other, grew in importance like a green bay tree, and became a real figure, and incidentally received the tremendous advantage of becoming a martyr in the eyes of many who felt, not without reason, that he was unfairly assailed. Ray also found his own sense of importance in no way diminished. In allowing McKaig to be made the main issue Sholtz made a tactical error and dug his own grave politically. Two years later he was supplanted by McKaig and went into the lumber business; leaving the bulk of the non-partisans legally democrats, and thousands of democrats, insulted by his lieutenants, legally outside the democratic party thanks to the republican election law.

The democratic committee was in hands of Chairman Jerry Day, until a meeting called by himself, virtually rejected his leadership. The opportunity for the non-partisans to continue where they were united with progressive democracy and sweep the state was obvious. It was at this time that McKaig discovered that "the people" would not remain in the democratic party but must have an independent state ticket. So Fairchild was nominated as an independent and was treated so kindly by the republican press that he has since supported the republican ticket.

In 1920 McKaig would not hear of a regular progressive democrat for governor, even though he had supported Samuels, unless he would run on the independent ticket, though Ray confederating says, "We gave you this, and that." And always the same sentiment appears. "Our people will not have this," long before the people have spoken. Afterwards before the convention his workers say that the action of McKaig and his state committee must be upheld, so we have an endless chain of cycle reasoning. And his workers say criticism of McKaig methods are insults to all progressives.

Whether the McKaig organization will, control the progressive state convention remains to be seen. If so, there will be no fusion; as he starts with the organization fusion is doubtful.

The McKaig method was never better exemplified than at the state committee conference in Boise on fusion. As set forth in the Democratic formal statement, the sub-committee agreed on the feasibility of division of offices, both acting in good faith. Then the progressive state committee adjourned, and Ray McKaig, not the committee, as a whole, gave out a statement that fusion was impossible not because leaders were opposed but because "our progressives" are utterly opposed to it. Modestly prevented him from using the singular after the word "our," in excuse of a policy which made the re-election of "Taxless" Davis and the two elections of C. C. Moore possible.

UNIFORM BUNCH OF PIGS IS FAVORED

"Every farmer who raises pigs should aim to produce a uniform bunch approaching as nearly as possible consistently the weight and quality of the best bred stock. The pig of medium build is the most economical to produce," says H. J. Blum of the State College of Agriculture at Idaho Falls. "Such a uniform bunch ends more cheaply, saves more money, dries more rapidly, has more luster, dries more rapidly, has more luster before fattening again."

"There is no best breed," states Professor Blum. "Type is much more important than breed. The tendency of later years has been toward larger pigs with more lean meat. Lethal strength of foot and with and depth of hump are standard qualities, but especially if it is laid on unevenly, counts against a market hog. Hogs of the right shape should be bred for breeding, not for sale to be bred on, not fed on. A big cross hog, short, lean, fat because it is fat, is not a good breeder."

"Particular attention must be given to feet, however, and two general classes are needed by the young pig breeder. One class should be bred for heat and fat and those which are pig and unable. For winning pigs the pig breeder should select the best of the best. Hurdley, iron meat or mudy ground hog, 100 pounds; muddy ground ones, 100 pounds; steel ground ones, 100 pounds; ground or, chopped all, 150 pounds."

"The best of the best is available, one-half of the fish meat or lard can be safely dropped and the milk fed at the rate of three quarts to one quart of milk. The best of the best is available in the form of a trough table or, still better, three times a day."

"The hogs which have received 125 pounds of feed in a rooming pen, including, Hurdley, iron meat or ground lard, 200 pounds; steel ground, 100 pounds; muddy ground, 100 pounds; ground or, chopped all, 150 pounds."

Only Small Percentage of Pigs Over Reach Market

Only about 65 per cent of the pigs fattened live to reach the market, according to the National Live Stock Association. The mortality occurs during the first ten days, says the United States Department of Agriculture. During this time the pigs are fed little, and suffer from colds and injuries over. Diverse diseases and insanitary conditions are the cause of the high mortality. Stagers over the hog raiser who has not yet experienced these losses, but has never taken the time to study the matter is worth a dollar a bushel and a ton, says the pig breeder. CHILD PLUNGES FROM WINDOW

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 2.—James Robert Harris, 2-year-old son of Mrs. Thelma Goodwin of San Francisco, was injured probably fatally here when he fell from a sixth story window of a downtown hotel.

The child sustained a probable fracture of the skull and injuries to the spine. Little hope is held for his recovery by hospital attendants. Electric wires, five stories below, broke the fall of the child.

Mrs. Goodwin is a reporter of the staff of the San Francisco newspaper. She had been visiting relatives in Kansas and on her return trip to California.

FEED DAIRY COWS LIBERALLY PAYS

Many dairymen are finding that it is more profitable to feed good cow feed than to feed a large amount of a common quality or only fairly well. It is a common observation among dairymen that good cows will return a profit on all the feed they will eat if the ration is well balanced.

Latest association records reportedly show that the greatest profit on feed costs are made by the cows which consume the largest amount of feed.

Tests made by the dairy department at the Ohio experimental station show that good cows feed more liberally than the general practice and will produce more milk at a lower ration than the same cows on the ordinary ration, but produce a larger amount at a ration of 200 pounds of feed per cow.

The average annual interest production of these cows fed a ration ordinarily considered ample was 220 pounds, or all the feed given during the average production of the same cows was 500 pounds.

Tests made by the dairy department at the Ohio experimental station show that the greatest profit on feed costs are made by the cows which consume the largest amount of feed.

Age to Breed Heifer Is Important to Dairymen

The age to breed the dairy heifer is a most important matter in the selection of the particular animal in question. If the individual is well bred and has a tendency to lay on fat, she will breed at an earlier age than one not so well grown and showing less tendency to condition.

The heifer of average growth and maturity should be bred at the age of 18 months, but not more than 20 months of age, better yet 24 months if possible. The heifer of above growth and maturity should be allowed about 4 months longer.
