TWIN FALLS DAILY TIMES

Published Every Evening Except Sunday by The Times Publishing Company, Twin Falls, Idaho.
L. H. MASTERS, Editor and Publisher.

Ray McKaig advised farmers who might desire to form a co-operative organization for the use of electricity to buy the supply from the Idaho Power company. Now he holds that this is not debatable. Either he was right in this advice or he was wrong. If right, he should be willing to give reason for the faith in him. If wrong, he should admit the error and not continue to occupy the position of advising members of the Grange to do something unwise.

Democrats and progressives in the Idaho legislature who are sincere in their desire to carry out the pledges made in their platforms during the past four campaigns should get together on measures for putting them into effect. A reasonable direct primary law, return to the system of a non-partisan judiciary, and the repeal of the law which prevents appearance of a candidate on more than one ticket, and of the cabinet form of government, with a workable, but conservative, plan for direct legislation, should be agreed on and supported by both parties. Neither should try to legislate the other out of existence. To do so would be unfair and would deserve defeat for that reason, and would, moreover, produce results opposite from that sought. It is likely that none of these measures could be enacted, but they would furnish a working basis for the campaign of 1928 and for choosing an administration that would enact them.

The central bureau of the Interparliamentary Union, in which representatives of the legislative bodies of 35 leading nations including the United States congress participate, has taken up the cause of the removal of economic barriers in Europe, and declares that greater freedom of trade and commercial interdependence is needed among the nations abroad. It asserts that the obstacles to this result are political rather than economic and that the League of Nations constitutes the best means for overcoming these difficulties. Economic solidarity between nations and stabilizing of currencies are the greatest needs of the world, it contends. The action taken is similar to that advised by the International Chamber of Commerce and the League's international conference. The Union declares that it will join the League of Nations in a movement to educate the political leaders of the world in regard to necessity for greater economic co-operation among nations.

THE WOODROW WILSON $50,000 PRIZE ESSAY CONTEST

The president of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation announced today that the foundation has received a special donation of $50,000 to be offered in two awards of $25,000 each to the young men and women of America for the two best essays on "What Woodrow Wilson Means to Me." These awards are independent of the regular foundation award of $25,000, which was given this year to Elihu Root, for his services to the cause of peace, in helping to set up the World Court.

The direct and sole purpose of the contest is to bring Woodrow Wilson's ideals and principles before the young people of the United States.

The awards are available to any resident of the United States between the ages of twenty and thirty-five. The essays must not be more than 2500 words in length, and should seek to appraise, not the facts, but the ideals and principles of Wilson from the personal standpoint of the writer. Partisan political considerations are, therefore, outside the scope of the contest.

The contest will close October 1, 1927. The manuscripts will be judged by a non-partisan and non-political jury of award, appointed by the trustees of the Foundation. The personnel of this jury will be announced later. The prizes will be presented in December. In addition to the awards, the man and woman who submit the winning articles will each receive an illuminated scroll for permanent preservation.

In announcing the contest, President Davis said: "Politics aside, Wilson was a unique personality. With Theodore Roosevelt and Grover Cleveland he stands as one of the three great modern American statesmen. Like Lincoln and Jefferson and Washington, he was the embodiment of the spirit which has made this country great.

"Whether you agree with his proposals or not, his ideas were stimulating and arresting. Many of them have become part of modern thought. Before he became president, he made a life-long study of American history and government. And he had the priceless gift of expression. The result is a series of political and literary papers which form part of America's best heritage. To read them today, is to get a liberal education all over again."

"It has seemed particularly the duty of the Wilson Foundation to bring before the young people of the country the ideals and principles which are inherent in his written and spoken words.

"It is the sole aim of this contest. It is the sole reason why the prizes of fifty thousand dollars have been offered.

"People who are interested may obtain full conditions of the contest from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, 17 East 42nd street, New York City."

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
Outposts of the Old S. W. Frontier
When white "settlers" began trespassing upon the lands set aside for the Choctaw Indians in the present state of Oklahoma a hundred years ago, the government determined to establish military posts in that region to protect its old wards. Accordingly, Matthew Appleby, commanding the first uniform force, was ordered to select sites for two new forts, one near the mouth of the Verdugo river in the valley of the Arkansas and the other near the mouth of the Klappa in the Red river country.
An article asked Col. Augustus L. Chouteau a broken freight trailer who had the outfit with the best of the best site for the post on the Verdugo and by the middle of April, 1821, Chouteau and Col. Nathaniel Pelt had selected the best site for a fort of that site, high above the plain. Within a few weeks, articles had established there a stockade for the first time, by the name of Fort Gibson, named in honor of Col. George Gibson, then commanding general.
The next few years of Fort Gibson's existence were uneventful. It was a lonely outpost with no other means of communication with the outside world until 1828, when the first steamboat arrived. In 1832 Washington, D. C. sent the best of the best officers which numbered among its first great celebrities as Henry Dodge, Stephen W. Kearney, Edwin C. Sumner, Philip B. George, Curtis and Jefferson Davis, George Catlin, the famous Indian painter, also accompanied the expedition.
The fact that this Fort Gibson was an important post in the southwest and with the exception of three or four years just before the Civil war it was continuously garrisoned regular until 1890. During the Civil war it was the center of operations for the United States army in the control of Indian Territory but after the war the frontier had been pushed up far beyond it that it gave place in importance to other posts in Oklahoma, notably Fort Sill.

A Spectre of Death

Ten men died here. They were trapped when a tobacconist in the ceiling in a tunnel in which they were working, at Colton, Calif. Had there been a party of an electric light against the ceiling background created an illusion suggesting an even stranger tragedy. It is the illusion of a great shadowy mass rising out of the misty pool as if on the crest of a great wave on the human life.
