Idaho Will Spend In Two Years On Roads $3,985,000

Senate and House Highway Committees Give Approval to Program Calling for Four Per Cent Gasoline Tax for Road Purposes in Idaho; Vast Sum to be Expended in Next Two Years.

BOISE, Feb. 14.—Idaho's road program for the next two years will require the expenditure of $3,985,000, it was revealed Sunday night by Senator E. W. Shuckler of Lincoln county and Representative Lloyd Penn of Idaho county, chairman of the house and senate highway committees. The program as approved by them was presented by Joe D. Wood, commissioner of public works, and has been submitted to Governor H. C. Hall, today.

The two committees have been working with the commissioner since his resignation, and have held frequent consultations with the chief executive. The governor's "economic message" of Saturday has involved the highway program. The program is for new construction, but the message is self directed special attention to the highway, so the committee feels it may be agreed with gubernatorial sanction.

The funds for the program, it is anticipated, will be raised by a four-cent gasoline tax, which is expected to yield approximately $2,500,000, while the other $1,485,000 will come from former revenues and the bus and stage.

The tentative program was accompanied by a complete statement of receipts and expenditures in the department of public works for the most comprehensive statement in the history of Idaho road making.

The figures are given out by the department of public works along an account of local funds and federal aid money, giving nearly the cost to the state.

The largest single item in the budget is maintenance, which has $1,350,000 allotted to it, or this sum, $725,000 will be spent on 2100 miles of road in 1927, and $750,000 on 2520 miles in 1928. The maintenance figure is put at $300 a mile.

The program also calls for cutting 600 miles of road on the North and South highway, the Oregon Trail and the Yellowstone highway. The total cost will be $1,050,000, of which the state's share, 70 per cent, will amount to $735,000. Thirty hundred miles will be closed each year.

Fillibusters Are Threatened By Nervous Senators

Congress Expected to Pass McNary-Haughen Bill Early This Week but Many Predictions Are Made That President Coolidge Will Immediately Veto Same; Senate Is in Nervous Mood and Manifests Violent Tendencies at Opening of Last End of Fifteen Day Session.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 14.—With two fillibusters threatened in the senate and with legislatures nervous as to the fighting point an evidence by two-sentimental arguments Saturday, the sixty-third congress to-day entered its last 15 working days.

The DMW is expected to pass the McNary-Haughen farm bill before the end of the week and present it to the president in sign or veto.

The latter course is anticipated. The senators are expected to pass the bank reform, fight, with proponents of flounder dam and muscle shoals legislation impudent and eager.

The situation arises up as an unusually early beginning of an intense their cornered row between the president, the house and the senate such as has characterized the present or less extent the closing of congressional sessions in years past.

The predicament of major items of legislation was outlined to the United Press today as follows:

Farm Relief Veto Predicted.

The belief is growing that President Coolidge will veto the McNary-Haughen farm bill. A storm of political reaction is planned by the bill's adherents, an congress. Unless the president given the bill a pocket veto by holding it until after congress adjourns, a successful everyone by signing it speedily. The closing days will be spent in policies and there may be an effort to pass the bill.

A fillibuster is threatened in mid-western senators likely to introduce legislation, that such a move has not been presented by the bill's adherents and will be voted upon a p. m. vote.

get through, largely because of the assistance rendered by the farm bloc in aiding the adoption of the farm bill.

Radio Fillibuster Expelled.

As soon as the bank bill has been disposed of, Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, will move consideration of the Dill-Wheat radio compromise measure but a fillibuster also is threatened against it. As the situation now stands a firm majority of the senate favors the legislation and will adopt it if it can be brought to a vote.

Electio Candidates Are Up.

The Reed committee is contemplating immediate action against trustees who have declined to testify.

Delaney-Maloney Match Attracts Much Attention

Winner of Friday Night's Fight Will Have Chance at World Chamption In Prediction: Jack Delaney Favored in Wagers Over Jim Maloney of Boston; Maloney Outweighs Jack 20 Pounds.

(By HENRY L. FARRELL.)
NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—No contest in years with the exception of the heavyweight championship match between Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey, which drew the greatest interest in the history of boxing, has attracted the fancy of the public as has the bout between Jack Delaney, world light-heavyweight champion, and Jim Maloney, Boston heavyweight. The fight is to be held in Madison Square Garden Friday night and the winner will be well on the way to a match with Tunney next September.
Commissioners in the financial district estimated that more than a million dollars would change hands on the bout and one firm reported that bets of more than $100,000 already had been placed. The current odds hold Delaney the favorite at 6 to 5. Some money has been offered at 3 to 2 that Delaney scores a knockout.
For the first time in his career as a promoter Tex Rickard had to sell his seats by mail. The demand was so heavy that he could not place the tickets on public sale and applicants had to put up their money, take tickets and run-the-risk of losing a seat any place in the arena.
Rickard estimated today that at least 20,000 applicants could not be honored.
Rickard asked Maloney if he would take a cut in the number of tickets allotted to him and Maloney said if he didn't get every seat promised he would fight. "They are all for people in Boston and they're my friends," he said. Delaney also refused to give up a ticket for his Connecticut roster.
Expert opinion was divided on the merits of the two fighters. If Delaney happened to be 20 pounds heavier he would be almost a unanimous choice, but as he is forced to stick his 175 pounds against Maloney's close to 200 pounds, the odds were being judged that a good little man can't beat a good big man.

This modern age recognizes the honest quality of Camels

THE smokers of America have rewarded Real Quality with Real Leadership.

For Camels have always been all quality and no frills. The choicest tobaccos money can buy, superbly blended. Millions of dollars put into the cigarette. Never a penny expended for show.

There's just one way to find the smoking thrill that has won the modern world's admiration—try Camels. You'll know such taste and fragrance, such mellow mildness, as you never hoped to find. "Have a Camel!"

IDAHO LEGISLATIVE REVIEW

(By H. A. Lawson)

Affirmative and negative actions taken by the Nineteenth Idaho legislature during the past week cleared the decks of some of the most important issues, while initiative legislation laid on the desks of members proposed constructive measures as a part of the program of the present administration and those who are in control of the legislature.

In the affirmative class the legislature has taken a forward step in memorializing congress to give favorable consideration to underwriting crops in the upper Snake river valley by impounding water in worthless meadow lands in the Yellowstone National park; in offering to the state a solution to the controversy that exists over support of educational institutions by considering a bill that would make the Idaho Technical Institute the southern Idaho branch of the University of Idaho, and by offering an amendment to the constitution to make the terms of state officials four years instead of two as is now the case.

Negative action has resulted in the defeat of such measures as the direct primary, the state-wide school tax as proposed and the bank guarantee, full crew bill and the osteopathic measure.

From an initiative standpoint the legislature proposes to give to the state an advertising campaign for the next two years through an advertising commission of which the governor shall be the head. It is also proposed that the state care for its tuberculosis wards by housing them properly in a state hospital.

There have of course been many minor measures involving both from an affirmative and a negative standpoint, some of which have been approved, allowed to travel their course or have been defeated.

Taking the more important measures up in their order, and considering the fate they met with, the week's record of the legislature is decidedly interesting. There was practically no opposition in the house of representatives to the memorial to congress asking that the Fall river matter be given consideration. This has been a mooted issue because it has lined up two schools of thought against one another. One of these schools is represented in the action of the legislature which reflects the feeling of the people of Idaho toward reservoirs for water within the boundaries of the Yellowstone National park. It is proposed that meadow lands in the Fall river section that are not visited nor on the beaten path of tourists going to the park, but are grown to salt grass and in some places are swampy, be used in a reservoir site in which to impound water of the Fall river to be drawn upon in the irrigation season and diverted to agricultural lands outside of the park and in the state of Idaho to be used to mature crops. These waters would serve to underwrite the crops of the section and be a positive guarantee for crop production. They do not have that guarantee now. Idahoans believe that all water now going to waste should, whenever and wherever possible, be put to beneficial use.

The other school of thought is composed of those who are opposed to any form of infringement on the ground or water within recreational playgrounds set aside by the national government. They hold that to permit storage of water in the Yellowstone National park for irrigation purposes within Idaho would result in damaging scenic spots within the park and be the first step in a program gradually to eat into and commercialize the natural resources of the park. They have the support and the backing of many large and influential magazines of the east.

What is believed to be a sensible and feasible as well as a happy solution has been arrived at in the settlement of the educational controversy. The house of representatives has passed a bill which designated the Idaho Technical Institute at Pocatello as the southern Idaho branch of the University of Idaho. All factions to the educational fight seem to have agreed to this solution. The Technical Institute has been asking for the right to expand and become a four-year college. The state board of education opposed this, fearing that the Technical institute might become a real rival of the University of Idaho and because it was opposed to the state supporting two colleges.

When the legislature met those who were interested in reaching a peaceful solution of the educational controversy began to work on it with the result that they reached a compromise to give the Technical institute the recognition that it desired and the chance to expand, but recognized the right of the university to continue as the parent of the Pocatello institution the southern branch of the university. This, it is believed, will not only continue the expansion of the Technical institute but will also strengthen the university in that it will make it a feeder to the university.

The direct primary bill appeared in the senate and was given little consideration. It was defeated without even being printed, by being indefinitely postponed. Similar action was taken with regard to the full crew railroad bill. It was first killed in the house and later was introduced in the senate where it met with the same summary fate. The house indefinitely postponed the bank guarantee act which could not muster enough votes to be printed. The senate killed the proposed state-wide school tax to equalize the revenue for the support of the schools and the osteopathic measure.

A REGULAR SCOUT

THE STORY THIS FAR. Fred Blake, impersonating the "long-lost" son of the Sierra Monroe, to avenge his mother's death, is accepted by Mrs. Monroe, her daughter, and baby, who is a boy Scout, as their relative. He gets his confession of guilt, and leaves, saying "When the boy Scout gives him a mark for bravery, he breaks down and confesses that he is hunted by the police. He is arrested."

CHAPTER XV. SILVER DOES HIS BIT. His fingers jerked back behind his gun from the holster, hunched his prisoner, and led him out of the courtroom. As he walked out into the street he said to Fred: "Steady, partner. I walk you to the stable stall. A chatter and a howl followed the two silent men curiously, inquisitively. It had been great day for Sierra. Excitement galloped. The town was buzzing with the news. Fred Monroe and Fred Monroe—two names that were not the same—were not a criminal—wanted by the police—for murder—murdered a woman. He loved him—they said."

Directly in the midst of the crowd tucked behind a man and his prisoner trod a much bewilderment, but determined horse. Sierra, left outside the door, now beheld his master and god led in a very curious manner away. He also saw the man who might be his master and god being taken in a very curious manner away. He also saw the man who might be his master and god being taken in a very curious manner away. He also saw the man who might be his master and god being taken in a very curious manner away.

He threaded into town and about to the first group of scouts.

He threaded into town and about to the first group of scouts. He threaded into town and about to the first group of scouts. He threaded into town and about to the first group of scouts. He threaded into town and about to the first group of scouts.

CHAPTER XVI. THE KNIFE THROUST. Fred Blake's mind as he sat on the bench was a mass of confusion. He had not noticed the amazing manner in which the boy Scout had disappeared as he had done. He did not realize the tremendous velocity at which his magnificent horse was hurrying.

Finally, what had seemed to be an age, Fred saw the boy Scout coming from the crowd, carrying a clear trail of horse-picked earth. He turned every eye toward Silver again. "That boy forward."

Fred took his time and examined the layout of the country. There was nothing to be seen but a catch up with the crowd and at that rate. Maybe there was a short cut. He turned about with penetrating eyes. Suddenly he spotted ahead and in front of him a man in a blue shirt and a dark hat. "That boy forward."

FRED STORY THIS FAR. The story this far. The story this far. The story this far. The story this far. The story this far. The story this far. The story this far. The story this far.

CHAPTER XVII. Continued. It was then that Silver displayed the remarkable grit and heart that made him the superb—a king among equines. Fred, as if he had not just begun his terrific run was danger, he shot loose like a bolt from a cross-bow and overhauled the boy Scout's horse with incredible rapidity.

Fred did not know where the horse road was. He was a stranger in a strange country. He had no one to turn to. He was alone. He was alone. He was alone. He was alone.

Fred felt the iron frame of his horse drift across the gap.

After slackened. Fred patting him absentmindedly, and sat tight. The sign was unmistakable. There it was. Fred saw it. He saw it. He saw it. He saw it.
