SINNOTT TELLS OF U. S. TIRES

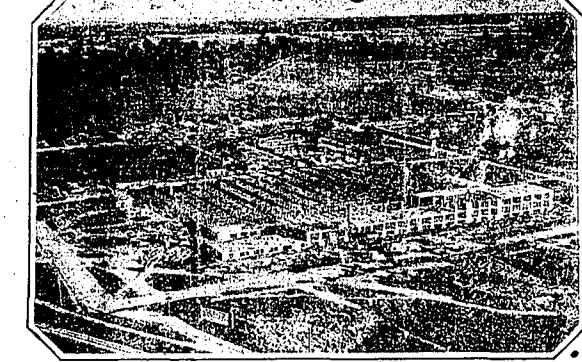

Local Man Attends Conference Held at United States Tires Company Factory.

H. B. Sinnott of Twin Falls, district representative of the United States Rubber company, was favorably impressed with the tour through the factory of the company, with attending a conference of field representatives and salesmen, Sinnott is explaining highlights of his several days' visit in the United States Tire city, declared that the company were loyal to the entire sales force including nearly 600 field representatives from every state in the union.

"There have been so many orders that we have had to expand our plant in the past two or three years," said "Mac" Sinnott, "that a visit to the factory was necessary at once. First we met and talked over the great changes that have taken place. While at the factories we literally went to school every day. We were shown the manufacturing process and its various stages and saw it from start to finish. The conference had two principal purposes—first, to give an impression of the entire United States tire as they are made, and second, to acquaint us more thoroughly with the company's policies.

The first three days were spent at Detroit, with daily sessions at the Detroit plant, the largest tire factory in the United States. Rubber company. Members of the party were all taken through the huge plant and shown each step in the manufacturing process. They then came back to see special trains do Indianapolis where a similar study was made of the production of the Indianapolis plant, an eight 15, miles where the tires, tubes and bicycles are made.

This Six-Room Bungalow Adapts Self To Any Lot

MUCH can be said in favor of the one-story dwelling. No space is wasted in stairs and landings; there are fewer steps to take in doing her daily work. The floor level is less than that of a two-story house, especially if one does not expect to have a double exposure. The pleasing effect of the Colonial bungalow is shown in the illustration. It has a gable roof, a wide porch, a screened-in porch, a tiled roof, a tiled porch, a tiled roof, a tiled porch, a tiled roof, a tiled porch.

The illustration is of a house, situated on a lot. A tiled roof could also be used effectively here, but the extra warmth it affords is not needed here, as the house is completely insulated with celotex, walls and roof. The temperature at the comfort point the year round.

The living room is quite large—thirteen feet by fifteen—and opens even larger with the sliding glass door, through the dining room. There is a chimney open fireplace for the cool days and an inviting open porch opposite for the summer months. This porch can be glazed in at a reasonable additional expense, providing an extra living or sleeping room. It has an alternate location for the dining room. The house is to be placed across a narrow lot. The arrangements in the kitchen call for numerous cupboards and a broom closet, the sink beneath the windows, and the refrigerator under one of the cupboards and close to the back door for convenient filling.

Two linen closets have been tucked in close to the bathroom. One of three bedrooms is large enough to take twin beds. Each has ample closet space. Small windows could easily be added in two of these closets in almost any wall, so that the wiser know, it is of great value in hygiene and sanitation.

CROSS, FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated, or breath has stomach sour

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels

Every mother realizes, after giving her children California Fig Syrup, that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste, and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without hurting.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! Is coated? Is a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruitly laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, piled up in the bowels, and give you a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of it, that sore, one stomach, undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. TWIN FALLS DAILY TIMES

Published Every Evening Except Sunday by The Times Publishing Company, Twin Falls, Idaho.
I. H. MASTERS, Editor and Publisher.

Entered at the Twin Falls Postoffice as Second Class Matter as a Daily Publication, April 11, 1918.

Announcement that the state highway department expects to have its engineer visit this city to confer with the Twin Falls district highway board, is welcome news, and it is to be hoped that the visit will not be long delayed. With splendid vision and with realization of the community of interest between the two states, the Nevada legislature has gone on record in favor of the speedy construction of the Yosemite-Yellowstone highway. The Twin Falls highway district has already put up its quota of money and the federal funds are available to build the line to the Nevada state line.

Too much blue smoke is being blown in the faces of people on the Twin Falls tract these days by some who are better at blowing smoke than anything else. Twin Falls has a great future and the business of this city is bound to go ahead by leaps and bounds because we produce the crop and the spirit of our people favors progress. Now and then lulls will come into our business activities but these are only shadows on the sands of time and we have witnessed them too often to be alarmed about them now. Let's march ahead and press on toward the mark of the goal to which we have set our faces and nothing can disturb us.

There is something strange going on in this state and we are anxious to find the source of the trouble. There has never been a time when so many school superintendents in Idaho were seeking new places and we feel sure that something must be wrong that such a condition should prevail. We recall that the secretary of the State Teachers' association was denied the privilege of the floor of the house in the recent legislative session and we are wondering if this is not the crux of the whole question. Hasn't the administration in Boise set its head to remove some of the obstreperous teachers and superintendents of our schools as a punishment for their wrong doing? We hardly think this expression is correct, but instead of "wrong doing," we perhaps should say lack of obedience to the powers that be. Some such expression as this was passed from one of the state bosses during the legislative session, "If these teachers don't settle down and obey the dictates of the party bosses we will bust the state teachers' association." Perhaps the fact that so many city superintendents are seeking new jobs is the evidence of this fact.

ATLANTA PAPER ROASTS WARDEN SNOOK

A scathing attack on Warden John W. Snook, of the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia, contained in "Life," a weekly publication in that city, in its issue of March 19, recalls the lurid career of Snook in this state. A hang-over from the Haines administration, Snook retained his position as warden of the Idaho state penitentiary during the first Alexander administration, despite the ardent desire of the governor to get rid of him. All state officers except the governor were republicans and the legislature had a majority of that faith in both houses. On one occasion, when Governor Alexander sought to enter the penitentiary to investigate some criticisms, the warden denied him admission, and, later, assaulted his private secretary, Broxon.

After the democratic victory of 1916, Snook's administration of the prison terminated. When the republicans returned to power in 1919, a gentleman named Cuddy was appointed warden and retained the position until incapacitated by his final, fatal illness. Snook was again appointed and retained the position until appointed warden of the federal prison at Atlanta.

The editorial in "Atlanta Life" reads as follows: Not so many months ago there came out of the west a two-gun man from Idaho to rule as warden at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, where more than 3000 prisoners pay their debt to society. His name is John W. Snook. He had been head of a small prison in Idaho, having only a few hundred inmates. Political winds blew his way and he landed here in the federal job.

When Warden Snook received his appointment through politics, the matter of politics should have been dropped by him when he took the oath of office.

Inquiry into the recent escape of three prisoners has disclosed to Atlanta Life that the penitentiary is reeking with politics; that gross negligence and inefficiency on the part of his favored political appointees are tolerated, while old-time guards are ousted on the slightest provocation to make posts for his favorites.

Several days ago A. E. Sartain, a former warden of the pen, entered the institution over which he once presided, to serve a sentence for accepting money from prisoners. And among the guards keeping watch over him now are a group of former prison officials from Kentucky, who were themselves ousted from the Kentucky state pen on the same charge.

"The Kentucky bunch," as this group is known, are the right-hand men of the two-gun warden from Idaho. After losing their positions in Kentucky through alleged crookedness, they had an ex-commissioner of prisons in that state to use his influence as a republican leader with Snook, who promised to "take care" of the boys. And Snook took care of them, putting them in the places of men who had been in service for many years.

In separate columns Atlanta Life presents a letter from Governor Fields of Kentucky, which bares the remarkable record of Snook's right-hand men while in that state. Those who were not fired under charges of crookedness, resigned and had they not resigned, their resignation would have been requested—he states. Acceptance of money from prisoners, drunkenness and brutality were among the offenses charged in the letter from Governor Fields which repudiates fitness for prison duty.

Why has Warden Snook surrounded himself with men who are branded as unfit and unreliable and untrustworthy by the governor of the state that employed them?

Q. Why is the Rubber from the United States Rubber Plantations especially strong and flexible?
A. Rubber responds to scientific growing methods, just as wheat, cotton and farm crops do.

From first to last, rubber is grown for quality on these Plantations. Seed is selected for quality. The trees are bud-grafted—for quality. They are fertilized for quality—cultivated constantly and clean. Consequently, they yield exceptionally fine, latex, which gives stronger and more flexible rubber, and better tires.

The United States Rubber Plantations enjoy an international reputation as the headquarters of scientific rubber cultivation.
