LONDON, April 23.—(By U.P.) A real-life cat, owned by a family at Houndlow, near London, has proved a capable politician.
Presented to a family at Gifford, Felix escaped from his new home and promptly walked back home a distance of 14 miles.
Felix's performance does not, however, compare with the record of a four-year-old cat. In 1911 a cat, walked from Kingston-on-Thames to Street, in Somersetshire, 133 miles in six months. But the latter record was made in 1913 when a cat walked from Ripon to Carlisle, 250 miles in nine days, an average of nearly 30 miles a day.

CHRYSLER IS STEPPING TO TOP OF LIST

Motor car buyers for the past few months register an amazing reversal of public opinion in the buying of new cars. About only two years ago Chrysler had been swept by popular approval from twenty-seventh to fourth place, but only by one independent manufacturer and by two units of a corporate group.

The Chrysler switch from the very first has been emphasis upon quality rather than quantity, but quantity has rolled up in ever increasing volume as a result of this outstanding Chrysler quality.

The four great Chrysler cars, "50", "55" and "705" and Imperial "50" are themselves the strongest evidence of the new standards and qualities of performance and long life which have brought about such an amazing re-estimation in America's greatest manufacturing industry.

The above information has been recently received by the Twin Falls Nelson Motor Co., local Chrysler dealer, who carries a complete line of Chrysler cars.

50 PER CENT OF COLLEGE BOYS WASTE THEIR TIME, PREXY SAYS

By United Press
NEW YORK, April 21.—Fully 50 per cent of the American boys who will go to college next fall will be better off if they changed their plans and went directly into business, according to a study of college students by the American Association of University Women.

From a study of statistics covering nearly half a century, Dr. Faunce finds that many boys who go to college are "failures," in the sense that they fail to graduate. "Moreover," he explains, "these figures do not include the uncounted thousands who, though they have been graduated, have simply wasted four precious years, and received no benefit commensurate with the time and money spent. There is no other career, for which men are not definitely prepared, in which there is such an appalling proportion of failures."

The question every parent should ask himself, according to Dr. Faunce, is this: "Is college worth four years out of my boy's life?"

Summing up his 25 years' experience as head of a great Eastern university, Dr. Faunce says: "The common belief that college training is suited to every boy and that every boy is suited to college, is one of the great fallacies of American life today. Certainly half of the boys whom well-meaning parents send to college ought not to go."

"One of us can get ten much education, but it should be of the kind of education best fitted to an individual. We are making the mistake of assuming that education can be obtained only in colleges, and that a college diploma is good for everybody."

"The standardized list of advice relative to boys in America has become almost a religion. A great tragedy is that the United States shows in its reports that only 33 per cent of the students enrolled have been graduated with their class. The others have gone from college disappointed, disillusioned, some of them embittered, with shattered confidence at an age when self-confidence should be highest."

"Students and parents should devote at least as much time to investigating what the college has to offer before they decide to buy."

DON JUAN

Copyright, 1926, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. "Don Juan" screen play by Ross Meredith, starring John Barrymore in a Warner Bros. production of this novel. Novel by NEHZ SABASTIN

BYNOPSIS
Don Juan's father, Don Jovito, finally succumbed to the shameless meanness of his faithless wife, leaves his legacy of advice to his sons: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love when it pleases you. Take it scornfully and forever." This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time, coveted by men, adored by all women. Lured to Burgla, at the peak of her notorious power by Rome, expresses a desire to meet him. Romulo, too anxious to fight with her.

Blender, elegant, handsome, confident—Pedrito watched him enviously as he crossed the polished floor.
Most men, Pedrito told himself, would have seen a bit nervous about that situation. The sister of a powerful duke and the mistress of that same important noble, both in love, jealous, angry lusts—Pedrito thanked his stars that he did not have to face them and he didn't.

He should have known that Don Juan never bothered to explain anything but let his conduct speak for itself.
Facing the two women from the doorway, looked at each and spoke megalitically.
"You've lost my foot widge," he said.

"Your husband is sure, now almost at my gate," he told her.

CHAPTER III
Thinking that Eleonora had taken her leave, Juan entered the room, passed with his back to the door and stopped at the table, a tiny lamp flicked up in the recess of old city, which had always interested him.

Margot, without knowing it, entered as well, he remarked. Pedrito, nodding, glanced toward the door and stood as if petrified. For there at the doorway stood Margaret himself, bristling with rage and Juan, quite unconscious of the disaster that threatened, commented softly audibly.

"I have been told madonnas are not to be trifled with in the house," he said, his face fairly purple with anger, glaring at him.

Pedrito lowered his eyes and would doubt of his own ability. Striving to steady himself, he unobtrusively to greet the duke.

"I have been told madonnas are not to be trifled with in the house," he said, his face fairly purple with anger, glaring at him.

Margot, glancing about the room, saw the bedroom door, and through it caught a glimpse of his wife. The furious words, she made a sharp sound, more like the snarl of an animal than any human sound.

But not to him.
Don Juan had been watching the duke's eyes. It was a look that he had never seen before. He had been watching the duke's eyes. It was a look that he had never seen before.

MACMILLAN IS GIVEN POST IN EAST COLLEGE

Special Dispatch to The Times
UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, Moscow, April 22.—Coach David Macmillan, for seven years basketball and baseball coach of the University of Idaho, has been named head basketball coach of the University of Minnesota and will leave the staff here at the close of school in June. It has been announced from the office of President A. H. Uphaus. A larger salary than he could make at Idaho would have been offered, but he was not interested.
Coach Macmillan, recognized an able coach of the foremost in the forefront of basketball coaches in the northwest, with Idaho with a record which includes 112 games won and 51 lost. The Vandals brought home the All-American title in 1923 and had three been named in the Pacific coast conference the following year. The Vandals won the coast championship the year following but were not fortunate enough to win there was no playoff.
In 1925, the Vandals defeated the University of California for the conference championship. In 1924 Idaho finished second in the northern division, behind the University of Washington. In 1925 the Vandals finished third, their lowest ranking under Macmillan's tutelage. In 1926 they tied with A. C. for second place, and they tied with Washington for second place in the section last season.
Coach Macmillan introduced a new style of basketball play in the west. This style, Macmillan described as the "man-to-man-five-man offense, five-man defense, with a slight, long-bouncing game." It has been copied widely because under it each player "has his man" and plays his game wherever the man goes. The team always is ready for any strategic move.
Macmillan's loss will be felt keenly by basketball fans here. A successor has not been selected.

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN.

Accidents are curious things. They happen to rich and poor; to men and animals as well as human beings; to the birds, worms and insects. They always have happened and always will. Many of them are preventable while some are not. The other day a man fell off a cliff while moving his jaw when he shot himself. The accident was preventable in the general acceptance of the world. The knives picked up a pilot cartridge, smashed in the forehead and an explosion followed. The man received a flesh wound but he might have received a death wound. No one knew how the cartridge came there on the lawn. No one ever will know. It would have been a million to one bet that the cartridge would never be exploded, had its presence on the lawn been known.
Other unpreventable accidents happen to thousands of people daily. But the preventable accidents would result in the preventable. They are generally caused by human carelessness. It is carelessness, if a man tries to cross a track before a fast proceeding railway train and is struck, or if he lives he is not likely to try the experiment again. If he does his injuries are only bad himself to cure.
More accidents happen in the spring, summer and fall months than during the winter months, because the people are not so much more during the winter months, and these are more hazardous than in the summer. Failure properly to get out of a bath tub brings its first of preventable accidents.
A lightning strike with combustible material frequently burned down a house, and a cigarette stub, stuck in a wrong place, Household poison, mistaken for some harmless drug, kill their share. A can of concentrated lye left where a child can get a hold of it causes torture or death. The man taking a can of kerosene for a can of kerosene, and using it to start a fire in a stove takes its toll. A little forethought and many accidents would be avoided.
The great fear for 1927 is alcohol, and the high.

RICKARD'S NEXT FIGHT MAY BE STAGED OUTSIDE GOTHAM

By Henry L. Farrell
New York, April 23—Renowned action in the best heavyweight boxing in the world, Gene Tunney and James A. Farley, chairman of the New York boxing commission, in almost certain to send Rickard on the road again to fight his next heavyweight championship fight.
Philadelphia looks like the spot. Rickard has his biggest crowd here with the Tunney-Dempsey fight not only because it elicited more at the gate than any of his big bouts but because he was almost entirely free from annoyance and interference by the Philadelphia popular press.
"A brief statement, obviously made for a purpose," by William Mulholland, senior member of the commission, would make it financially impossible for Rickard to stage the fight in New York regardless of the amount he would have to meet the champion.
"No more than $27,500 can be charged for any contest staged in New York as long as I have anything to say about it," Mulholland said last night.
Rickard can charge $20,000 in New York and he has many promoters in the Seagrass Stadium that can crowd into the Yankee Stadium. Tunney was said to have been away by an over-powering feeling of civic pride to fight in New York last summer among the home folk. He has been very quiet about his preference for an opponent for Tunney in the next fight but he had dropped enough hints to make it clear for the old home town that caused the real break between Tunney and Farley.
Farley says—"I don't know what all the fuss is. I didn't think it was my business to say anything about it. And what has he got to kick about. He has the right to say what he likes and the exception of a letter he wrote to the chairman of the commission, has been accepted in the reason for his late bid, he said this he never would fight in New York as long as the commission is constituted as it is now."
Farley did not reply other than to bid and wife, Defendants.
"So many obstacles were placed in my way," Farley said, "that I am not going to swing the Tunney-Dempsey fight in New York that a great many observers here are convinced will be a body for some reason didn't want to fight in New York."
It was that kind of attitude that Farley thinks about Tunney, although he and Tunney are not on friendly and any hand or voice in the matter but the commission, especially in thinking that along with Rickard and it was obvious that there wasn't much of a chance to be overruled.

Tunney Says Sport Writers Have Given Public Wrong Dope

By Henry L. Farrell
NEW YORK, April 23—Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, is back on his native stamping ground after a vaudeville tour of the country and he is looking for a "low hat."
"You sport writers," he said in an interview with the writer, "have given the public an impression of me that is entirely unwarranted. I have been held up as an intellectual person, who uses big words, talks of masters of arts and sciences, walks around with a bundle of books under his arm and will not receive a person without official credentials."
"All through the country I visited in my vaudeville tour, I found the impression that I wore a high hat and that I had the royal ragns around me to keep the common people from meeting me. Nothing could be more removed from the facts. I always have been a normal human being and am still a normal man."
"Since I started my professional boxing career I always have been associated with other men who could approach me in the dressing room, before or after a fight, in my home or on the street and I thought that I had established a feeling of intimacy with the profession."
"But when I went on the road in my vaudeville act I found that the reporters were harsh on approach. They were talking to the spokesman for some great governmental power."
"I tried to be myself but I was misquoted time after time and words were put into my mouth that I never said."
"All I want to be in myself and I can't be otherwise."
Tunney will have the impression that his victory over Jack Dempsey was not given him credit. He can raise himself out of the story of prominent writers who covered the Philadelphia fight and who told, not why Tunney won, but why Dempsey lost.
"I believe the matter had been given credit for winning any fight and that starlets were being passed around by the other members of the commission who had been taken a dive for him."
"In all my career I have never encountered a mislead matter," Tunney said.
