One of the counts of this snakeskin has been manufactured into socks, leather leather that many of these garments are made of. AMERICAN CAPITAL ABROAD

The department of commerce reports an American investment of capital abroad as having attained the total of $1,500,000,000 at the end of 1925 and as growing at the approximate rate of 10 per cent a year. On this showing American capital in foreign enterprises has become a notable part of the total national wealth—possibly a part of per cent.

As compared with other nations the United States has a high rank as an exporter of capital. The position of chief investor in foreign enterprises, long held by England, seems likely in the future to be held by us. English investments outside British territory remain vast, but they do not gain as do those of America. Berlin's relatively light tax burden here and stimulated by a low tax burden there, our free capital seeks eagerly for places where it can profitably go.

It is deserved note that private investment of American capital abroad since 1918, excepted the total of the much-disbursed war loans made by the treasury to foreign governments. The yearly return due on these private investments likewise amounts to a greater call on the production of other nations than does the service of the war loans. The problem of helping maintain dollar currencies in a state of properity sufficient to enable them to "provide" these returns is added to the difficult problem of providing a way for war loan debtors to pay the treasury. Our material interest in the welfare of other nations is indeed growing in time passed.

FOUNDED ON TOLERATION

The letter of Charles C. Marshall in the Atlantic Monthly and Governor Al Smith's reply are serving a useful purpose. They have brought into the open a discussion that was bound to develop in the next democratic national convention and perhaps in the next presidential election. It is better that this question should be discussed openly than that it should be constantly avoided about in private, with expression from authoritative sources.

From the standpoint of American tradition and American ideals, there can only be one answer to the question that has been raised. This nation was founded on religious toleration. The constitution of the United States gave the most solemn expression to this fundamental national policy and incorporated it in the law of the land.

Men of all faiths took part in establishing the nation, in developing the country, in building the great institutions which the flag stands. The blood of men of all faiths has been shed in this movement's defense. Under the test of experience in public office Protestants, Jews and Catholics have demonstrated their patriotic loyalty and devotion.

There are reasonable differences of opinion as to whether Governor Smith is the man to be entrusted with the presidency. His qualifications are to be judged on their merits. But it is not in accordance with the American spirit to let either Washington and Franklin or Jefferson determine the choice of the governor nor in his letter to the Atlantic Monthly, a public servant should be challenged "because of the faith in which he has tried to walk humbly with God."

As the audience was descending from the Bach room, while Shoshone and the Philadelphia orchestra gave at the Rialto recently, an enthusiastic young man asked his male escort, " Didn't you just hear him?"

"Well, I didn't hear it exactly," replied, "but I recognized it."

RIVER PROVES RELENTLESS MONSTER

CAIMAN MAJESTIC MISSISSIPPI IS BRINGING UTTER DESOLATION ERA

Vast Domain in Southland Faces Complete Destruction; People, Though Brave, Are Looking to Rest of State for Aid.

By JOHN H. SORRELS,
Managing Editor, The Memphis Press

(Written for NKA Service)

MEMPHIS, April 30.—Since the beginning, man has gathered at the river, has祭祀ed his gods, watered his flocks, has transported his goods to the market-places.

Men crowded in along the Nile and acted here, they moved in along the Shatt-el-Arab, Tigris and Danube; and more than 1900 years ago, when Caesar's galley swept up the River Tiber, they were there, sprung out from the underbrush with started eyes.

The river has always called with a lure, lured the sea, and man has followed the product of life on their backs.

Today, man, when he happened to this fertile valley of the Mississippi, one must understand what was there before him.

The Caiman, Calo, Wekabah, the Mississippi coils and uncurls itself, kissing the banks of either side with a rough, affectionate kiss. It winds like a cobra, mill pond after mill pond.

It is calm, when it happens to the river back there stretch miles of slow, muddy, lifeless mud.

The purple jungle hangs over the timber line far away. In the spring fields are ruffed with great roars while the gold-golden sun turns up in the sky, they shun like white fireflies as the cotton bursts into bloom.

There are no birds, no insects, no flowers, no fruit, no mushrooms, no blue skies, and a gaudy warmth fills the land. Down in the creek beds where giant cypress trees grow, birds of brilliant plumage fly from tree to tree and sing their songs.

Wrecks, wrecks.

And scattered throughout this vast domain of King Cotton are many small, isolated hamlets, each with a white house and a picket fence; each with an ambitious plate glass front, two or three general stores, where gamblers, prostitutes, forum to the world's烟花。

So it is on the Mississippi, and it always will be. At a time, the water will recede. Men will walk across the mud, stand there in the still moist fields. The warm sun will bring out the stalks, and soon the voices of plowmen will be heard again, and with them the clouds will hang once more in the sky, and the cotton will be in a bale done. Life will move on, busy but placid. For they are a valiant, hardy race who live along the river.

(Copyright, 1927, NKA Service, Inc.)

In the gardens, they have built well, they have gathered at the river to merge and build their cities; to take life, and give to this country a civilization.

People Incurable.

If the river is incurable, if it is afarm, if it is relentless, then these people are an incurable, a grim, a remorseless, incorrigible lot. They will not quit; none of them are willing to be rescued, preferring to stay with their homes despite great danger. For to leave the river, and to live in their houses, and their land will be given up, and build again—and again the river will take away. A circle they have moved in for years and years.

Calm, placid.

The flooding of the Mississippi valley, a disaster so calm, so ghastly, so sudden, so overwhelming, has taken away their lands and their homes, homes wrecked, and their valued possessions pent, bobbling along the currents like cobra, mill pond after mill pond.

To the north, when it happened to this fertile valley of the Mississippi, one must understand what was there before him.

TRAIN BATTLES FLOOD TO SAVE REFUGEES

The photograph shown above is probably the most remarkable flood picture ever taken. It shows a Missouri Pacific refugee train, trying to get several hundred of the homeless in the Mississippi valley to refugee camps at Memphis. For nearly a day, the train was reported lost. A plane flying over the area saw the train moving slowly through the flooded areas. The flood waters kept extinguishing the fires of the engine and threatening a boiler explosion, but the engineer and fireman courageously stuck to the task until all the refugees were brought to dry land. This airplane picture was taken near Samburg, Ark. The roofs of a few houses of the inundated villages can be seen at the right.

HUGE AIR CONCENTRATION PLANNED FOR MANEUVERS

By United Press

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 30.—Plans have been completed for the special army maneuvers in this corps area May 11-21 in which the largest air force ever concentrated in this country, comprising 100 planes, will participate. Land troops will participate. Land troops will include the Second Division under Major General William L. Connor. It is the crack division of the army and the only one up to full war time standard.

She learned to ride horseback when quite young. After one of her riding lessons her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, said to her, "You have a good seat, but you are not beautiful."

"I am not beautiful," responded Julianne, "but I am a good rider." Her mother caressed her hair and said, "That is a naught who you must never let go again. I shall now punish you for your pride."

The Princess obediently crossed the room, but stopped between the two attendants at the door and turned to her mother who exclaimed, "Well, if I had a hellish horse, anyway."

GOVERNMENT IS SPENDING TEN MILLIONS TO HALT FARM PEST

Spread of Corn Borer into Main Central Field Brings Drastic Measures Under Supervision of Experts.

By JOSEPH S. WANNER,
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Injurious corn borer has caused farmers in the United States crop losses to millions of dollars annually.

To fight this pest which infests New England and mid and southwest the government has appropriated $10 million to combat it.

The campaign to eradicate the corn borer is probably the greatest ever undertaken against an agricultural pest.

The corn borer attacks ears and stalks of corn from within the husks. They eat and eat until the corn is tickled. The Agricultural Department believes that the value of maize must be stopped to save corn farmers from ruin.

"Not only is corn attacked by the borers, but cotton, sugar cane, tobacco and many other crops are also attacked by the borers.

The insecticide program has imported a new type of parasite which is believed to be hostile to the borer. Several of the experts believe that the parasite will stop the pest.

Corn borers now infest more than 100,000 square miles. They have eaten away 20 percent of the crop in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan.

The federal budget for 1928 includes $10 million for the control of the pest. The money will be used to purchase machinery to eradicate the pest in some sections.

Farmer borers now infest more than 100,000 square miles. They have eaten away 20 percent of the crop in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan.

The great campaign now is aimed to stop the pest's advance before they reach the corn belt.

Attack from Within.

Because the borers are dependent on certain parasites from within, external applications of insecticides are almost useless. The best control measure is to attack the borer larvae, which are crimson and translucent, likely to harbor larvae, shredding it for ensilage, or burning all such field refuse before hibernation, or to burn all such field refuse before hibernation, or to burn all such field refuse before hibernation, or to burn all such field refuse before hibernation.

Another important oil is to ascertain how well several groups of planes can carry out cross-country flights ranging from 100 to 1000 miles to locate the borers. The movements as planned run on express schedules with but narrow margins for possible unfavorable weather conditions.

Surprisingly, maneuvers will probably be held by the five cavalry regiments stationed along the Mexican border, though the greatest number of planes will be used in the part of the plan.

The San Antonio maneuvers, under command of Major General Ernest H. Harmon, Eighth Corps Area commander, will be held in the Texas panhandle, with 100 planes.

The first phase will involve participation of all ground and air forces on the same side, designed to develop staff functions, tactics, command of operations of large units and execution of the general plan of the commanding general.

In the second phase, part of the air force will operate in attacks on the ground troops and positions, special attention being given to the problem of aviation offense and the protection of the ground troops by ground and defensive air forces.

Plans for the Air Corps concentration, prepared by Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief air corps officer, call for participation of 30 pursuit planes, 20 attack planes, 20 bombing planes, 12 observation planes, 12 aircraft, all transports, and four staff planes, all under command of Brig. Gen. James E. Futch.

Of almost equal importance with the actual maneuvers is the test of the aircraft involved in bringing the air units from stations all over the country. It is estimated that 475,000 air miles will be flown by the time the planes return to their bases.

Trucks, drivers, assistant secretary of war for aviation, describes the purpose of the air maneuvers as "to provide for the maximum opportunity for battle air units composed of all types of combat planes."

Secondly, to make the personnel of one air unit class to study the effectiveness of other types.

Thirdly, to test adequacy of

She had been a resident of the Twin Falls tract for 10 years, and was born in Linnbridge, Iowa. George and Mrs. Brooks are the surviving relatives. Interment in the cemetery.

L. C. Lee was entertained at a 7 o'clock dinner on Thursday evening at the J. D. Eastman home. Eastman was the evening's divisional chairman.

This fire was built by those who had been unsympathetic to witness the crucifixion and even to mock in outward service his conscious lack of communism.

"G. Followed Jesus afar off (v. 54). Those drew a sword and cut off an ear from one of the servants of Christ (v. 55), when they came to arrest Jesus. He was thus zealous for the Lord. He was trying to keep up in outward service his conscious lack of communism.

Jesus rebuked for taking the sword and the awkward position in which his act had placed him, caused him to leave after off & He keenly felt Christ's reprimand. Following Jesus far off got him into trouble.

He wanted himself at the enemy's fire (v. 57).

This fire was built by those who had been unsympathetic to witness the crucifixion and even to mock in this tragic hour. For Christ's disciples to try to get afford from the crucifixion for the satisfaction of His enemies is sinful.

Many professing Christians are living a life of compromise, even attempting to get pleasure out of the things which the enemies of Christ have prepared for us.

Stop open denial (v. 57).

Step by step downward Peter went until the words of a servant girl provoked open and blasphemous denial.

Then even the Lord said and said "If I should die, then I am ready to go in any wise." Peter's mouth is still when he shrank from the cross.

It was that shunning which separated him from contact with God. It should be remembered that there can be no separation between God and man.

The position from which to attack the so-called backsliders have never been gone.

11. The Repentance of Peter (Luke 22:51-62).

The look of Jesus (v. 61). It was a most wondrous look. It was doubtless filled with pity and pain. Christ knew the trial through which Peter and the other disciples would pass and He played for them. This look brought the full realization of his earnestness and dedication and his blasphemous words of denial, and yet it displayed His pity and forgiving love.

12. Peter's bitter tears (v. 62).

The look of Jesus filled him with consternation. It called to mind his beatific smile and countenance. How awful must this have been—when he went out that night into the darkness, little knowing what he was to do.

He came back into contact with his Lord. Doubtless the message from the women as they came from the tomb brought the first glad cheer to his heart. Christ said to them: "Go and tell my disciples and Peter." While he encouraged him, no doubt as to indicated Christ's particular consideration and care for him.

Two Things Needed

There are two things that they need to possess who go on pilgrimage; courage and an unspotted life.—John Buxton.

Seeing and Talking

Men are born with two eyes, but with one tongue, that they may see twice as much as they say—Cotton.

The Holy Ghost

No man is at his best until he is united with the Holy Ghost.—Tucker.

Lovely, kissable little faces, which are cut from the smiling bosom of childhood, and milk-shaded and fringed, most becomingly. "So much for the wee tots' spring bonnet!" For older little girls, straw hats, silk crowns, berets and cloches.

Lesson for May 1 PETER'S DENIAL AND REPENTANCE

LESSON TEXT: Mark 14:52, 64-67.
THE STORY OF CHRIST: "Goldensecret"—Let him think that, with its stand like lead feet, he fall, and he will be saved.

JUDEA: "The Story of Peter's Denial and Repentance."

INTERMISSION AND SILENT TOPIC: "How Jesus is Denied Today."

THE STORY OF BODDEN'S TEMPTATION.

1. Peter's Denial (Mark 14:52).

This lesson will be related to him about the cross and saved him with a foot out. Declared: "I know not the man." When the disciples would no longer bear Christ's message about the cross, they not only ceased to grow in knowledge, but they began to deviate in their conduct, and were exposed to the possibility of the shameful death of birth! Lord Steps in Peter's buckling!

1. Overweening self-confidence (vv. 29-31).

The unwillingness in fact the cross alienated him from Jesus, and when apprised of the fact that the disciples would all forsake Jesus, Peter declared that Jesus was certainly mistaken in his sayings. "Although all shall be offended, yet will not I." Our confidence must not be shaken when we are most sure of our safety.

2. Sleeping at the post of duty (v. 37).

In one short hour the very one who was so confident of his self-sufficiency was so overcome by fear that instead of watching the only way to escape from buckling it is to watch.

3. Lack of prayer (v. 38).

The legitimate inference from the Lord's words "watch and pray" is that He has commanded us to pray that we may be enabled to do what there is little necessity due to the lack of the sense of need of God's help.

4. Disgraceful denial (v. 47).

Some drew a sword and cut off an ear from one of the servants of Christ (v. 55), when they came to arrest Jesus. He was thus zealous for the Lord. He was trying to keep up in outward service his conscious lack of communism.

5. Followed Jesus afar off (v. 54).

Those drew a sword and cut off an ear from one of the servants of Christ (v. 55), when they came to arrest Jesus. He was thus zealous for the Lord. He was trying to keep up in outward service his conscious lack of communism.

6. Followed Jesus afar off (v. 54).

Those drew a sword and cut off an ear from one of the servants of Christ (v. 55), when they came to arrest Jesus. He was thus zealous for the Lord. He was trying to keep up in outward service his conscious lack of communism.

7. Open denial (v. 57).

Step by step downward Peter went until the words of a servant girl provoked open and blasphemous denial.

8. The look of Jesus (v. 61).

It was doubtless filled with pity and pain. Christ knew the trial through which Peter and the other disciples would pass and He played for them.

This look brought the full realization of his earnestness and dedication and his blasphemous words of denial, and yet it displayed His pity and forgiving love.

9. Peter's bitter tears (v. 62).

The look of Jesus filled him with consternation. It called to mind his beatific smile and countenance. How awful must this have been—when he went out that night into the darkness, little knowing what he was to do.

He came back into contact with his Lord. Doubtless the message from the women as they came from the tomb brought the first glad cheer to his heart. Christ said to them: "Go and tell my disciples and Peter."

While he encouraged him, no doubt as to indicated Christ's particular consideration and care for him.

Millions of Workers Will Celebrate May Day of '27 Still Facing Vital Issues

By United Press

LONDON, April 29.—(UPI)—Labor will spend its own day tomorrow, May Day, in combating the basic demands of the workers, the main command of the May Day strike.

One year ago tomorrow Great Britain ached under the shadow of an industrial strike. This time in history, too, labor's forces of the hundreds carried their stand to every available street corner or open park space with a cry for work, work, work. The year throughout the length and breadth of the land was "the turning point" in the cause. Labor has seen its day.

On May 1, in the trade Union Council's annual council met the delegation of the Miner's federation.

The chairman of the congress, Arthur Pugh, left the miners and manufacturers' delegations in the hands of a group of newspapermen that a general strike of the congress' 4,000,000 members had been called for midnight of May 1.

The miners' council had taken command of the long-standing dispute between the miners and the mine owners of Great Britain, by May 1, 1926, the miners had won all the way, electrical works, printing, building and virtually all trades were directed to cease their labors on midnight of May 1. For boy and girl miners, however, it was found out how long it would last a week later when Pugh announced that he had informed the Prime Minister that the strike had been settled off.

Government Ready. The decision on May 1 to call a general strike of all trade unions and control of the economy in the country at large. A few fanatic pro-claimed the approach of "Armageddon." The strike had been proclaimed on Labor's "May-day" as a strike of all workers to show how to celebrate an event still three days off; yet one which almost swept it off its feet. Whether it was the audaciousness of the preachers of revolution, or the greed of the employers, the strike, like many drunkenness, with "right-of-power" which caused Labor to take it, celebration calmly is not known. For months the government had been in a state of alarm, the leaders of the strike which it had seen coming some time had prepared quietly and unknown to many millions of Great Britain's population who were shocked by the size of British industry. That preparation "broke" the strike.

The government of the general strike and the cost of living, the surviving the general strike is the Trade Union Bill now before parliament. Labor leaders have characterized the strike as "forcing" the government to accept the bill of Socialism and Trade Unionism and meetings of protest and indignation have been plagued throughout Great Britain, and topped off by a national demonstration against the bill. On May 6, 1926, Sir John Simon, an authority on trade union law declared in the House of Commons that the cost of living had been kept "illegal and every leader advised it was liable to be sued for damage to uttermost, farthing of his personal possessions."

Some persons declare that the government's Trade Union Bill is a direct result of that statement and an attempt to prevent a repetition of such a strike. In Brasile Law, the main features extend the conspiracy and protection of property act of 1919, so as to keep "illegal and every leader advised it was liable to be sued for damage to uttermost, farthing of his personal possessions."

May day being a Sunday, the workers' customary parade will be attended by thousands and thousands of men, women and children who are customarily carried in these parades are customarily carried in these parades have been covered with inscriptions to the effect that they will maintain the eight-hour day and thousand of speakers who on that day customarily ascend the soap-box to have prepared them speeches to be read to the public.

The eight-hour day, virtually the last vestige of the 1918 revolution, has been lost to the workers in parliament, and while a bill which maintains the eight-hour day as a legal working day only "in principle" permitting of an amendment to permit of an eight-hour day for all workers, the bill which affirms the ten-hour shift is being re-established in most industries. However, these demands will be confined to the moratorium and the foremen, barometers of the soap-box orators. In the afternoon, the workers will be in the streets to demonstrate and celebrate May day under different slogans. They gather in the largest restaurant gardens at the center of the city, and dancing, singing, reciting and dancing to accompany the afternoons and evening for the younger ones, the older part of the crowd. The latter, however, the same, when the last year they proclaimed Labor's "May-day."

SERIOUS SITUATION. FACES CHINA CHIEFS.

LONDON, April 29.—(UPI)—Swiss and other organizations are expected to co-operate tomorrow in the fifth of a series of demonstrations to commemorate various anniversaries in Switzerland; there seems a marked tendency this year on the part of the Swiss workmen to celebrate May day in pure Swiss style.

The labor organizations, as usual, have been agitating during the past several days in anticipation of the demonstration and the first day of the month, a strike was standing ready to handle the situation should any untoward incident occur.

The general labor unions, which has been unusually active in recent weeks, issued posters to its various subsidiary bodies calling on the workmen to observe May Day, as a holiday, and that the May Day tendency of the Swiss workmen is that although it is at least partially observable, the Swiss spirit peaks re-

COUNTY LINE UP IN FLOOD VICTIM DRIVE

Various organizations get busy helping raise money in the Red Cross Drive for sufferers.

Twin Falls County is lining up in the drive for the "American Red Cross" and various organizations are working hard to raise money. In fact, a meeting was recently held by the Knights of Columbus, the local club, to encourage members of that organization to contribute.

Other meetings continued and opened from the Knights of Columbus, the American Legion, the Red Cross, and various organizations. An appeal was made by G. E. Parker, secretary of the Kiwanis Club, to all members of that organization to contribute.

of the district meeting of the Knights of Columbus, who took the lead in organizing the county drive for $1500, and raised $250 in a few hours.

The Knights announced a party and dance for members of the fraternity and their families. The Jesters have been donated the Elk's hall for the same purpose.
