Nungesser, Coli Reported Traveling Terrific Clip on Trip from Paris.
By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 9.—A navy department message from the Portsmouth, N. H., naval base this afternoon said the Nungesser plane passed over Isle of Shoals at 2:03 p. m. Late of Shoals is off Portsmouth about 225 miles from New York.
ORGANIZE SEARCH
NEW YORK, May 9.—The first expedition to search for Captains Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli, attempting to fly from Paris to New York, was organized this afternoon, when the fourth hour had passed without the aviators being sighted.
Four planes of the 27th Division Air Service, national guard, turned up to take off from Miller Field, Staten Island, N. Y., and search the Long Island shores as far north perhaps as Boston for the aviators.
Picturisque Characters
Few more picturesque characters fly than Nungesser and Coli. Nungesser, famous as one of France's heroes of the war, was wounded a score of times. He is much alike in appearance and part of his skill is an aluminum plate, put in by surgery, which would be fatal if it were shot out.
Coli, whose story in the war was only slightly less than that of Nungesser, has but one eye and he wears a black monocle to cover the eye socket. Nungesser, 35 years and Coli, 36. They are much alike in temperament, silent and unselfish, and their friends and admirers in which they took off with a terrific speed by their friends and admirers, then ten miles out dropped the landing gear of their plane, and the only way they could have been sighted on land should they reach North America, was typical of them.

With her scant crew of five under Captain Karl Korhies, who broke the British North sea blockade in 1917, the ship limped through the Golden Gate yesterday and could have been mistaken for a tug had it not been for the incongruous sails.

NEW FLOOD DISASTERS ARE FEARED

Thousands of Workers Labor to Strengthen Dike Despite Warnings.
By ALFRED P. BECK,
United Press Staff Correspondent.
NEW ORLEANS, La., May 9.—Despite engineers' predictions that a break in the levee is certain, thousands of workers today labored to strengthen the Mississippi dike at Big Lake and prevent homes of 200,000 southern-Louisiana residents from being flooded.
Chance Is Slight.
The Big Lake dike is an egg shaped turn of Bayou des Claires in Avoyelles parish. Technical experts declared the chance is slight that a break in the levee at this point can be averted if the retaining wall gives way at any point a 25 mile stretch of the river, 13 small creeks of the state could be inundated.
But examining the artificial break in the levee which New Orleans depends upon to save the city, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Secretary of War Davis planned to leave here tonight for Paducah, to meet Coolidge.
Both cabinet members rested last night, few from contractors which have been there occupied since they arrived in the flood area Thursday.
Davis had to leave for the north today to confer with President Coolidge and officials interested in flood control work and a settlement of problems involved.
Hoover announced, however, that he would remain here until the crisis threatens the Big Lake, where the problems involved.

REVIVAL OF HOME GREAT NEED; BARTON

Baptist Pastor Speaking to Liked Fellowship at Mother's Day

Declaring the home to be the chief institution in the world, Rev. E. C. Barton, pastor of the Baptist church in his address at the annual celebration of Mother's Day at the P. O. E. hall Sunday asserted that more than a revival of religion, of good government, of fraternal organizations or of racial parties, the nation needs a revival of the home.

Dr. Barton said that there are more divorce in the United States than in any other country because people have acquired the habit of regarding home and motherhood lightly.

He said that the home is the only place where the child is born, where he grows up, where he is taught obedience later on in his school years, where he is in fact, we are all so busy attending to the business of other people's lives that we have no time to attend to our own.

The musical program consisted of a quartet consisting of Walter Carter, A. D. Helms, H. H. Mosser, and Mrs. E. C. Barton.

References to Mother's Day was made in all the churches Sunday either in sermons or in the musical programs, or both.

Which Way Is Right?

Who has the right stant on big business? Henry Ford or the General Motors corporation? Ford has followed his own course and has been enormously successful. General Motors has followed an opposite course and has failed a success nearly as spectacular.

Which one is right? Ford's way is to keep all of the stock in his own hands. His ideas are all started in course, the exception not one (with) of them his own distribution of the business as a stockholder. Let the company grow to be a veritable colossus, as has Ford remains the central figure, one might say the only important figure.

General Motors has followed another plan. It believes that by lending its workers to share in profits it will gain in efficiency and effectiveness. Accordingly, in 1922, it set a million shareholders aside more than of stock to be divided among its executives.

These executives are now multimillions. Furthermore, it is announced that this plan will be extended to younger officers. General Motors is proud of this record. It is proud of this distribution of its stock, proud of the fact that it is making rich men out of its employes.

Here, then, we have two diametrically opposite systems. Ford's plan glorifies the central figure and subordinates the others. General Motors reverses it.

Which scheme is right? Which one is more likely to become the standard for large American industry? That, of course, is a hard question to answer. Perhaps one might say that both are right.

For, however you look at it, you must admit that both Ford and General Motors are wonderfully successful.

Solomon Said It. Mary Lewis is undoubtedly devoted to her art and yet she leaves a perfectly good career to shift for itself while she goes traipsing off to Europe with a husband she has only had for five days.

You'd think with all the new freedom they have achieved, the economic independence of the individual and the political equality and all women would be glad to get over their silly attachment to the only clods who still seem able to dazzle them.

The Professor Tells It. Witts can be sharpened by law. The professor is indolent, but the results may be checked and satisfied. This is the conclusion of Prof. Robert D. Ward of Harvard university, who writes in the Journal of Heretics on the workings of the intellectual quest which which more has been in effect two years.

Witts was an economic cause because it nullified the sense of necessity for its dissolution, hampering the stream of labor that by maintaining has had the opposite effect of throwing America back upon the necessity of improving laboring activities.

The Professor Tells It. Prof. Ward says that the question, "What will our education have been answered by the mechanized trenching machine which can do the work of hundreds of shovelers.

SHORTLY SAYS HIGHWAY BONDS ARE VOID

RAIL ATTORNEY HOLDS $1,250,000 ISSUE IS INVALID

H. B. Thompson, Attorney for Company, Gives Opinion That 120 Validation Acts Passed by Last Legislature Are Invalid; Twin Falls District Awaits Court Ruling.

The question whether the $1,250,000 highway bonds issued by the Twin Falls district, and numerous other bonds issued by the 27 other districts and committees of the state for highway purposes are valid or void was put squarely up to the highway board last Saturday by Senator M. J. Sweeley, of the firm of Sweeley & Sweeley, attorneys in the district. It was stated to await further developments in this matter before paying the $4,250,000 remainder interest which is due in June at Yellowstone.

Last winter the federal district court, three judges sitting, decided in favor of the Oregon Short Line, an action brought to enjoin collection of highway district bonds on the ground that they were unconstitutional. The particular suit was brought to prohibit Clark county as a district from issuing such bonds. R. W. Katerndahl, attorney of Clark county, who was serving in the law office of the late general attorney covering the matter, which was believed by him and other legislators to be the correct legal position, was not in order that there be no loop hole, as he believed, in the statute covering such bonds. The district was also introduced and passed.

Railroad Says No. H. B. Thompson, of Pocatello, Idaho, attorney for the Oregon Short Line, has been appointed as the attorney to effect that the general validation law and the 119 special statutes, are all unconstitutional on the ground that the legislature cannot pass such measures.

Gives No Opinion. Senator Sweeley told the highway
