SPRINGFIELD, INDIANAPOLIS, May 20.—George Souders, 23, of Lafayette, driving a Duesenbergs, won the 500-mile automobile race here this afternoon.

The winner is a graduate of the dirt tracks of northern Indiana and this is his first year among the elite of the 500-mile race.

Until three years ago, he was an engineering student at Purdue university in Lafayette, Ind.

Frank Lockhart, who led the field for the first 81 laps and for nine more thereafter, came within a hair of being the winning driver, but young Souders refused to be fooled.

Souders won the race in five hours, seven minutes and 44.8 seconds, an average of 97.45 miles an hour, and took the $200,000 prize.

The Speedway record is 101.12. Lockhart lost the lead when Frank Lockhart, who led the field for the first 81 laps and for nine more thereafter, came within a hair of being the winning driver, but young Souders refused to be fooled.

Off in a flash, the 23 cars flashed across the timing tape, and the race was on.

Coolidge Urges World Halt War, Use Reason

President Outlines Program Which Will Dictate U. S. Action at Geneva Arms Conference in Speech at Graves of Soldier Dead.

By PAUL H. MALLOY
United Press Correspondent
ARLINGTON, NATIONAL, CENETERY, Va., May 20.—President Coolidge appealed to the world today to discard the element of force and competition in international circumstances and to rely on reason and law.

Standing before the graves of thousands of the nation's military dead, in memorial exercises at Arlington national cemetery, Mr. Coolidge laid down the program which will dictate the action of this country's delegates to the Geneva international disarmament conference.

While we wish for peace everywhere, it is our desire that it should be a peace not imposed by force, but a peace established by such action as we can take for the benefit of the world.

Although we are well aware that in the immediate past and perhaps even now there are certain localities where our citizens would be given over to pillage and murder, but for the presence of our military forces, nevertheless it is the settled policy of our government to deal with other nations not on the basis of force and compulsion but on the basis of maintaining law and order.

DESERVED HONORS PAID TODAY

Twin Falls citizens, in common with those of the rest of the nation, today paid tribute to those who died in the service of this country, that they may come again to a full measure of our life of liberty and prosperity.

On one day in every year this busy, restless nation pauses in what it is doing and pays its sincere tribute of respect and devotion to the men who have died in its defense.

That day—today—is Decoration day. It is a day of memories; a day on which our minds wander back to distant wars and forgotten battles; a day on which we remind ourselves again that many thousands of men have found our flag and our homeland so precious that they have willingly died for them.

And so, today, we pay our tribute.

We do so with the thought that we are, in the only way possible, doing something for the men who have fought and died for us. Yet as a matter of fact the homage that we pay today is something that means far more to us than it does to them.

The men who gave their lives on the shell-swept slopes of Gettysburg, in the murky tangle of The Wilderness and in the bloody depths of the Argonne forest do not need our tribute. They have, as we put it, gone to their reward, and there is little we can do for them.

It is we who are the gainers by what we do today. For it is true now as of old, that we grow like what we contemplate. A nation takes shape according to its ideals; men and women, without intending to, take on the characteristics that they respect most. And so, under the impression that we are giving, we receive. The respect that American soldiers rendered on the battlefields of two hemispheres did not cause them, they left for us memories of heroism and self-sacrifice, of gallant manhood and unshaken courage; and we, remembering, are better for it.

But it is not the dead alone who give us these noble memories. Today, when we think of the men who fell at Chambersville, at Shiloh, at Santiago, at Belleau Wood and at Chantigny; with them, intermingled, are their comrades, who fought beside them but who lived to fight and serve again. These men, still alive, are men to whom we owe a great debt. They have served us faithfully, whatever we can do to repay that debt is our duty and our honor. We cannot do anything else. The men who have defended us may rest assured of this. Today, partaking again of the inspiration that is given us by the mighty parade of living and dead, we may pledge ourselves once more to its full payment.

THE FREIGHT RATES ON GRAIN

The Interstate Commerce Commission Saturday held that most of the present freight rates on grain and grain products from producing points west of the Rocky mountains to California and the Pacific ports, which were attacked in a complaint of the Oregon Grain Exchange, were just.

The producing territory in which the rates were upheld was four points on the Oregon Short Line in Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming; points in Utah on the Bamberger electric railway, the Denver & Rio Grande Western, the Los Angeles and Pacific, the Santa Fe, the Union Pacific, the Great Northern, the Idaho Central and the Western Pacific and certain points on the Denver, Rio Grande & Western in Colorado.

The decision ordered decreases on these commodities to inner California, the Imperial Valley and Arizona and from certain other points in the producing territory to coast destinations.

While the utterance will be of some benefit to the farmers the total decreases probably will not be sufficient to enable the growers of this district to take full advantage of the west coast market.

Several factors probably entered into the decision of the commission. One of these, no doubt, was that the present tonnage and that which could be guaranteed was not sufficient, in the opinion of the commission, to justify extensive rate reductions.

The proper step now would appear to be for the farming organizations to put their marketing experts into action to the end that a much larger tonnage in west coast points will be assured under a rate cut. If this showing is made before the commission, a reduction will be possible on the railroads, if they are certain of a large tonnage, which will be likely to offer opposition.

"BEAUTIFUL BUT DUMB"

The woman vice president of the national Parent-Teachers association blames school trustees and superintendents for the lack of individualism among the school pupils of the country.

The children are referred to as "babbling" minded, all of one type, of one form and face and ability to wear their clothes, rather than fitness for the job. The blame for the selection of the "beautiful but dumb" is placed on the shoulders of the men members of the school boards "who can see and recognize a young and pretty face but who violently cannot recognize brains, ability and experience."

The indictment is rather severe but the men are not altogether to blame, particularly when they hark back in their minds and remember that their first sweetheart was the pretty school teacher in spite of the fact that she probably was several years their senior at that particular time, and that they do not want their own children to suffer her fate.

The memory stays with them and the school teachers whom they decide upon to instruct their own boys and girls are no doubt patterned in their minds from their own youthful experiences.

The only way to remedy and cure the situation will be to do away with men members of the school boards and elect women and permit them to select the type, character and style of school teacher, having in view the depth of mind, personality and scholastic attainments.—Idaho Falls Times-Register.

LINDBERGH'S LIFE

The story of America's Hero, the first man to fly from New York to Paris in a non-stop trip.

By MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY, Author of "The Story of the Flight of Lindbergh" (Copyright 1927 by The United Press)

CHAPTER II.

Charles A. Lindbergh began his flight to Paris in a dentist's office in Detroit.

He didn't know it then, for he had only heard about men flying in those days. He was a boy, just out of school, playing with the motor and the tools of a dental shop and an experimenter's laboratory that he had found the foundation for his supreme accomplishment.

Herding Tracer.

The dentist's office was that of Dr. C. M. Land, his paternal grandfather, just as clearly as his heritage of courage can be traced through the paternal ancestry, his flair for mechanics, his urge to try anything new with his great machinery can be traced back to his mother.

Dr. Land was quite fond of his grandson, Charles, and he gave him the particular privilege of visiting his dental office and permitting him to give him a hand in the work of the office, which any mother of such a child can well appreciate as he himself went on with his researches.

Dr. Land was born in Ontario, descendant of one of the founders of Holland, Ontario, his father was in New York and Brooklyn, attending dentistry in Hartford, Conn. and Dr. Land was born in Chicago and then came to Detroit. His wife, Charlotte, was the daughter of a Detroit physician.

Perfecting Process.

Just how well defined in the experimental turn which Charles Lindbergh's inheritance can be seen from the fact that in his Detroit office he could be found perfecting a process of using porcelain for filling teeth, invented a self-lighting system and developed other revolutionary ideas.

Dr. Land was not the only thing to which Dr. Land turned his inventive genius. He perfected and patented such things as incandescent knives for furnaces, gas and oil burners.

"His gas jets have never been bettered," said his mother, Charlotte Lindbergh, still maintaining, "Undoubtedly Charles first became fascinated with mechanics in my father's office. Mr. Lindbergh said in telling of her son's boyhood."

"He had a little fond of curious appliances, wheels, pulleys, belts, levers and such things."

"He used to take Charles with him to his office and Charles would spend his time with him and tinkering with the machines."

An uncle of Lindbergh's is the inventor of the automobile and manufactured in Detroit.

With such a heritage and foundation it was not natural that Charles Lindbergh turned to motorcycles, then built a motor driven life boat, took up airplanes and when he had exhausted everything else that was new in the flying profession, decided to fly to Paris.

As to his modesty, the very quality makes it difficult to go into the details for Mrs. Lindbergh herself has the quality as strongly defined as does her son.

"He taken some of the possible more deep-seated instincts from his father," Mrs. Lindbergh commented, "when questioned about her son's heredity."

Teaches Many Lessons.

"I have learned many lessons from my boy," she said in another comment. "His flying was all his own. I had nothing to do with it and never thought of interfering." was another comment, who said, "All the credit is due my boy and I don't want to take it from him."

Mrs. Lindbergh answered reporters who hesitated her to tell them how it was that she had raised Charles into such a man, "I never was a mother, I was a friend."

When messages of congratulations poured in from all quarters, Sunday after the Paris flight she commented that "it all shows how the boys are thinking of what he has done."

"Friday I was unknown and now I am a hero and I am the great man of the world," she said, "and it is all due to Charles."

One may search through all that has been said of this remarkable woman who kept on teaching her children, class while her son was flying in the air, and the researcher will find nothing in which Mrs. Lindbergh claims no fraction of mother's share of credit for herself. It all goes to Charles.

The Family Secret.

But here is a family secret. His mother admits that Charles inherited from her side of the house, the early, early days which he grows into and into which many a father would like to twine her fingers. An uncle of Charles Lindbergh has the habit of Charles' looks are the family secret.

If there is any one thing that the hero of the New York to Paris flight fears, it is the circle into which he is continually. He has tried every means to make his hair straight, but it simply won't behave. His friends agree that on rainy days Lindbergh is most apt to be out of sorts and irritable because damp weather makes his hair curl. That means to be about the only skeleton in the Lindbergh closet.

ORPHEUM

In Paramount's hilarious comedy, "Crazy as the Day," which made its local bow at the Idaho theater yesterday, Wallace Deery signs a contract to play baseball for the city of Twin Falls, and almost wrecks the entire league with his escapades.

Hailed as a "find," Berry, a small town junk dealer, enters the picture. So popular does the performance of "Crazy as the Day" become that the show is extended to the 10th of June.

Patrons of the Idaho theater today, attracted an unusually large number of women, and they were not all flappers either, but serious minded women who went there to gain a truthful knowledge of life.

They saw a picture filled with humor and pathos and as they watched the row, they personally knew, those women left the theater today convinced that the subject which we have refused to discuss because it "isn't nice" has become alarming and has reached such a point that it is only through widespread discussion and whole education can we ever succeed in taming this modern monster.

It has been acquired in modern civilization. Ladies only will be admitted tonight, and men only tomorrow.
