NEW OIL CASE DATA MAYS SEND SIX TO PRISON

Alleged Attempt to Ap- proach Fall-Sinclair Juror Viewed As Victory.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Government lawyers today examined their latest ammunition for the Burns-Mays oil kidnapping trial, which it will demolish the defense and cause the conviction of the six defendants.

It was readily learned that the new evidence involves an attempt to approach Fall-Sinclair, a juror in the Burns-Sinclair oil kidnapping trial.

United States Commissioner Burns told the court that he had been advised by Frank S. O'Kelly, his attorney, that the defense believe the intent can be proved with evidence ready presented and in hand, but they indicated today that new angles are being investigated.

Alleged attempt will be called to the stand probably next week. His new testimony, enrobed in a voluntary statement made to the United States Commissioner Fall-Sinclair yesterday, is understood to divulge with the new evidence produced Thursday by the government. This was the defense of the Burns-Sinclair trial, which was adjourned.

Lindbergh's testimony will not come until the trial is resumed, probably in January.

Charles G. Hough, chief of the Burns jury shadowers, who has been on the stand for two days identified himself as Fall-Sinclair's best witness.

He will resume Monday morning after a short recess for the defense, and, later, defense cross-examination.

THE FIRST SNOW.

When it is in this season in Idaho, the year has lived peacefully to a mellow old age; we wait with the anticipation of magnificence the coming of the first snowshower which is as inevitable as the ebb and flow of time itself! But we should not slyly shun, for that suggests terror, nor inevitable, for that implies dread; and there can be but tranquility as profound as the sabotage of an untroubled universe in that day when summer's last shower has dropped and the heavens spread a full-blown power over it. In drowsy the midnight vapor, giving sheen to the fire of Venus, congealed as dew on the rose of the highlands. And now the night is bound, bound by the same enchantress, bring forth myriads of crystal fairies to flutter upon the whiterd aster.

Here is death without the dolor of death, the sombre minstrel reciting not the sorrow of passing, nor grief for that which is gone. For man is so sensitive that nothing dries, not clothed herself, knows. Always she wears the wedding garment, though in her bosom put on the shroud, dismal and hospitable melancholy, nature put on the white burial veil. We alone sleep over the inexpressible loss.

In times of spring the fruit tree blossomed in radiant loveliness, the shrub was a fullness of lustrous hue. And here in the inspiring visitation of the first snow, these soft petals of the apple tree, these pearl-like sheaths of the honeysuckle are, it seems in fanciful thought, wafted back to us. Though we have not the flowering gifts of the earth we have the moistened treasures of the heavens. As in May, again every tree, every shrub, is bedecked with effervescent delight. It is the springtime of winter.

The amorous beauty reaches to the bounds of the landscape. "It is for us to see the grandeur brought by the heavy filterings. Though infinitesimal they seem in their intangible fairy, these flakes stars carved with an artistry supreme, are fairer in their indestructible beauty than the celestial luminaries of the night." The snowflake as well as the diamond is of crystal mold; but the gem of stone we can have and retain, while the gem spin of vapor is vastly rarer—no miser can hoard up its charms before our eyes it vanishes into the invisibility from which it came. And even so, a jewel of dew is a priceless thing in the shadow of the flower; for soon the sun dissolves it unto himself.

If we go into the mountains, into the clefts, into the caverns, amid the murkiness of the imminence banners of the first snowfall, we shall find a wondrous wonder of it. Shaggy coniferous sheltered in new veining. The spruce is draped with incense. The fir is fringed in fatal lace, woven in this bough of aromatic branches. The pine is bedecked with the embroidery of fingers unseen.

The first snow comes, and earth is flushed as in vegetation. We are awed by the magnitude of its majesty. We relish in the blitheness of the day. It is a day of destiny when the cloud loosens its hosts of flakes to march upon us like phantom knights. They are the vanguard of winter—winter with his frozen breath, winter with his moaning voice. But when winter shall have run his course, there shall come a breeze which is spring. Nature shall bid him pall—the resurrection shall be at hand. Life shall have triumphed over death.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

By Miss Jean Sweeney.

The High-Y club had its weekly meeting at the home of Delma Anderson. William Hinton, a dance by Mrs. Dorothy Diskobekoff and talk by Mr. Phineas, Mrs. Jones and Mr. Lyon. Punch, John Miller and Harry Stevens. The meeting ended with refreshments served by the host.

The Philodemic club held a meeting Thursday evening which began with a roll call by Dorothy Sweeney and Ruth Johnson and the opening of the meeting with the singing of the national anthem. Plans were made for a Christmas party which will be held after the close of the school year. Ruth Johnson gave an interesting talk entitled "How Does My Garden Grow?" and the meeting was adjourned after a group discussion of the problems of the modern world. The most prominent speakers were Ursula Krikstan and Edna Cuthbertson.

Last evening the members of the football team were the guests of their mothers at a banquet given in the studio of Mrs. E. C. Brown. The tables were arranged in the individual style and were beautifully decorated. For the first half the team put up a strenuous defense against a fine attack which drove them into a corner. The second half was a masterpiece of passes and takes. There was no taking out of the game. This marks the best performance of the team to date. The team's complete outfit. The Indians sprang early new formations in the shapes of lions, cheetahs, panthers and leopards with few exceptions. The boys solved it finally, but only their knowledge and superb condition enabled them to last till the final gun.

Larry Hodges was co-coachman.

CUP COLLECTION RECALLS CLIMBS

Rising interest in the hill-climbing contests between planned automobile clubs in the collection of 15 entries now occupying the amateur place in the history of the Oakland Motor Club.

According to the latest report, the competition, organized by the club which also has 200 members, with the automobile industry, respectively, to sell over the interest of the public in the hill-climbing contests which were started in 1926, when the public marvelled at the record-breaking performances of the Conoco Service stations in the early days of gasoline.

GREAT CHANGES MADE IN MAJOR LOOPS DURING LAST FIVE YEARS

Only Five of 1923 Managers Remain at Helms, and Several Teams Have Won Pennants Who Were Never at Top Before; Meeting Opens Next Week.

By FRANK GETTY, United Press Writer.
NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Arrived in New York today by fast mail men who will be going into conference next week in the annual meeting of the National League managers and general managers, the changes which have taken place during the national pastime in the past five years.

Five years ago only four of the 16 major managers who will gather here in next week's discussion were at the helm of their respective clubs.

Five years ago John R. McLaughlin was the only manager dealing with discipline in front of Heyman. Now there, as every school boy knows, the Babe is now a model youth 14 baseball.

Five years ago Washington never had won a pennant. Neither had the St. Louis Cardinals, not since the National League was founded in 1876. Since then the Cards have won two pennants and a world championship, while the Cardinals have gathered in one of each. The Pittsburgh Pirates with two and a half a world series in the past five seasons.

Perhaps the most striking example of the change wrought in this brief period, however, is furnished by a comparison of the managers of 1923 and those chosen by the P. S. C. A. CHICAGO LEAGUE.

The 16 managers for the new baseball season are as follows:

DAILY MARKET REPORTS

TECHNICALLY BULLISH STATUS SENDS GRAINS HIGHER

By United Press

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Technically not bullish, but grain prices were more steady in a strong market on the Chicago board of trade. Corn led the rise with early signs of about one cent. Wheat and oats followed the figures.

Wheat is higher; corn is higher and oats are very higher. Wheat was up fractionally on light Liverpool, London and the advance in corn. The cash market went the break.

Corn was most active at $1.35. Wheat was up 1 cent to $1.25. Oats were up 1 cent to 34 cents.

Oats displayed independent strength. Cash oats went up one cent.

Provisions showed losses.
