City Rockford Wild With Joy Over News Rescue Two Aviators

Details As Obtained by Rockford Chamber of Commerce Are Meager but It Is Known the Fliers Landed on Sukkertoppen Ice Arm and Were Rescued by Michigan-Greenland Expedition...

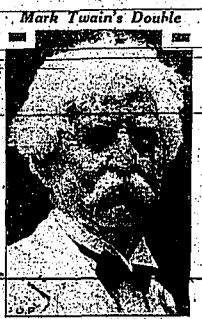

By United Press. ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 3.—Bert Hassell and Parker Gramer, who dropped from sight two weeks ago while attempting to blaze a new air trail from here to Stockholm, have been found safe and well.

Word of the rescue, which came as this city was about to rejoice in the fact that the men were found, turned Rockford into a bedlam of frenzied joy and wild enthusiasm.

When the news first came, Mrs. Hassell, the pilot's wife, who has been on the verge of collapse for the past ten days, was so overjoyed she scarcely could speak.

Ships Hunting For Abandoned Vessel Off Cape Flattery

By United Press

Believed to be wallowing in the trough of a high-sun sea 66 miles off Cape Flattery, the big freighter Florida, abandoned by its crew following a collision Saturday night, was being hunted today by two Seattle tug and a coast guard cutter.

The Florida was abandoned after 48 hours of search for the dense north coast fog. The Florida was built by the Florida Shipbuilding Co., Jacksonville, Fla., and was launched here last week at 3:10 a. m.

The Florida was headed for San Francisco from Everett and the Florida for Seattle from San Francisco, carrying in the path of coastwise and trans-Pacific liners and flying helpfully the flag of the United States.

The Calmar and Canadian Rover both had stayed in sides today as the fog was too thick for them to attempt flying safely.

and German divisions, saw that the Germans had a message for themselves, exposing its center to a killing blow.

Gallieni reached for a telephone and ordered the order, the attack was immediately. But Joffre, near Meaux, was not sleeping and had not slept for four days and nights. The presence of the German army only three hours march from Paris destroyed all incentive to sleep.

Conversation related. Within three minutes the call was through, and the following historic conversation, as now related in the Gallieni's own words.

"What are you, Joffre?" asked Gallieni. "I mean, the Germans are marching to Meaux," Gallieni said. "What are you waiting for? They are only three hours march from Paris." "What is the world as you waiting for? What have you done?" as for the Joffre's attack.

Joffre seemed to study a moment longer than replied, "Wait," he said. "The two divisions seemed to withdraw from their positions and to retreat. The headquarters seemed to hear the haziness of low conversation. The minutes passed without a word being spoken, over the wire, Gallieni pressing impatiently.

"Yes, I Attack," "Joffre, Joffre," he cried over the wire. "There was no reply, and five minutes later he repeated, "Wait, wait, wait," the sound of a serious discussion. Suddenly, Joffre's voice came again.

"Yes, I attack." "That is definite, is it?" Gallieni asked, and upon receiving confirmation, continued, "All right, attack."

That half hour's conversation decided the fate of France and perhaps of England and the other allies as well.

By a check in the morning Joffre had drawn up his plans for the first battle of the Marne. His center forced turned about to look east, but there were less, and he found many of his men left on the station platform, still standing with his feet drawn up in a great square, snatched into the left in the morning.

Gallieni's attack was even more audacious. As military governor of Paris he was worried for the safety of the capital, its people and its riches in the banks and museums. He was anxious for Joffre to take advantage of the German weakness which the little colored pluck exposed him.

Assembling all the men in the garison of Paris, he ordered every French man to take extra care that there were less, and he found many of his men left on the station platform, still standing with his feet drawn up in a great square, snatched into the left in the morning.

BIBLE VERSES AND PRAYER

SOUND ADVICE—Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools.—Ecc. 7:6.
PRAYER—May we bring forth the fruit of the Spirit: Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and self-control.

WE SALUTE THE TWIN FALLS COUNTRY

In this the first issue of the Times under the management of its new owners, who acquired the newspaper in district court under a receiver's sale Saturday afternoon, it is proper that some general statement of their entrance into Twin Falls be made.

The sale was made outright and the full purchase price was paid in cash following negotiations and investigations over a period of several months. When it became known that the property was for sale representative business and professional men of Twin Falls were consulted in an effort to learn if they would desire the entrance of new owners to continue the existing newspaper.

Businessmen told us almost unanimously that there is a definite field here for an evening paper and that they would welcome competent, new ownership and management of the Times. In plain words, assuming that we were the kind of people we represented ourselves to be, they invited us to enter the field.

We have accepted that invitation. To paraphrase an historic announcement, "Twin Falls, we are here." As to what the new Times will be like, promises would be futile. You will be more interested in accomplishments. These will be forthcoming in due time. Owing to the nature of the sale it was impossible to know in advance as to the certainty of the purchase or orders for new equipment had to be held in abeyance. The most necessary supplies have been ordered and many improvements in the plant will be made as time goes on. The purpose is to make the Times a new, a different and a better paper.

Newspaper publishing is at all times a high calling, or should be, and the new owners of the Times are aware of the responsibilities involved. Their hopes of success here are based upon the fact that for 20 years they have owned and published at Pendleton the outstanding newspaper of the eastern Oregon country and during the last nine years they have owned and operated at Astoria the largest and most substantial paper of the lower Columbia region. To undertake the publishing of a paper in Twin Falls, the Magic City and metropolis of the greatest irrigated empire of the West, is no light task. The type of citizenship here calls for real newspaper service and the aim is to meet that test in straightforward fashion and with the least possible delay. The Times will have an energetic, competent staff and the new publishers have the necessary capital to carry on the business.

The new editor, Joseph S. Harvey, was for five years associate editor of the East Oregonian at Pendleton and has the complete confidence of those associated with him here. It was through his intense zeal for the Twin Falls country that they became interested in acquiring this paper.

The Times will be an independent newspaper giving first thought and very earnest attention to policies and principles that seem in accord with the welfare and the happiness of its people. Idaho is no ancient or decadent state. It is the land of the morning vista with a star upon its country's flag that was placed there by men and women not afraid to march and work and fight, too, when danger drew near. It is a real privilege to have part in further fulfilling the dreams of those who pioneered in the olden days and those who came in the newer age of reclamation.

The new publishers of the Times like Twin Falls very much and have the hope that their business here will be so conducted as to merit the confidence and good will of all. You will judge by performance.

EVERY DAY OUGHT TO BE LABOR DAY

Individuals who enjoy idleness and loafing are not normal nor do they take their place in the general scheme of things by contributing some small mite to the world's happiness.

There are those, many thousands, who know from bitter experience that to be idle is to be restless and unhappy. We would dissent from the oft-expressed view that work is a penalty imposed upon man because of sin; frankly that is all tummy-rot. This would indeed be a miserable old world if its millions upon millions of people went picnicking every day in the year. There is something better than that in the daily tasks no matter how monotonous they may be and of course this comment is made in full knowledge of the fact that not everywhere, even in our own country, are working conditions ideal or perfect. We have in mind those who mine our coal and other minerals, the toilers in the sweat-shops and all who are straining day after day and week after week to secure enough money by honest toil to meet the requirements of family and dependents. As for world travelers, no need to re-treat their memories as to conditions which prevail abroad, these selfish interests prey upon helpless and ignorant herds of natives, forcing them to perform strenuous manual labor at a mere pittance per day and often under the most shocking sanitary and health conditions.

Today is Labor Day.

Back in 1894 this day was first recognized by Congress

as a legal holiday in the District of Columbia since which time the anniversary has become nation-wide, a legal holiday in all states with the exception of Alabama and our neighboring state of Wyoming, but in them generally observed as a holiday.

If the recurrence of Labor Day is of special value it is in the making of comparisons. The older generation can well remember the annual disturbances and disorders occasioned by celebration of Labor Day, the result of bitter feeling between capital and labor. Year by year this spirit of antagonism has been modified until today the two contending elements in our economic life are relatively close together in a mutual understanding of true relationship, one with the other. So today American labor takes first rank as the best paid and most productive in the world, enjoying the greatest measure of average prosperity; today those who toil are taking their rightful place in local, state and national affairs as good citizens who are contributing to the nation's welfare.

Well-paid labor is a national asset.

MR. HOOPER ON BOULDER DAM

(Chicago Tribune)
Mr. Hoover's remarks on Boulder dam were delivered from the steps of the U. S. Supreme Court. The scene was a fitting one for what Mr. Hoover had to say. If anyone ever doubted as to the value of Boulder dam, Mr. Hoover's speech must have made the matter clear. America has one of the most remarkable migrations in its history. There is but one limitation that looms up in the horizon of the future and that is adequate water supply. That can and must be assured from the Colorado river in ample time to meet your expanding needs.

Mr. Hoover as an engineer knows what Boulder dam is for and an man of candor he states the facts as he sees them. The country is indebted to Mr. Hoover for that. The treasury of the United States is to pay some $300,000,000 to build Los Angeles water works. At the expense of all the taxpayers of the United States the federal government is to provide a municipal water supply to a city which has for many years boasted of its wealth and prosperity. No other city in the country, not even one in which competition leads to the support of the federal government, has dared ask any such large sum of Washington. Mr. Hoover's explanation of what it is all about should induce congressmen from less favored communities to inquire as to the Boulder dam appropriations.

LEWIS' ENLIGHTENED SPAN.

(St. Paul Dispatch)
The order of President Coolidge last week for the removal of Lewis' enlightened span from the list of monuments is a blow to the spirit of the federal government, has dared ask any such large sum of Washington. Mr. Hoover's explanation of what it is all about should induce congressmen from less favored communities to inquire as to the Boulder dam appropriations.

SPOTTING IDEAS.

(Rocky Mountain Times)
Can you spot a good idea when you see it? A biographer of Henry Ford writes of him: "His business judgment is unerring. With him a sensible idea needs neither elucidation nor argument. The phrase is neatly turned and the mind is complete. The man is portrayed not as a great thinker or a deep thinker, but as a man who thinks and who requires neither explanation nor bulging language when an idea is sensible on its face.

Compare with this type of mind the loose-leaf mind, the waste-basket mind, the mind in which ideas are simply lost in the confusion. Such minds are powerless to invoke and create the mental law of association. And just what good is an idea if you do not perceive where it fits in? Like the unfiled work in the great industrial plant, the idea goes to the bottom of the pay-roll, producing little and earning less.

As we look over the day's record of the methods by which people are fooled, we judge a large portion of the public feeds on speculation and argument, but can not distinguish between a sound idea and a fake.

Here, then, is a standard whereby one may test his own intelligence: Is it your experience that the several brilliant ideas which come to you have been tried and discarded by hundreds of others before your time? If so, you would do well not to treat your mental machine too far afield. You will be the victim of your own muddy thinking. You will be deceived and fooled by shysters against whom there is no law save the law of street thinking.

CHILDREN IN THE PARK
Swift as the wind,
Beautiful as a dream,
Light, bright,
As poppies in the wheat,
Darting through the sunshine,
Dipping through the shadows,
Every little runner
Has arrows on his feet,
Tiny curls in white,
Are open-flies-blowing
One two
Count them as they pass.
Those in pink are scarabids,
Those in blue are water bugs,
Those in green are apple leaves—
Whirling on the grass.
Small sturdy boys
Are timely and clever;
Sweet, sweet,
As the meadows are at dark,
Oh, they are so beautiful
In the blinding sunlight,
Happy, star-eyed children,
Playing in the park.
—Gracy Nell Crowell, in The Dell.

Blacksmith-Turns-Plane-Builder

W. W. Lambert (right), aged 71, who closed up his forge to construct aircraft designed for 300-mile-an-hour speed. Lieut. Glen Martin is Lambert's proposed pilot for forthcoming test flights.

HANCOCK, Iowa, Aug. 28.—His forge stands idle and the blacksmith's rack on their back with S. W. Lambert, 71-year-old blacksmith, spends his days building an airplane that will be able to cross the Atlantic in 11 hours.
Lambert believes his craft will attain a speed of 300 miles an hour and in addition will be able to shoot off from a standing position, "earn right up in the air" instead of having to taxi on rubber-tired, four-passenger cabin with a pilot and four passengers.
Lieut. Glen Martin, a Hancock boy and war-time aviator, has consented to conduct test flights this fall. The past five years of Lambert's life have been devoted to the airplane slowly taking shape in his backyard, from parts whittled and assembled, and adjusted in his combined bedroom, living room and blacksmith shop.
"I'm going to be an airplane builder through with it forever. He enters at only under protest. His only value in his eyes is as a storage place for his cherished Hull-Scott motor. With his intermediate auto-fitting shop, Lambert made the jump from iron-working to airplane construction. "I started working on this airplane as a part-time job," he said. "I just got to thinking that I wanted to do it, and I might as well. And after I got into it, the blacksmithing bothered me so that I shut-up shop."

Lambert originated his airplane, he made such individual parts different from such parts of all other airplanes, so he had modified them to a four-purpose airplane, an amphibian, to take the place of the conventional landing gear, a different wing shape, different landing gear and tail type and different ailerons. In its every line the airplane is Lambert's own idea.
No working drawing or blueprint aids him. He made a model, but he gave it away as a bird house.

"How do you spell 'financially'?" asked a college student of his room-mate.

"F-i-n-a-n-c-i-a-l-l-y," said the room-mate, spelling out the word slowly. As an afterthought, he added: "And 'embarrassment' has two r's and two s's."

How often have you said to a salesman, "That's more than I care to pay"? If you had known the price in advance, you would have been spared this little embarrassment. That's one of the great services rendered by newspaper advertising.

By reading the advertisements before going to the stores, you know what you will have to pay for a article. You need not reveal your financial status to a salesman. You perhaps do not like to ask the price of goods anyhow. If the merchant has told you the price in his advertisement, you do not have to ask.

Any way you figure it out, it pays you to read the advertisements. Regularly! The one advertisement you skip may contain just the news you would have welcomed. Read all the advertisements you can. Keep informed.

The intelligent way to shop is to read the advertisements and then go to the stores that offer the best values. Make notes beforehand of the articles that interest you. That's the way to get the most for your money. That's the way to save time.

When you know the price in advance, you can ask to be shown the goods "as advertised"

YANKEES HAVE GAMES AT HOME

Athletics Must Play All of 25 Remaining Games on the Road.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The New York Yankees have one big advantage over the Philadelphia Athletics in their battle for the American League pennant. The Yankees have 11 of their remaining 25 games at home, while the Athletics must play all of their remaining 25 games on the road.

The four-game series between the Athletics and Yankees opening Sunday, Sept. 9, at the Yankee stadium is expected to decide the pennant. The two clubs play a double-header Sunday, and the Yankees are expected to sweep the two games. They rest the following Monday and then play single games Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 11 and 12.

Americans Ready To Rout Britons

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Following in the wake of the United States victory of the United States Walker cup team over England on the golf links, the American tennis team today was prepared to complete the rout of the invading Britons on the tennis courts.

The two-day international team match started Saturday, with the United States winning three out of five matches. The Britons were unavailable for the team because of the national doubles final at Chester. The United States team repelled the opening thrusts in England's best.

Two Heavyweight Bouts This Week

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Two heavyweight bouts will be held this week. Roberto Roberti of Italy, who recently won a foul from Johnny Hales, will meet King Solomon of Panama in a 10 round bout at Elberts Field, Brooklyn, Wednesday. The Young Fighting Game will meet Johnny Squares of South Africa, who recently lost the decision to Hales, in a 10 round bout Thursday night which will mark the opening of Madison Square Garden for the winter season.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

Yesterday's hero, Fred Marberry, Washington right hander, who pitched a no-hitter for the Yankees, led over the Athletics to a 2 to 0 win. Marberry held the Yankees to four hits and no runs, and pitched a four hit, no run, no walk, no hit, no error game. He pitched a four hit, no run, no walk, no hit, no error game. BRUINS CONQUER MOUNTAIN BEES

Two Teams to Play Again Today in Second Game of the Scheduled Series.

The Twin Falls baseball team today with their game here yesterday with the Pocatello Mountain Bees by the score of 16 to 12. The colorless Pocatello put up a game battle, but were edged out from the start, the Bruins getting a good lead that they never lost.

The two teams are to play again this afternoon, the game starting at 2:30. Judging from the splendid turnout of the faithful fans here yesterday a good crowd is expected today.

The Twin Falls Bruins made five hits in the opening game yesterday. In the second game four were in the third count. The Pocatello colored boys managed to count once in each of the first two innings, were successful in the third frame, but counted six times in the fourth.
