INDUSTRIAL PEACE APPROACHES REALITY

PEACE seems to be in the air, people everywhere write about it, talk about it, hope for it, pray for it. And quite appropriate and delightful it is, just when the world has been electrified by the signing of the Kellogg peace pact by practically all the nations of the earth, large and small, to be told that marked progress is being made toward the goal of industrial peace.

In the United States the number of workers involved in trade disputes in 1927 had decreased to three for each 1000 population, as compared with 40 in 1919, the report shows. In Great Britain the number last year was two for each 1000 of population as compared with 63 in 1919. The other countries included in the survey are France, Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Canada and Australia. Together the eight nations account for nearly 80 per cent of an estimated world total of persons involved in trade disputes in 1920.

Statistics for the United States show that the total number directly involved in industrial disputes in 1919 was 4,100,348. The total thrown out of work by strikes or lockouts in 1920 was 1,463,054. In 1927 the total had declined to 364,516, the conference board reports.

The extent of the economic loss to workers can be gauged partly by the working time lost through these industrial disputes, the board continues. Such figures are not available for the United States, but are quoted for Great Britain, where 34,970,000 work days were lost in 1919. In 1920 the number of work days lost in Great Britain was 26,570,000, while the total number in 1927 had declined to 1,175,000.

In Great Britain two workers for each 1000 of population were thrown out of work in 1927 by trade disputes, as compared with 63 in 1919 and 45 in 1920, the survey adds. The actual number of employees involved in trade disputes last year was 113,700 as compared with 2,401,000 in 1919. The total number of workers made idle during the general strike in 1926, according to the official estimate, was less than 3,000,000.

In Germany, 393,745 employees, or six for each 1000 of population, were made idle by trade disputes in 1927. This compares with the highest total for any of the eight nations during the nine-year period, which was attained in Germany in 1920. In that year 8,323,977 workers were thrown out of employment by trade disputes, amounting to 135 persons for each 1000 of population. The lost working days totaled 54,206,942.

The comparisons on the basis of each 1000 of population show that two workers were idle in France last year as compared with 21 in 1919 and 37 in 1920. In Belgium the number last year was five, as compared with 22 in 1919 and 40 in 1920. In the Netherlands the number for 1927 was two, as compared with nine in 1919 and 10 in 1920. Canada found two workers idle last year, as compared with 16 in 1919 and six in 1920.

The only country where the number showed an increase was Australia, the conference board reports. There the idle workers totaled 25 for each 1000 of population in 1927, as compared with 19 in 1919 and 1920.

ATTRACTING THE MULTITUDE TO IDAHO

H. A. LAWSON, editor of the Boise Capital News, after making an automobile tour of the northern section of the state, declares editorially that when what is known at the North and South highway is completed as a finished road product, Idaho will boast of a scenic route second to none in the United States.

And Editor Lawson is correct in that statement, but the same thing holds true regarding the Sawtooth highway and the other routes through the Salmon river country in Idaho's vast mountain wilderness.

The comment in the Boise Capital News is of value as indicating the value of newspaper encouragement for those who see the vision of what Idaho can gain from possession of an adequate system of real roads. Then, too, the newspapers can and should exert an educational influence that will convince the people of the state that there is no greater asset as a ready cash producer than the automobile tourist and that the number of visitors can be increased year after year in proportion to the extension of the state's highway system.

Even the most optimistic would not be safe in venturing the prediction as to what would happen were Idaho in a position to extend an invitation to the outside world to "Come and See! Thousands?—yes, tens of thousands who, in turn would tell others that they had discovered the most beautiful, interesting, sublime and healthful recreation spot in all these United States.

Nor is there room for pessimism. Idaho people have long ago reached the conclusion that the state cannot be developed as it should be until such time as every portion made accessible by motor car. So now it is merely a matter of ability to carry on a highway program in keeping with the needs and necessities of the day. The work already done is bringing a multitude of automobiles and trucks to the state from other states far and near; these are contributing substantially to the road fund through the agency of the tax on gasoline, a fund that will increase steadily year after year as additions to the ranks of the tourist-motorists make their appearance.

Headlines telling almost daily of deaths in airplane crashes only serve to substantiate the judgment of some of us more conservative folks who have an overwhelmingly desire to remain on the ground. "It undoubtedly will prove a good thing for all of us, however, that we have the adventurous souls who will insist on going up.

Most of us have been resigned to expect a somewhat reduced yield of beans this year, and here comes the first report of threshing we have heard about showing a yield of 32 bushels.

"What do you suppose was the nationality of the man who advertised: "Purse lost, containing—20 bill valued as keepsake."—The Flint Daily Journal.

THE COLLEGE SEASONS OPEN (Caldwell News-Tribune) With the college seasons about to open there are thousands of American college boys attempting to find themselves—to determine a future source of endeavor. No doubt the majority of them are called to find their own way into the world of their own volition. There is much evidence to indicate that the character of boys chosen to college is less significant than the degree of energy with which such vocations are undertaken. For instance, a full or at least a new York largest boy who draws a salary of $40,000 a year while there are lawyers and other successful men who are unable to earn $1000 in a year.

Of the world's outstanding men many have fought their way from humble surroundings and obscurity. In truth, the biographies of many of the world's great men are such as to indicate that those who have attained outstanding successes were ones who "did not have a chance." Plus, "Ramanathan, miracle man of the century, began his working life as a newboy, he studied and worked. Herbert Hoover was an orphan farm boy, he studied and worked. Emerson was a newboy, he studied and worked.

One could recall a long list of notable men and women whose chief success in undertaking the battles of life were ambition and a willingness to die. The man who has learned early in life that there is not a sever has been an easy road to success. The man who has learned early in life that there is not a sever has been an easy road to success. The man who has learned early in life that there is not a sever has been an easy road to success.

Daily Poem

STORM VOICES The night grew old—again and yet again. The tempest wakens round the sleeping heart. And all the winds like loosened bounds take flight With bay and halloo and the gusty rain Sweeps the drenched roof and bears it down. There is a strange horror in the night. The wind far off are roaring in their mirth. The curtains away, the rafters creak and groan. One all my spirit bring. A passion had and holy as the tomb. Strange voices cry into mine ear: Out of the veard dark I seem to hear Vast organ thunders, and a burst of wings That swell and roar in some cathedral dome. Archibald Lampman.

Vital News

Nothing so vitally concerns you in every-day life as the urge and necessity to buy or sell—to give or take—to borrow or exchange. Look through the advertisements of this paper and you will find that they embody the chief impulses of living.

The nation's life is clearly depicted in the national advertising.

Our individual lives depend upon this advertising to a remarkable degree.

A newspaper is a clearing-house for ideas and commodities. Reports of the shifting phases of life come to you through its news and editorial columns. But reports of the material things upon which you depend for sustenance, comfort and happiness come through the advertisements.

If you read only one side of the paper, you gain only a half-knowledge of the activities, the aims, the character of the community.

Read all and learn all.

HELLO TWIN FALLS, HERE WE ARE!

Major Hoople, Out Our Way, Boots and the Whole Gang to Entertain Times Readers

"Twin Falls, we are here! We have had a fast trip half way across the continent to get to town so we could do our part in brightening up the pages of the new Evening Times; but we are accustomed to a fast manner of living, so we don't worry about these hurry-up trips."

The above statement is from the group of characters that are reproduced in pictures over this page. They all of them belong to the big newspaper feature, N.E.A. service, which the Evening Times contracted for immediately after the paper was taken over.

Readers may feel slightly cool to these newcomers for a few days—but not for long! They are fast workers, and their faculty for making folks smile has made them millions of friends all over the United States.

Here is Major Hoople, the biggest blow-hard at liberty on the face of the earth. The major is probably the greatest fictionist ever created by a cartoonist, and his escapades are good for many a laugh.

Watch the folks in "Out Our Way." This popular comic has three sets of characters, and all of them are lively. The cowboys, the children in the home and the boys in the Bull's shop all lead exciting lives.

Freckles is a schoolboy, but his experiences cover a lot of territory, and the kiddies and their parents always like to know what Freckles is doing.

Boots and her friends are busy with college and life, and their activities make a lot of fun.

The Ethel drawings are of particular interest to women and to others interested in the ways of women.

Wash Tubbs and his partner, Cozy, are the bold adventurers. The sky is their limit. Those boys go everywhere, see everything and do a lot of foolhardy stunts.

Salesman Sam is one of those high pressure boys. His stunts as a salesman will make business men smile. Look for all these folks every evening in the new Times.
