HOW MOUNTAIN MELTS INTO THE SEA

MT. EENA'S GREAT ERUPTION OF LAVA SLACKS TODAY

Volcanologists Still Unwilling to Predict End of Lava Surge Two Villages Are Totally Destroyed Churches Filled With People Praying for Relief From Disaster

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 12 (UP)—The devastating eruption of Mt. Etna, which already has caused damage in Catania and has destroyed two villages, appeared slackened today. But even the factious found volcanologists still "hesitating to predict an end to the relentless surge of molten lava from Mt. Etna in the most freakish of all volcanoes."

The lava flow coming down the mountain side was less apocalyptic in its character than it has been and this morning could be seen as the glowing red fire in the black night.

Two villages were destroyed. Churches filled with people praying for relief from disaster.

Pray for Relief This is comparable only to the great eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 1630, the worst eruption in the treacherous volcano's history.

Mt. Etna spouts molten death.

Hurling forth lava and burning rocks, making thousands homeless and striking terror to the countryside, Mt. Etna is active again. The view above shows the crater in eruption.

Four coast guard destroyers and six patrol boats were ordered by Washington to go to the Vestri's assistance in the necessary to the Provo city cemetery where burial was made.

Bribery of Juror Attempted In The Trial of Stewart

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (UP)—The second prospective juror called to the box today at the opening trial of Robert W. Stewart, Standard Oil magnate, on a charge of perjury, admitted he was approached yesterday by a young man who asked him if he would "hold out."

Justice Bailey elicited the information that the mysterious questioner was about 21, light complexioned and wore no glasses.

BATTLE OF YEAR BRINGS CARAVAN FROM BOISE CITY

Two Teams Are Doped as Evenly Matched Just Before the Opening Gun.

PROBABLE LINEUP

Twin Falls	Bosse
Dwyer	Left End
Lynch	Left Guard
Fitch	Center
Bradford	Right Guard
Mays	Right Tackle
Marlin	Right End
Ward	Quarterback
Shoemaker	Right Half
Tonley	Fullback

"The Battle of the Year" will be played at 2:30 between the Boise Braves, coached by Larry Bauer, and the Twin Falls Braves, coached by R. V. Jones.

A motor caravan has arrived from Boise, bringing a school band and instrumental players, and the people of Twin Falls are expected to turn out en masse for the game, which is between the two strongest elevens in the state and will be a mirror reflecting what the state championship game will be.

Dope Even.

As nearly as can be figured, the odds on the two teams at the present is exactly even with the finger of fortune pointing slightly toward Twin Falls because of the fine play of Johnny Swapp, Boise quarterback, and Ralph Ogden, Boise fullback. Ogden may be in the line of defense but there is little chance for the Twin Falls boys to gain any advantage in the game.

Both a winner, Twin Falls, will have a boy come in two years and holds last year's state championship cup.

Florida Leads in List of Unbeaten

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (UP)—Florida, with seven victories, no defeats and no ties, and a total of 237 points against 13 for its opponents, heads the dwindling list of the country's unbeaten and untied football teams, as follows:

Alabama	7-0-0	237-19
Auburn	7-0-0	230-9
Cornell	7-0-0	189-19
Dartmouth	6-0-0	150-19

The Real Reason for the Armistice

The historic "Armistice car" . . . In this railway coach Marshal Foch received the German delegates who admitted defeat with their signatures on November 11, 1918.

When Ten Years Ago,
Two Crack Yank Divisions
Broke the German Lines,
And a Few Hours Later
Dropped Shells on Sedan,
Germany's Jig Was Up.
This Is How It Happened.

By THOMAS M. JOHNSON
Accredited U. S. War Correspondent in France

THE most American victory in the World War was the attack of Nov. 1, 1918, in the Meuse-Argonne. No, there's no mistake about "most American." For the first and only time, the American Army functioned in battle almost entirely as an American Army and functioned almost 100 per cent. Plan, staffs, infantry, artillery, aviation, were American. Little Allied aid was needed.

The victory was the most crushing we or almost any army won in France. It was the death blow to the German army, to German hopes of ending the war. It was the greatest American victory of the war. It was in scale the greatest in American history.

That victory terminated the long-drawn-out 47 days' struggle in the Meuse-Argonne, "Perhing's Wilderness," with full success. Had the war ended before Nov. 1, history's verdict on that battle and on the A. E. F. would probably have been different. As it was, our victory of Nov. 1 was a principal cause of the ending of the war Nov. 11.

Through October, Germany and President Wilson had been dickering about an armistice. Germany pretending to blow hot and cold as the great waves of successive Allied offensives rose and receded, Wilson holding out for the 14 points but inwardly determined not to let slip this chance of peace.

German doom was being sealed, as Bulgaria, Turkey and Austria-Hungary collapsed. The German army was losing the battle of the Western Front, greater of the whole war, but not yet was its defeat decisive. Safe retreat was still barely possible to the line from Antwerp along the Meuse, then to another near the German frontier.

With a winter's rest it was possible to hold out another year. Von Hindenburg and other German generals advised this. The German army might yet stave off defeat for a while.

On the other hand, the Allies had now got close to the vital German railroad center. Their next blow might answer the question: "How much longer will it last?"

General Pershing to deliver a death blow, he assembled the might of the A. E. F.

Sketch by JOE KING

Back to the Fatherland and glad of it. — A detachment of German infantry quitting France a week after the signing of the armistice. This photograph was taken by the author.

THE success was truly exceptional on the American battlefield, the Meuse-Argonne. Since after three weeks incessant struggle, we had taken by Oct. 16 the key heights of the Kriemhilde line, preparing for another and a decisive blow, we needed not only fresh troops, supplies, ammunition, but to take some odds and ends of important positions whence to jump off.

So the 78th Division took Grandpre. And the Third, the Fifth, the inexhaustible 32d, and the 89th did their parts. East of the Meuse, the 26th and 29th got within reach of the apex height of the Borge de Courmoulin.

Now, after five weeks of stubborn and costly struggle, with casualties around 150,000, we faced the last German positions protecting their southern, rugged vein railroad. We had assembled the whole might of our army. Green no longer, many units were made up of veteran fighters, and were grinning confidently.

Artillery had learned how to fire the densest, sweetest barrage of the war—heavy guns in the front line, throwing plenty of shells. There were still too few airplanes, but aviators knew the game and sky. And our German infantry, bombing and machine-gunning, had only 15 tanks left of the 189 of Sept. 26, but they were in the right place.

That place was the left center, at Landres-et-St. Georges where the 42d Division had struck a snag two weeks before. There the most ruthless, most dashing of our attack divisions, the Second, was spearhead, along with the steadfast 89th. To the right were the 50th and 41st, to the left the 80th, 77th and 78th. East of the Meuse were the 26th and 29th.

All were experienced in battle, most in more battles than one. So were corps and army troops, engineers, heavy artillery, signalmen, thousands of auxiliaries.

So it may be said that victory walked upon a tidal wave of flame and smoke and steel that morning of Nov. 1. In the center the Second Division, Marines and "Regulars"—mostly draftees now—drove forward like a pile driver, through the German infantry, through the artillery, six miles to the Barricourt Ridge, which that evening it, and the 89th Division held.

There was the high spot of the Meuse-Argonne, the final crest of the successive heights we had had to scale, whence the country sloped down to Sedan and the railroad. So in another sense the high spot of the battle was late Nov. 1, when those two divisions reached their objectives.

THAT really took up the ball game. To the right the 90th took Amerance, to the left the 80th guarded the Second's long flank, too that wedge with its point on Barricourt Ridge rest in twain the German forces between Meuse and Argonne. And General von Gallwitz, commanding the Group of Armies in Lorraine, hurried them back over the Meuse eastward.

To the west, it made them retreat from the strong position north of the Aisne, so Nov. 2 saw the IV French army and our own 7th and 78th Divisions chasing fleeing Germans.

There was hard fighting Nov. 2 and 3, but no longer against a solid resistance line. The Germans were in one place holding, in another retreating. We were after them, always trying to hurry them, throw them into greater disorder, capture more prisoners and guns, get to Sedan.

Rivalry was keen, excitement intense, as the doughboys, with little food or sleep, hiked and fought and hiked again, always do the heels of the Germans. From it came two striking exploits by two striking divisions, the First and Second.

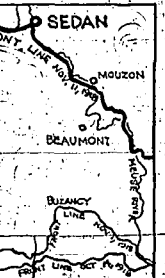

One might say the Second came first, for its remarkable night march into the German lines started Nov. 3. Yet into the German lines. At dusk the Ninth Infantry just up and marched straight ahead, through German rear guards, who either didn't see or didn't like, right into the Forest of Dieulet, about halfway to Sedan, and screening the Beaumont Ridge where the Germans might fight for a while and delay us.

Two abreast up a narrow track knee-deep in mud marched the Ninth, German guns banging in the woods on either side. Once they jumped into a machine-gun battalion which with "hands up" was passed to the rear, once into a farm house full of sleeping Germans. Finally they reached Tulleire Farm, their objective on Beaumont Ridge, where four 75's of the 15th Field Artillery fired the first Allied light shell at the famous southern railroad.

In the darkness they were aimed as best they could, at the important junction of Carignan. They must have thrown an awful scare into the Germans.

THE First Division's stunt was the famous race for Sedan, which nobody won. That city of strategy and history had been our objective since the Meuse-Argonne began, but now that we approached it, Marshal Foch changed the boundary between ourselves and the French so that the French should enter.

Partly this was for military reasons, partly to let the French square up for the crushing effort of 71. General Pershing didn't like it and arranged with General Maistre that whoever, American or French, first reached Sedan should go right in and capture the railroad station and the glory at the same time. Then he issued orders that sent the First Division hot-foot across the rear of the First Army, to do it.

Map showing how the Americans advanced during the last days of the war, greatly speeding the armistice.

Quite independently of famine or revolution at home, the German army was broken. No one ally had done that. It had taken all the last years, in only one of which the Americans had been an appreciable military factor. Yet that one year was the last and one part then was decisive.

What was the American military contribution? Well, in the Meuse-Argonne we rendered ourselves the 47 days' part of the German front strongest, eastward and westward, by the Germans, drawing there one-fourth their total strength.

We captured 26,000 prisoners, cast them 100,000 casualties, and got 874 cannon and 3,000 machine guns. Finally we broke through and cut the southern railway, a feat of some importance, for their two indispensable railway lines.

The day that our shells fell upon the tracks near Sedan, the Germans threw up the sponge and asked immediate armistice. "Do you wonder?" De M. P. L. French children learned the military history later, growing up as warriors. Allied nations sarcastically cried, "The Yanks!"

Hindenburg, Ludendorff, General von Gallwitz were all gone at that, and if we had stayed on they would have pushed on. British, French, Italians and all the rest. Who knew?

(This tenth anniversary, the article by Thomas M. Johnson concludes a series telling the truth about America's military contribution to the Allied victory.)

A NEW PROBLEM
Judge: Why do you say your husband was guilty of cruel and abusive treatment? He seems to have been a good husband, father, kind and a good father.
Wife: Yes, but he always got the wrong ends in our home affairs. —Life

YOUR CHILDREN
BY OLIVE ROBERTS BAIRD
Copyright, 1928, Mrs. Roberts Baird
"I don't think that mothers would not get so tired, rather, to march their children to school and fretful if there were more fun in the family."
"Haven't we all noticed that the homes that seem to run the most smoothly and in which work is accomplished the most quickly, are the homes where there is laughter and happiness, and life is not taken in too dreary earnest?"
"I have to thank one family that in spite of a goodly share of trouble, managed to laugh about half of it away. It was not a fortunate family—quite the opposite. But the mother, a woman of unusual character, discovered early in her married life the magic of laughter, and its wonderful healing qualities. No doubt there were busy days when she did not feel equal to face up to little problems that her children, and her husband, would cause when these days were cheerful games."
"She would say emphatically at the table, 'Let's play Mr. Ship Combs as few complexes under that roof that young man here yet.'"
"Then she would laugh and say, 'My ship comes in today.'"
"Mother would think, 'Which with G-G.'"
"What could that be?"
"The questions would begin to fly."
"What order is it? It is good to eat? Can you wear it? How does it smell?"
"G-G turned out to be some grade. Father finally guessed it, and it was his turn."
"There was a great deal of happy little games for the table. Some times it was difficult if anyone held a new one it was saved for next time."
"Laughter at Hard Luck. The children learned to look on their troubles as jokes much of the time. If one of them was called a name, or ridiculed the same word in spelling for the third time in a week, the first thought that popped into his head was, 'That will be a good one to tell Mother.'"
"The whole family helps with the work. They make a name of that. Although there are about

MARY DORAN MAKING A BIG SUCCESS OF PICTURES IN HOLLYWOOD
Mary Doran can act and even talk. BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer
HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Nov. 12.—Mary Doran has had late, personal life plus a shapely figure, some acting ability and already a fair start in pictures.
Result—a nice long-term contract.
She can act, and even talk, and talking really is quite a factor these days. She has made four films—"Let's Go," "Half a Bride," "The Rhetor," and "Hollywoodian."
Miss Doran is one of movie-fans' select group of actresses who are leaving Columbia university—she didn't graduate—Mary, whose stage career at first that was first film on the M-G-M lot, a part in "Hollywood."
She is in Bill Baker's "Betsey." Then she came to make believe in "Hollywoodian," and "Let's Go," for an independent firm.
In "Hollywoodian" she was the next step in Manhattan. Then she came to make believe in the movie cameras. Somebody in the Paramount organization liked her work in the "Hollywoodian" and recommended her to return to pictures for a second crack at pictures. That was the time she "talked." Three productions for so many companies followed in quick succession.
Since starting for M-G-M slightly more than a month ago, the real test has been spending most of her time making talking tests. Soon she will start work in her first film on the M-G-M lot, a part in "Hollywoodian."

OFFICE CAT

By Jimmie

Speaking without thinking is like shouting without aiming.

Jack quotes with approval the Twin Falls doctor who said people who spend their lives in the sun die too young. "We know," says the Times, "that this sun with its heat and light is the thing that keeps us going, and the sun spent with a glass of lemonade under a spreading elm tree."

Heads I Win, Tails You Lose

One night when his mother reminded her that it was her birthday, she said, "I don't care. At least you tell me I'm too little to stay up, and in the morning you say you're too big to stay in bed."

Shaves a Lad

Her skirts permit extensive views.

Though her, attire she seems to choose, She is a slow dresser.

One night as well have you come at all as to have no sense of humor.

Just about the time a man gets into the office, something goes wrong at home.

It's used a man and not a woman was first president of the most of it is prepared by you.

United States. It means one more holiday by the year. We mean a woman never tells her age, she wouldn't know about her birthday was, and employment boys couldn't celebrate it.

"I don't know there are no more around us?" said the "office cat."

"I don't," answered the man who didn't know, "so long as they don't grow at 5 o'clock in the morning."

"Is the world round?" a school boy in school the little boy.

"No," said the "office cat."

"Is it flat?" asked the boy.

"No," said the "office cat."

"Are you crazy child? If the world isn't round and it isn't flat, what is it?"

"I don't know," answered the boy.

"Why don't you get married?" asked the "office cat" yesterday.

"I don't believe I'd be happy in a marriage," responded the boy.

"Good Lord man!" responded the "office cat," "if you never, never married, why, till even that, better than being single."

"Why don't you get married?" asked the "office cat" yesterday.

"I don't believe I'd be happy in a marriage," responded the boy.

Trickily, trickily, little feet, Frisking, shuffling, and neat, Stockings, calves, and knee caps, Buckle, button, and long, soles.

"If I had to be your birthday you are horrible," said the esteemed Horoscope, but of course they know the changes were set to I in the morning, at least in the morning.

Mrs. Smith notes that a generous supply of advice on care of children always is available, and most of it is prepared by you.

Youth Succumbs To Blow of Champion

REPERE, Nov. 12.—A friendly blow on the nose caused the death of Lester Payne, 19, Friday night at a dance at Reperer. To demonstrate that he could "take a Payne" indeed Ralph Burt of Hazelton struck him according to accounts given by friends who were present at the time. The blow proved fatal and an inquest was held for the coroner of Blinley county yesterday. Funeral services will be held at Paul at a date yet to be announced.

Payne was graduated from the Paul high school in 1927.

POOR HAROLD

Young wife Harold is so lonely, half the nights are generally missing from his bed. He is a severe case of "blue devils" and doesn't get any sleep. He is a fully careless about his sewing. Passing Show.

EFFICIENCY AT HOME

Greener: A lot of bread and butter on the table till you get their come's home, and why doesn't your mother come here to see you? That's just it. Child (threatening): She's trying another shop. Passing Show.

Gambler Shot

Armed—Bullstield of New York, one of the world's greatest gamblers, was reported to be dying from a bullet wound because he refused to pay $50,000 to three "stars" who had taken him from him in a game in which they had marked cards. He had on his person, told the gamblers, he could "shake up the wind" for the rest. He was shot several days later by a man who palmed a small can and fired on Bullstield in his room at a New York hotel.

MARKET STRONGER ON BEANS, STATES REPORT OF BUREAU

Marketing information on beans in various producing sections and terminal markets for the International states as reported by the bureau of agricultural economics and the California division of agriculture follows:

Phoenix—Good wire factory, demand moderate, market stronger. Deliveries very light, partly because trucking has been held up by bad weather. Many growers who have trucked have been holding for higher prices. Through the week, growers' quotations are 60 to 75 per cent completed. Considerable damage to untrucked beans was expected because of continued wet weather and freezing.

Colorado—Prices to growers, mostly $2.25 for the early part of this week. Carloads of a. b. shipping points, sales since last report, $2,500,000. Growers' quotations, the early part of this week were mostly $2.65 to $2.75.

Speaker Signs to Manage Ball Team

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Eric Speaker, one of the greatest outfielders baseball has known, has returned to the minor leagues after 21 years in the big show as player and manager.

Speaker signed a contract yesterday with James P. Blinnert, president of the Newark Bears, to manage the International League club for two years. This return to the field was not announced here until it was understood this would be the most intense paid minor league.

Assuming the role of player-manager, Speaker plans to occupy his old position in center field during the coming season. This plan, however, will be discarded if he finds a promising outfielder for sale or trade at the meeting of International League teams at Toronto next month.
