A RAILROAD FOR MALAD

Oregon Short Line to Make a Thirty-Mile Extension.

A THOUSAND ACRES OF BEETS

And the Necessary Rights of Way Must be Guaranteed to Secure Road—Will Be a Spur from Corinne, Utah.

That the visit to the west, made by the group of capitalists, interested in the sugar business a few months ago, would bear early fruit, has been generally expected by all who were posted on the extent of their investment in the beet sugar business here and in Colorado.

That the gentlemen have lost no time in setting in motion their various plans for the development of the industry is evidenced by news lately received at the offices of the Oregon Short Line and the Utah and Idaho Sugar companies in this city, as well as by that which comes over the wires from Denver. The plans to build spurs westward from the Short Line, to open up the new beet fields for the Idaho Sugar company, have already been printed in the "News." Both of these spurs will be constructed early in the coming year, so that the increased beet acreage can be brought to both factories next fall.

The latest piece of news, which will interest local business men still more, is the announcement authoritatively made that the long thought of extension of the Malad Valley railroad, which now runs from Corinne to Garland and there ends, will be immediately pushed and completed from Garland to Malad, Idaho, a distance of thirty miles, that is, if the people of Malad will guarantee to secure the necessary rights of way and the farmers will contract to plant 1,000 acres of beets during 1905. With these guarantees secured the Oregon Short Line will build the road in time to handle the crop for the coming season.

Mosiah Evans, local manager of the Utah Sugar company at Garland, is in the city today, and he confirms the above news. The survey has already been run from Garland to Malad, and the Short Line people have definitely agreed to make the extension if the rights of way can be secured and if the tonnage from 1,000 acres of beets can be relied on for next season. Mr. Evans says there is a live and progressive committee in Malad handling the matter, and that he has no doubt the requirements will be complied with and that the road will be in operation next year.

He further says that a two-mile spur will be built from the Southern Pacific due south, commencing three miles west of Corinne, and that this will open up a valuable beet country for the Garland factory. All in all, it looks as though the capacity of that factory will be nearly tested next year. The sugar company has offered prizes to the farmers of the Bear River valley, amounting to $500, to the growers of sugar beets, for next year for the greatest number of acres planted, and the largest number of tons harvested from various sized tracts, from 25 acres down to two acres.

SUGAR BOOM IN COLORADO.

How extensive will be the developments in the railroad and beet sugar business in Colorado, flowing from the entrance of the eastern people into the industry, is well shown by the following clipping from the Denver Post:

William Havemeyer and H. B. Hollins, representing the sugar trust, the Rock Island Railroad company, David H. Moffat, C. S. Morey, Charles Boettcher, and Messrs. Brink and Eddy, are the heads of an enormous syndicate which is to be a new and mighty factor in the Colorado railroad world. They have plans now on foot for the building of a steam and electric road from Denver to Fort Collins; for a terminal into belt line around the city of Denver; for terminals into the city for the Rock Island, the Moffat road and the new line of the Northern Colorado Construction company; and for additional tracks and spurs through the best fields of northern Colorado and the sugar factories there.

Information regarding these matters became public today simultaneously with the announcement that Edward R. Griffin, general local agent for the Union Pacific road, resigned to become associated with Messrs. Morey and Boettcher and the Great Western Sugar company.

The resignation of Mr. Griffin takes effect January 1, and after that time he will be known as assistant to Mr. Morey, who is the head of the beet sugar industry in Colorado. As a matter of fact, he will have to do with the building and operating of the proposed road from Denver to Fort Collins.

Some weeks ago the Post announced that David H. Moffat had planned a terminal railroad to belt Denver, and later when the Northern Colorado Construction company was formed it was pointed to as a Moffat-Morey-Boettcher enterprise to construct a line from Denver into the northern coal fields. In the light of more recent developments it is found that those statements were true so far as they went. Now, however, the real situation is given to the public. These diverse enterprises did find birth in the fertile brain of David H. Moffat, but as he has his hands full in building the Moffat road, he has turned his schemes over to the Rock Island people and the sugar trust to finance, retaining but a small interest for himself.

TERMINAL FACILITIES.

The franchise and right of way of the Colorado & Eastern furnishes the base of operation and provides a valuable terminal.

Havemeyer and Hollins formerly owned the Colorado & Eastern, but turned it over to David H. Moffat to provide him and the Rock Island an entrance into the union depot, or beyond it if they decided to build their own depot. Under the new plan this road, which is now built as far as Scranton, will be extended to Limon and the Rock Island will come in from there instead of going around by Colorado Springs.

From Utah Junction the Moffat road will build over to connect with the Colorado & Eastern near the stockyards, while the new sugar beet line coming down from the north will reach the Colorado & Eastern at Elyria and come in over the joint tracks from there.

The sugar beet line, which the Northern Colorado Construction company will build, will start north at Elyria and Marshall and perhaps go as far as Boulder. The main line, however, will continue from Elyria through Louisville, Loveland, Fort Collins and around to Greeley.

The Union Pacific has not named a successor for Mr. Griffin. Thos. C. Scott has been mentioned, but it is said Traffic Director Stubbs will send a Southern Pacific man here.—Deseret News.

A Rock Creek Pioneer.

Hon. Lawrence Hansen, of Rock Creek, Idaho, is one of the pioneers of that section. He and his good wife have resided there 28 years, and have experienced the full benefit of trials and incidents to pioneer life. During a recent call at their cozy home near that place, mention was made of some exciting days with marauding Indians. At one time about 800 of them, mainly Bannocks, camped not far from the Hansen home and were not in the best mood possible. They crossed the country not far from there and committed several depredations. At another time the redskins raided the country and killed several people. On another occasion, when Mrs. Hansen was alone, several lusty bucks came to the place and remained all day, being so well pleased with the hospitality of Mrs. Hansen, that they were not inclined to leave, until a delegation of neighbors insisted on their doing so.

Mr. Hansen has a 300-acre farm, on which he keeps considerable good stock. His cattle consist of Red Polls, grade Shorthorns and Herefords. He also raises several hundred tons of hay annually, and if he cannot sell it to good advantage he feeds it to his stock. This year he raised about 600 tons and has already sold a good bunch of it at $11 a ton baled.

He has a small, but prolific orchard which was profitable this season. It embraces many kinds of fruit, also black walnut trees in bearing.

Mr. Hansen says his fruit seems to escape the freezing weather that occurs during the blossoming period of his apples, pears and most other fruits. He says the ice forms sometimes in the spring so that it will hold up a person, and yet not injure the fruit buds. Quite a number of bees are kept on the place and they do well. The country being in the territory covered by the Twin Falls irrigation project is rapidly improving.

Mr. Hansen, a brother, is the leading merchant of Rock Creek, and also one of the leading citizens of the county.—Gem State Rural.

Homeseekers' Rates.

The Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line railroads will sell round trip homeseekers' tickets to Idaho points on the first and third Tuesdays of February, March, April and May, 1905. These rates will apply from Missouri River points east as far as St. Paul, Chicago and St. Louis. The rate will be one first-class fare plus $2.00 for the round trip. Tickets good 21 days.

SOCIAL CLUB GIVES DANCE

First Dance of a Series to be Given by Cassia County Social Club

ABOUT OAKLEY FARMING

The Raising of Oats and Corn—Dairy Industry in Idaho Should be Given More Prominence—It Has been Neglected.

A social dance was given at the new school house last Monday evening, the attendance being about forty couples. The music, furnished by the Twin Falls orchestra, was up to the usual standard and delighted and entertained the dancers present.

This dance is the first of a series to be given by the Cassia County Social club during the winter, and was a decided success in every way. The floor management was exceptionally good and entirely satisfactory to the guests present. The club is composed of a number of the young people of Twin Falls, the object being to secure for the winter a series of dances which will be conducted solely for pleasure and merit.

On Monday evening, January 2, 1905, a New Year's dance will be given, invitations for which have already been sent out. It is intended on this occasion to entertain their guests even better than before, and the enjoyment of the evening can be foretold with certainty. The attendance will no doubt be greater than at the Christmas dance, with music as good as the best.

At 12 o'clock on last Monday evening the merry dancers repaired to the dining-room of the Blue Front Cafe, where Mr. Taylor served a well-prepared lunch. It was a late hour when the dancers left for their respective homes, each bearing in their memory pleasant remembrances of the first Christmas dance given in Twin Falls.

The Dairy Industry.

State Pure Food and Dairy Commissioner McPherson has been studying the dairy situation closely for the last few months, and makes the following public statement concerning the same: "There is no state in the Union more naturally fitted for a great butter producing state than ours, and within a few years every section will be dairying. We have in the state 57,520 milch cows, and if these cows were good dairy animals and properly cared for the revenue would be immense. As it is, Idaho manufactures less than 500,000 pounds of butter this year and the consumption of the state is 3,750,000 pounds. The importation of butter will amount to 1,450,000 pounds, while the state will ship out in cream about 760,000 pounds. In the state of Minnesota more butter is now produced than in any other part of the United States. When the industry was started there the average amount of butter produced for the year per cow was 86 pounds, and in six years this average was raised to 156 pounds, while the blood herds were averaging 300 pounds per cow. It costs no more to feed or care for a good cow than a poor one, and there is a vast difference in the milk check that is received monthly from the creamery. At the present time there is much butter sold in Idaho that is manufactured in the eastern states—where the actual cost of producing is greater than in Idaho, and even under those circumstances the butter is shipped across the country at a high freight rate and sold to us at a profit. What the country needs is dairymen and dairy cows. All of the resources are here, and if the farmers had the right kind of machines in the form of cows to feed the products of the farms, and intelligent dairymen to direct the work, the revenue of the country would be materially increased."

Prolific Oats and Corn.

A. C. Worthington of Oakley, Idaho, reports a remarkable yield of oats and corn this year on a small plot of ground on his place. The variety of oats was the "Golden Eleccc." From one-half ounce of seed he harvested 30 pounds of oats, and says a part of the yield was destroyed after harvesting but before it was threshed. The variety has a large white kernel, and the heads grow in bushy form. Mr. Worthington thinks it will prove a very heavy yielder.

Mr. Worthington also raised, from quarter of an acre of Pride of the North, Corn 40 bushels of ears. He planted the same April 27 and harvested it September 11. He says he don't water corn in that county after July 1st, if you want it to mature.—Gem State Rural.

Farm Home at Oakley.

John Adams, horticultural inspector for Cassia county, is an all round fruit grower and farmer. He has a good farm one mile from Oakley, and raises a great variety of products. Alfalfa is one of the leading crops and Mr. Adams now has a nice bunch of steers that has been fed mainly on this great forage plant.

In a seven-acre orchard he has a variety of fruits consisting of apples, pears, peaches and cherries and the fruit is of a high quality. Royal Beauty, Jonathan and White Winter Pearmain are leading varieties, although he has several others that do well. Among the latter is an unnamed variety of rich golden color and of the highest quality. It is of good size, and resembles somewhat the Yellow Newtown Pippin, although juicier and of richer flavor than even the popular variety. It is an apple that ought to be identified or fully tested, to determine its adaptability for general planting.

Mr. Adams raised some monster Hungarian runners. The Wealthy is his best fall or winter sort. He made some high quality cider this year which was boiled down to add to its keeping quality and flavor. He keeps bees, which do remarkably well and the honey produced is of beautiful and superior flavor.

The White Leghorn is the popular fowl at the Adams home. There are also ample shade trees and ornamentals and many other attractions that go to make up rather an ideal farm home. Mrs. Adams is a worthy helpmate of her husband and is a believer in the benefits of surrounding their place with those things which make farm life desirable. She took an equal interest with her husband in the success of the farmers' institute recently held at Oakley.—Gem State Rural.

Traits of the Cossacks

The Cossacks may perhaps be best described as a war caste living in semi-tribal organization, says David B. MacGowan, in the Century. They are, however, in no sense a tribe or tribes, but are mainly of Russian origin with an intermixture of Mongolian, Tartar and Circassian blood by marriage or adoption. The once famous Little Russians or Zaporogian Cossacks of the Ukraine are now represented largely in the Kuban army, with which their remnant was incorporated late in the eighteenth century. In all other armies Great Russian blood predominates. Among the non-Russian elements are the Buddhists Karmucks and Burgias, Tur-gues, Tatars, Bashkirs and Kirghiz. The pagan element is 12 per cent of the Ural army, 15 of the Transbaikalian, 3 of the Orenburg and 7 of the Semi-rjetshensk. * * * The Cossack was a fisherman before he was a Cossack, and he remains a fisherman to this day. Besides fishing, hunting, cattle raising and cattle lifting, robbery, piracy and war were formerly considered the only occupations worthy of him. Cellate life prevailed extensively among all the Cossacks. The Don's regard for agriculture as a mortal enemy of their freedom, prohibiting the use of the plow on pain of death. Conditions have since changed radically, and the Don's differ little in their mode of life from other Russian peasants. The Cossacks, however, do not enjoy a reputation for industry, and many of them, actually, the Don's, have shared in the general impoverishment of the rural population. This has diminished their military efficiency, as they are re-quired to supply themselves with horses, uniforms and other equipment and armament, excepting firearms. The most serious feature is in the neglect of horse raising. The Ural-ites form an exception. Their fisher-ies are the source of substantial prop-erty, and they not only raise enough horses for themselves, but supply the regular cavalry and artillery with some of their best animals. The gov-ernment's ability to mobilize 190,000 Cossacks in war time, or from 250,000 to 300,000 in case of extreme nec-essity, is dependent upon their posses-sion of an adequate number of ser-viceable horses. The military authori-ties of Russia, however, admit that this is the arm of the empire except the first has much to be said. In fact, none meet this requirement. In fact, none amount their quota of the 60,000 Cossack's serving in time of peace.

Criminal Tells of Career

Under the title "The Confessions of a Criminal," Dick Lane, who had for many years been known to the police forces of the United States, east and west, has related much of his ex-periences in crooked work covering a period of about fifty years. In his time Lane has served sixteen years in prison, and been party to thefts, as he says, in the preface of his book, amounting to over $2,000,000. For nine years he has resided in Chicago. He "maus" up his mind mainly that "the games do not pay," resolved to support himself honestly, experienced religion and got the assistance of sev-eral prominent men who knew him years before and finally secured em-ployment. In this he has been repeat-edly promoted. Lane gives much of his spare time to rescue work, speak-ing in prisons, on street corners, in churches or anywhere else that he may tell the story of his life and reform-ation.

Police records hold Lane's career to have been unique in criminal annals. He never specialized, but was an expert in almost every branch of theft known to professionals. His book, which covers ninety-six pages, covers his life from his twelfth year, when in Philadelphia he com-mitted his first crime as a burglar, secur-ing a large amount of money. With this he drifted among operators and gamblers in New York. In 1875, ac-cording to these confessions, Lane was engaged in the robbery of the First National bank of Council Bluffs, Iowa, securing about $25,000, with which he and his two associates in the job got away safely. In another job, which was a mean, Lane relates, he killed a victim held up by two of his pals, although Lane himself was near by at the time. It was a narrow escape from prison for him, the others ultimately getting life sen-tences in Stillwater.

Borax Close to Surface

In the Argentine Republic are vast fields of borax, which are sometimes spoken of as borax "mines." They are not mines, however, as the process of securing the borax is closer akin to agriculture than mining. The vast, flat, earthy surfaces of the borax fields," says a writer in describing the scene, "lost themselves in ex-treme distance or mirage, and to all appearance any one square yard was similar to any other part. Wherever the crust of the salinas in the locality of Tres Morros or Moreno had been dug into twelve or fourteen inches deep, there lay masses of soft, white, round potatoes of borax, packed closely together to a depth of about sixteen inches.

They were staked in rows on the ground, just as freshly dug potatoes on a farm are laid in rows. The lumps of borax, however, are probably five or six times as numerous as real potatoes would be in the same area. The lumps of borax varied from one piece of a hop's egg to pieces of one and two cubic feet in size. They lay close below the surface, and when broken were soft looking, like moist snow. "After lying in rows in the air, sub-ject to the intensely drying winds that swept over the plains, the wet snow color became white, like pure, dry snow, the lumps become hard, and the weight diminished more than half, by reason of the evaporation of the water. The borax then contained about 75 per cent of pure boracic acid. In some places borax lay in unbroken seams fifteen to twenty inches thick."

The Amazon's Long Cable

The Amazon telegraph cable ex-tends from Para, at the mouth of the Amazon, to Manaus, the capital of the state of Amazonas, at the confluence of the Amazon and Rio Negro. It is therefore rather more than 500 miles in length. The Amazon flows through a dense tropical wilderness, almost as virgin and unbroken to-day as when Wallace and Bates first described it, half a century ago. To erect or main-tain a land telegraph through the well-nigh impenetrable thickets along its banks would be practically impos-sible. When, therefore, it was the wish of the Brazilian government to connect Para and Manaus by tele-graph, the bed of the Amazon was chosen as the most feasible route, and an English company engaged to fur-nish and lay a cable. At Para the Amazon cable connects with the whole submarine and land telegraph system of the world. Sitting in the cable room far up the Amazon at Ma-naus, I can send a message to any one of the six continents, as also to Japan, Java and the Philippine Islands. William E. Haller, Jr., in Field and Stream.

The Businessizing of Mr. Ingenious Impossibilities

As told by himself to "Glen Rice"
Copyright, 1904, by John F. Hunt

During the last two years I have made several successful transactions along lines where I previously have erred. Today I believe that where one gets to growing, the lower one hap-pens to be when one started, the higher one will get when one ends.

When I was a boy I went into a country store to buy some goose-quill toothpicks for a Christmas present. To show you the kind of buyer I was at that time, I paid ten cents for a package of a dozen, bought some other things, and had three cents left. Locking the showcase over to see what I should do with the three cents, I got a broken bundle and took three more goose-quill toothpicks at a cent apiece.

When I was a boy I went into a country store to buy some goose-quill toothpicks for a Christmas present. To show you the kind of buyer I was at that time, I paid ten cents for a package of a dozen, bought some other things, and had three cents left. Locking the showcase over to see what I should do with the three cents, I got a broken bundle and took three more goose-quill toothpicks at a cent apiece.

One morning before starting to help work out for my father, I made a boyish brag to my father that I would see a hole for nothing. About fifteen minutes later you might have seen me climbing over the back fence to trade my hoe for a shovel. The boss had convinced me that about ten cents would get me a shovel. Since then I have been many smart and strong men momentarily foolish enough to unnecessarily say what they would or wouldn't do, to their final regret.

Let me tell you about the kind of a man the storekeeper was. He didn't buy the way I did. He knew how to buy to make money. He kept the things that the people wanted. He thought ahead of the people and thought straight. He knew how to buy and to sell for more than he paid.

Today I like to buy goods as a con-sumer. Let me have a roll of bills every day with which to roam through the stores, without any obligations to complicate the spending of it, and I would make some decidedly good se-lections. Not so very long ago the selections would have been about 20 per cent as good.

In reviewing the last quarter of a century, I am pleased to see that soon after making a mistake, I recognized the mistake, and by the time my friends began to criticize me, I had made some headway in planning a preventive of a repetition.

When about ten years old I got to fooling with a big man around a force pump that had a hose attached to it. My boy friends and I thought it great fun to wet the big fellow, but soon the battle turned and we found our-selves soaked, and when my father found me, I wasn't complimented over the outcome. Since then I have tried to keep out of kinds of fun which would surely enable the other fellow to have the fun at my expense and laugh last.

Sometimes I had little victories. About the time I got the toothpicks, I went into a hardware store to get a large pocket-knife. Pointing to the knife I wanted, the old merchant put his hand in the showcase, lifted the knife a few inches from the box, told me it was $1.25, and put the knife

A recent experience taught me this lesson. With great enthusiasm I sub-mitted plans in copy to a man who has spent more than a half million dollars a year for several years in advertising. He made all kinds of critical remarks about the idea, but by careful maneuvering I got the thing in type, improved somewhat by my determination to make it go, and resubmitted it. With very little re-vision he accepted it. The other man is not always able to see your new idea the way you see it by presenta-tion in its first stage.

FRUIT PRESERVED IN PEAT.

Discovery Recently Made Considered of High Importance. What is considered a highly impor-tant discovery has just been made in the matter of the shipment of fruits. It is believed that a solution has finally been found on the problem of transport-ing delicate, tropical fruits long distances!

ABOVE THE 95-YEAR LINE.

Fine Record for Longevity Made by Negroes in the Last Census. The race of Washington's colored body servants is very nearly extinct, and the negro nurses of Jefferson, Madison and Monroe are no longer numerous. But it is officially estab-lished by the last census that of 9,770 persons in the United States over the age of 95 nearly 5,000 were colored.

The experiments have been made by a French company under the aus-pices of the French government. The shipments have been made from Guiana and the island of Guadeloupe, in the Lesser Antilles, to France, and the outcome is declared most satisfac-tory.

There were by the census reports 2,741 native white men and women over 95. The balance was made up of 229 Indians and 1,846 foreign-born while persons—examples of extreme longevity being relatively more numer-ous among foreign-born than native-white people and more numerous among negroes than either.

The secret of the new process is the envelopment of the fruit in a particu-lar kind of peat or turf, that, namely, which is known as yellow Dutch peat. Pineapples, bananas, mangoes, sapo-tas and other delicate fruits have been taken when in perfectly ripe condition, enveloped in the fibrous substance and after several weeks spent in transporta-tion have arrived at their destina-tion in a perfectly fresh and sound condition.

The number of colored women over 95 by the last census was 1,277. Georgia being the state in which they were most numerous. The number of white women native born over 95 was 922, and of white women foreign born over 95, 1,016. The number of Indian squaws over 95 was 94.

Peat, as is known, is vegetable mat-ter—more or less decomposed,—which passes by insensible degrees into lig-nite. The less perfectly decomposed peat is generally of a brown color, that which is perfectly decomposed is often black. Now, moist peat, it has for some time been known, possesses a decided and powerful antiseptic prop-erty. This is ascribed to the pres-ence of gallic acid and tannin. It is manifested not only in the perfect preservation of ancient trees, and of leaves, fruits and the like, but some-times even of animal bodies. Thus, in some instances, human bodies have been found perfectly preserved in peat, after the lapse of centuries.—Mexican Herald.

In North Carolina about two-thirds of the population is white and one-third colored. The number of white residents over 95 was 212, while the number of colored residents over 95 was 641.

Hints for Christmas Gifts. Ribbon work on muslin is very popular at present, and in the various country houses one sees very pretty specimens of it—cushion and satin bed-dress case covers, table centers, bed coverlets and afternoon tea-cloths, as well as smaller things, such as handkerchiefs, glove, veil and the cases and lavender sachets.

In nearly every language in the world there is an equivalent for "God bless you" when any one sneezes, for the sneezing epidemic is regarded to hold good in every country. To this salutation in France there is added sometimes the phrase, "and preserve you from the fate of Tycho Brahe," who is believed to have escaped a death of cold by a single sneeze, which killed him. In England a regular formula is, "Once for a wish, twice for a kiss, three times for a letter and four times for a disappointment." In Italy the regular salutation is simply "Felicita," or "May you be fortunate."

"Soft" cloth muslin is used, and one of its favorite designs is scattered with the violet or spray or cluster at one end or more corners, according to fancy, says the Queen. The stalks and leaves are done in silks of various colors. To those who like the work designs will suggest themselves. The cush-ion covers may be frills or not. The other things are usually edged with a fall of satin Valenciennes lace over a fall of thin colored silk. Mono-grams of initial letters are also car-ried over the ribbon work. "Baby" on a coverlet in forget-me-nots or rosebuds has a very pretty effect.

In India when one sneezes it is the custom to say "May you live," and the reply runs "Long life to you." In an-cient times, the Romans holding the idea that sneezing between noon and midnight was a good omen; believed that between midnight and noon was a bad omen, and if they should chance to sneeze while getting up in the morning they would at once get into bed again. The Germans say "Good health" because they maintain that sneezing is a warning of approaching catarrh and also marks the moment when a charm, a wish or a surgetion may drive it away.

Dubois' "If."

Senator Fred T. Dubois has figured quite prominently in the politics of Idaho for many years, and has figured with figures, but the late lamented election in Idaho and its awful results have caved in his mathematical bump, and he recklessly throws figures together and apart and proves to his own entire satisfaction by doing violence to mathematical accuracy, that the "Mormons" are responsible for the overwhelming result. He was recently interviewed and made the startling statement that the republican majority on the state ticket was the "Mormon" vote of about 20,000. He avers that if the "Mormons" had voted the democratic ticket (and here we will add that if they had they would be good, patriotic citizens), the democratic ticket would have been elected by 20,000. If the "Mormons" had divided evenly, Heitfeld would have been elected and the balance of the ticket would have been defeated by small majorities. The senator figures that 5,000 Gentile republicans supported the democratic ticket and 10,000 republicans supported Heitfeld. The six "Mormon" counties gave the republican ticket 10,000 majority and the non-"Mormon" counties gave it 12,500. There was but very little difference in the republican majorities in "Mormon" and anti-"Mormon" counties in proportion to the votes cast. Dubois may figure and figure, add and subtract, and reach results that might have been if they hadn't been otherwise, but the returns are against him. He may jumble and scramble and mix up the figures with airy suppositions and gauzy theories, but they will with mathematical and measured step waltz back in regular order to their right positions, and sustain their long standing reputation or disinclination to lie, even though their manipulators may be liable to err, or designedly call out "prevarication in the center and all hands round," and for a time appear to mix up the figures, but they will get around to their proper places and mutely but eloquently sustain in the old time declarations that, "Truth is mighty and will prevail," and that "figures will not lie." Now that the senator has been associating figures with "ifs" and arrived at the mistaken conclusion that if the "Mormons" had not voted or had divided evenly, Heitfeld would have been elected, it cannot be considered impertinent "if" this process of reasoning is carried a little further. "If" the republicans had divided evenly or had not voted at all, the result would have been different, or "if" the democrats had all voted the republican ticket, just imagine the awfulness of the result!

A reasonable supposition would be that if the "Mormons" had not voted, what are known as the "Mormon" counties would have gone as did the other counties of the state—all gone wrong from the senator's point of view. The fact is that the republican wave swept over all the counties of the state, and was as impartial as the rain that "falls alike upon the just and the unjust."

That is just all there was to it, and the senator can figure and figure, with or without his additions, subtractions and "ifs," and try to reach results of what would have been, should have been or might have been if it could have been otherwise than it really was, the fact stands out boldly that it is as it was evidently destined to be, and would be just as it is, "Mormons" or no "Mormons." ## George L. Shoup,

The news of the death of ex-Governor and ex-Senator George L. Shoup is most sorrowful. He was a tower of strength for forty years. From the time when a youth he led a regiment of frontiersmen into the great war, until the weight of years and disease took from him his strength. In every place he was a brave, high-minded, splendid man.

He helped to create two states; he met all the hardships and dangers of two frontiers; he was one of those strong forces that weaker men always lean upon; his advice was always depended upon, his presence was an inspiration.

While working for himself and his family his heart never grew cold. His path was lined with charities, his country and its welfare were always uppermost in his mind.

His clear sense and perfect integrity shone out at all times and in all places. He made a model governor and when he advanced to the senate of the United States, he almost at once exerted an influence that many men with all the accomplishments of the schools could never attain to. He was by nature an industrial chief. Such a man as those who build the roads and sail the ships of a country, and when a practical problem was up for solution in the senate, the wisest statesman in that body turned to his intuitive judgment for an opinion.

The men of all parties in Idaho will sorely grieve that he has been taken away. His life was a blessing every way to that territory and state. He was one of her strongest men from the very first. As honors came to him they were reflected back upon his state, and because of him the young state from the first had drawn around it in full measure the nation's respect, and the people of that state are all mourners around his sepulchre.

God rest the steadfast soul and may his family have the comfort of feeling that their grief is shared by all the thousands of their neighbors and friends.—Goodwin's Weekly.

Chas. Harte has sold his interest in the Nampa Herald to the Nampa Leader. Mr. Harte is a well-known newspaper man of many years' experience in the West, and his able work in aiding in the upbuilding of Nampa has certainly been recognized by the citizens of that progressive city.

W. P. Frederick has sold the Bellevue News to Messrs. Jones & Shaw, two experienced newspaper men. Bellevue is a thriving little town and evidently appreciates the efforts of their local paper, judging from the advertising columns of the News. We wish the new firm all possible success.

Washington Special.
 The death of ex-Senator George L. Shoup cast a gloom over all who knew him. Universal regret is expressed on every side by senators who were associated with him during his long term of office.

Senator Shoup was looked upon as the ablest representative the west has had in Washington for years. When the news of his death was announced to Senator Heyburn, he said: "I have today learned with great regret of the death of Senator Shoup, who for ten years represented the state of Idaho in the United States senate. I have known him intimately for more than twenty years in the capacity of a private citizen, a public officer, and a personal friend. In all of those capacities he was a prince among men, generous and upright in all his dealings. Idaho has had no truer friend or ableer representative in the past, nor can we hope that she will have in the future." Outside of his relatives, there is probably no one who feels more keenly the death of Senator Shoup than Addison T. Smith, who was the senator's secretary during his senatorial career; the affection existing between them was often the subject of remark here. It was more like that between father and son than the ties which ordinarily exist between those associated in an official capacity. The senator had the utmost confidence in Mr. Smith and his judgment, and his confidence was never betrayed. Congressman French was a great admirer of Senator Shoup, and in speaking of him, he said: "It is with very deep sorrow that I have learned of the death of Hon. George L. Shoup. I had learned to love him for his gentleness, his sincerity, and the ever kindly interest that he had in young men. I admired and honored him, too, for the great work he has done for the state of Idaho and the Pacific coast. As an officer in the army, as governor of the territory and then of the now commonwealth, as senator for many years, George L. Shoup has proven himself loyal and true to the highest interests of those who in this generation and in those to come may make Idaho their home."

The Pure Food bill will come up on January 4th, and while great opposition is being shown this measure by senators representing constituencies who are interested in whiskey and adulterated food products, Senator Heyburn, who has the bill in charge, has the solid support of the State Pure Food association, the physicians, and all public-spirited citizens, and he intends to make a great fight for its passage during the present session of congress.

The bill providing for the repeal of the stone and timber act has been indefinitely postponed by a vote of 10 to 4 in the house committee on public lands. This bill has been strongly agitated for the last two or three years, and it looked for a time as if it would pass. It is a well-known fact that Congressman French of Idaho and Mondell of Wyoming have taken the lead in opposition to this measure. This action by the committee kills the bill for the present and it is not likely that it will come up again soon.

It is not believed by those high in authority that the Joint-Statehood bill will pass at this season. It is being opposed by nearly all the democratic senators, and if necessary they will "filibuster" against the bill. The democrats, however, could not prevent the passage of the bill were they not aided by nearly all the western republican senators, who with few exceptions, will oppose the bill on the ground that the several territories should be admitted separately. The enormous area of these territories and their prospects for an immense population demand their admission as separate states. It is also looked upon by western senators as an effort on the part of the east to hold down the west in representation.

At the earnest request of the women's clubs of Idaho, Senator Heyburn urged upon the committee having charge of the Statehood bill for the admission of Oklahoma and Indian territory, that the bill be so amended as to eliminate the restrictions of suffrage on account of "sex," and the bill has been reported with that objectionable word stricken out, so that the state will be free to confer suffrage on the women.

Last year Congressman French introduced a bill providing for three public buildings in Idaho. They were to be at Pocatello, Lewiston and Moscow. The bill was referred to the committee on public buildings of the house and reports from all the departments interested have been made to the supervising architect of the treasury, and he has prepared a report giving an estimate of the quantity of the floor space desired, the quality of material to be used in construction and the cost of the buildings and submitted it to the house. Mr. French is working hard for his bill and is very hopeful of its passage.

FRUIT-GROWERS' CONVENTION

Beginning on Monday, January 16—Elaborate Programs Have Been Prepared—Several Important Subjects Will Be Discussed

Secretary C. Sinsel of the Northwest Fruit-Growers' association and Fremont Wood and J. R. Field, president and secretary of the State Horticultural association, held a meeting in this city on Friday evening, at which it was decided to hold the annual meetings of the Northwest Fruit-Growers' association in conjunction with each other, commencing Monday, January 16, and concluding on Thursday, January 19.

Under the arrangement made the Northwest Fruit-Growers' association, which includes the fruit growers of Idaho, Oregon and Washington, will occupy the day sessions during Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the evening sessions of these days having been assigned for the Idaho State Horticultural association. The business of the Northwest Fruit-Growers' association will be concluded at its Wednesday afternoon session, and Thursday's sessions will be devoted to the general business transactions of the State Horticultural association.

Elaborate programs have been prepared by the officers of both associations, covering nearly every feature relating to the fruit industry, and it is confidently expected that there will be a very large attendance from the entire northwest of those persons directly and indirectly interested in horticulture.

The last meeting of the Northwest Fruit-Growers' association was held at Portland a year ago. At that time several subjects were assigned for the present meeting. This will insure carefully prepared papers upon the subjects assigned, which must result in great benefit to the industry.

Hon. E. L. Smith of Hood River, Oregon, president of the Oregon state board of horticultural inspection, will be present and participate in the sessions of both associations. Mr. Smith is one of the most successful orchardists in the northwest and has added a large amount of practical experience to his scientific knowledge and research upon the subject.

Prof. E. D. Bell of Logan, Utah; entomologist of the Utah Agricultural college, and Prof. A. B. Cordley of Corvallis, Ore., will also participate in these meetings. The last named gentlemen are recognized authorities upon the codling moth and proper methods for its extermination. Henry Dosch of Portland, at present director general of the Lewis and Clark exposition, will also be present. An assemblage of the fruit growers of the northwest would be incomplete without Mr. Dosch, who is recognized as probably the ablest authority in the northwest upon general horticultural subjects.

One of the important things to be considered at these meetings is the future of the fruit industry as it may be affected by transportation rates. This subject has been assigned to a prominent railroad man, who is expected to present it both from the standpoint of the grower and the transportation line.

The program for the State Horticultural association has been arranged to fill out and extend the program of the other association and will be found to be equally interesting.

A. McPherson, pure food commissioner for this state, will present a paper before the State Horticultural association upon the subject of "Food Adulteration in its Relation to the Fruit Industry," and it is expected that Prof. W. D. Carlisle of Spokane will deliver one of his lectures upon the utilization of the orchard by-products, more particularly upon the possibilities to the orchardist in utilizing his surplus crop for the manufacture of apple wine and high cider.

Prof. Carlisle was for several years connected with the laboratory department of the Chicago Packer and its branch publications and he is a recognized authority upon the subject which has been assigned him. Prof. Carlisle is now a resident of Spokane, where he is superintendent of probably the largest orchard in the northwest, which is being equipped with a plant for the utilization of nearly its entire product in the manufacture of high grade wines and ciders.

It is a matter of congratulation that the horticultural interests of Idaho have been considered of sufficient importance to attract the attention of the fruit growers of the entire northwest and the people of Boise and vicinity will do doubt see that these meetings are well attended and that the presence of the membership comprising two associations is appreciated by Idaho citizens.—Boise Statesman.

IMPORTANT U. S. LAND LAWS.

Method of Securing Title to Lands Under Carey and Reclamation Acts.

The irrigation enterprises now under way in this state afford greater opportunities for homeseekers than anywhere else in the west.

The laws, however, under which land may be acquired vary in character and it behooves the intending settler to examine the terms of each before deciding where he will cast his lot.

The Boise-Payette tract and the Minidoka tract have been designated for reclamation by the government. The Boise-Payette tract covers about 250,000 acres in the Boise and Payette valleys not irrigated from present ditches. The Minidoka tract lies along the Snake river south of the Oregon Short Line railroad about 150 miles east of Boise and about 75 miles west of Pocatello.

Lands under these tracts to be reclaimed by the government can only be taken by homestead entry. The requirements may be stated as follows:

1. The entryman must be a citizen of the United States and over the age of twenty-one years (or be the head of a family). Married women cannot take a homestead.
2. The entryman must not be the owner of more than 160 acres of land other than the tract to be entered at the time of the entry.
3. A person who has heretofore made a homestead entry cannot, except in certain cases, make a homestead entry in these tracts.
4. Only 160 acres can be taken by each entryman, and this amount can be cut down by the Secretary to forty acres.
5. The entryman must reside on the premises for five years before he can prove up and get title to his land. Settlement, reclamation and improvements are required in entries of this kind under the general provisions of the law. During the five-year period the entryman cannot mortgage his land as a basis for a loan. He must cultivate and improve the land before final proof is made. The entryman must pay for his land in ten annual installments, commencing as soon as the water is ready for use. The cost of the water is estimated at from $25 to $35 per acre, and the Interior Department.

CAREY ACT.

The method of acquiring title to lands under the provisions of the Carey act, so called, is an act whereby desert lands are taken to the state for reclamation in turn contracting for the work with private individuals, who are repaid for their work by the sale of water rights at a price fixed by the state. Projects under this act are under state supervision and control.

TWIN FALLS LANDS.

The Twin Falls tract, which is the chief example of lands taken under this act, lies 125 miles southeast of Boise, and is in Cassia county, twenty-five miles southeast of Shoshone.

The requirements for taking land under this tract, or those entered under similar laws are as follows:

1. The entryman must be a citizen of the United States over the age of twenty-one years. Married women cannot take these lands.
2. It is immaterial how much land the entryman owns elsewhere or whether he has made any entry of lands under any of the other land laws. There are no restrictions in these respects. He cannot, however, enter more than 160 acres under this act.
3. No particular period of residence is required. The entryman may make his entry at any time. When the water is ready for delivery the canal company notifies the entryman, who must thereupon settle upon the land and cultivate one-sixteenth of his land the first year, and at least one-eighth of it within three years. The entire one-third may be cultivated at once and final proof made and title obtained as soon as the land is reclaimed from its desert character.
4. These entries may be assigned or transferred to other persons either in whole or in part.
5. The price (in the Twin Falls tract) is $25.50 per acre, including the land and the water right.

Under both the Carey act and the reclamation act the settler acquires title to a proportionate interest in the irrigation works which are ultimately turned over to the land owners.

It will be seen that the chief differences in the laws are, that under the Carey act the residence required is for a very much shorter period of time, that no residence is required until the water is ready for use, that title can be procured within a year or less after settlement is required, that before final proof the entry may be assigned and that only one-eighth, instead of one-half, must be reclaimed.

The only advantage in favor of entries under the reclamation act, is that the first payment on the water right need not be made at the time of entry, but is postponed until the water is ready for delivery, whereas, under the Carey act the first payment of $3.25 per acre is made at the time of entry, and the second payment during the year when water is first delivered. Ten years are allowed in both cases for full payment.

It is eighty years now since a president of Yale, in writing of a town through this part of the country, spoke of Keene as "the prettiest village in New England."

Keene is rather more like towns of Massachusetts than those of New Hampshire in the reputation which it has always held as an intellectual center.

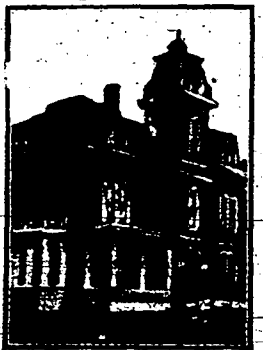

Far-Famed Flora.

There is hardly a place in New England which affords a better opportunity to study botany than Keene, which is far-famed because of its flora.

Among the organizations for women are the Colonial club, the Fortnightly, Tourist, Current Events, an art club, directed by Miss Bertha Jones; the Froebel club, which includes both mothers and Froebel enthusiasts; and a chapter of the D. A. R.

Some Old Houses.

One such place in Keene is the old Barstow house, for years the residence of the Rev. Dr. Z. S. Barstow, who, as pastor of the Congregational church for more than half a century, was famous for his good citizenship and strict orthodoxy, especially the deplorable one on the other side of the denominational fence.

Reminders of Old Days.

It was an early protection against the redmen's forays that the Upper Ashburton, as the early town was named, constructed its ambuscade. Such a fortress is supposed to have existed once where the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Hayward now stands.

It is a graceful service that the women pay, as their daughters, in keeping alive these memories, and here in Keene the men also have respected colonial associations by naming their club after Gov. Wentworth.

Home of Mrs. R. S. Perkins. Formerly Capt. Wyman's Inn. He it was who gave Keene its present name, as a compliment to one of his friends, while others of that circle were honored by having their names scattered through the picturesque valleys just beyond Keene.

It is thirty years since the town became a city and elected as its first mayor a leading citizen, Horatio Colby. Last year the town celebrated its 150th anniversary, and it found itself to have developed into a civic organization of which its citizens might well feel proud.

Recent tendencies of Keene are toward extensive use of its splendid possibilities for outdoor life. Its country club has 500 members who enjoy golf tennis and boating in the attractive vicinity of their clubhouse.

GOVERNOR OF OREGON Uses Pe-ru-na In His Family

For Colds and Finds It an Excellent Remedy.

The Magnificent State Capitol Building at Salem, Oregon. PRAISE FROM THE EX-GOVERNOR OF OREGON.

PERUNA is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Letters of congratulation and commendation testifying to the merits of Peruna as a catarrh remedy are pouring in from every State of the Union.

Dr. Hartman is receiving hundreds of such letters daily. All classes write these letters, from the highest to the lowest.

The outdoor laborer, the indoor artisan, the clerk, the editor, the statesman, the preacher—all agree that Peruna is the catarrh remedy of the age.

The stage and rostrum, recognizing catarrh as their greatest enemy, are especially enthusiastic in their praise and testimony.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent.

Peruna is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh of its victims.

Peruna not only cures catarrh, but prevents it. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds and so forth.

The Ex-Governor of Oregon is an ardent admirer of Peruna. He keeps it continually in the house.

In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., he says:

STATE OF OREGON, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O., Dear Sirs:—I have had occasion to use your Peruna Medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have not had occasion to visit for other ailments.

Yours very truly, W. M. Lard.

It will be noticed that the Ex-Governor says he has not had occasion to use Peruna for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold.

Using Peruna to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments.

This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do—keep Peruna in the house. Use it for coughs, colds, influenza, grippe, and other ailments of winter, and there will be no other ailments in the house.

Such families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book, entitled, "Chronic Catarrh."

TALL STORIES OF THE KAW.

One of the Most Altitudinous Dainties by a Man From the West. James A. Cameron, a cattle breeder of near Topoka, Kan., lies at the Rembrandt place in the Kaw river.

The Kaw, ambery serenity—sometimes through Kansas City, Kan. No—they tell a few stories about the Kaw.

"And most of them are true," said Mr. Cameron, "especially the one about the steamboat that got caught in the Kaw one dry season and had to be pushed out by an excavator. I have never known the Kaw to be reall downright muddy, but sometimes I wonder why people want to travel to Vesuvius to look at a sluggish lava bed when they can get about the same effect on the banks of the Kaw. Now and then a log or something will get stuck in the water and stop the current. Then they have to plow it loose and turn it over to get the liquid loose on top. I had a horse that tried to cross the river once, but every time he took a foot out of the water, the shoe was pulled off. He finally accomplished it comfortably by lying down on his back and rolling over. But there is one slander about the Kaw that ought to be nailed."

"What's that?"

"Why, the one about the cattily grazing on the banks of the Kaw having their mouths fitted up with filtration plants."

"It isn't true?"

"It most positively is not," said Mr. Cameron, solemnly.—Baltimore News.

Philanthropy.

It is announced by authority that Gen. McFudge has made another princely donation to McFudge university.

Gold floors will be laid in all the buildings of the institution; an equatorial telescope, with an aperture of 40 feet, will be mounted; the museums will be enlarged until they cover eighty acres and 100,000,000 volumes will be added to the library.

The determination is to make Mr. Fudge the equal of any school in the United States.

No professor is paid less than $1,000 a week at McFudge, and this broad policy is attracting the best scholarship of the age. With an especial endowment of a billion dollars, the income of which is devoted in perpetuity to bribing students to attend, it is felt that the future of the university is assured.

The alumni of the school have just donated a magnificent altar piece for the chapel. It represents Gen. McFudge being crowned by the Muses.—Life.

The One-Tongued England.

What strikes the American constantly in England, writes W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine, is the homogeneity of the people. We have the foreigner so much with us that we miss him when we come to England. When I take my walks in Central park I am likely to hear my sherr-tonese often enough to hear the Yiddish, or Russian, or Polish, or Norwegian, or French, or Italian, or Spanish; but when I take my walks on the Leas at Folkstone, scarcely more than an hour from the polyglot continent of Europe, I hear all but nothing but English. Twio, indeed, I heard a few French people speaking together; once I heard a German Jew telling a story of a dog, which he found so funny that he almost burst with laughter; and once again, in the lower town, there came to me from the green door of an eating house the sound of Italian. But nearly everywhere else was English, and the signs of tel on parlo francais were almost as infrequent in the shops.

The Coward.

The night before the battle met He sang the splendor of the fray, Till all our hearts were melted into one Took heart against another day.

He sang the thunder-swift attack, The shock of shields, the overthrow; The shout that rang the chorus back, Started the camp-fires of the foe.

The horns' hoarse pauses. Dawn heard none The knight heroic bled; cry: But ere his blade had crossed his own, The slinger turned his horse to fly.

They slew him as he fed the field; But all day long he fed in vain Shivering once from the spear-pointed With memory of his noble strain.

So half fell foul into the snare, And half sped splendid to the goal—What earthly feud that day had there? The doom of this divided soul? —Frank Little Follock in the Atlantic.

Put Cardinal Under Arrest.

Very few knew that the present pope was once arrested. He had visited a poor man, dying and stretched on the bare ground. On relating to the thought of the poor man without a mattress came back to the private. This was too much for his fatherly heart and, without more ado, he rolled his own up as well as he could and slipped out with it on his shoulders. But he had not bargained for the watchful police and he was presently in the custody of two Venetian gendarmes. As soon as they recognized him, however, they took charge of the bundle themselves and carried it to where the good cardinal directed.

MAGIC IN THE ZUNI TRIBE.

Priest Apparently Lifted a Jug of Water with a Feather.

"The most startling feat I ever saw" said a guest at the Diller last night, who has made a study of Indians in various parts of the United States for his own education—"was performed by the priests of the Zuni tribe in Arizona, or, as they were called, 'The Ancestors of Creation.' They sent themselves in a circle on the clay floor, around a jar that will hold perhaps a gallon, an ancient and sacred earthen vessel, which is filled with water. The chief priest carries in his hand two ordinary eagle feathers, which are tied together at the quill ends so that they make a fork. Behind the circle of the priests are other members of the tribe and the musicians with their drums and gourd, who join in the chants with emotion.

"The incantations continue for several hours and when the participants and spectators are brought up to a proper pitch of excitement the priest dips the jar with the water. Lifts the jar with them and holds it suspended for a minute or two at a height level with his face or forehead. Then he lowers it slowly to the ground. This feat is repeated several times during the performance. Apparently there is nothing in the hand of the priest but the feathers and they appear to be inserted into the mouth of the jar only two or three inches. Of course, there is some trick about it, but I was never able to discover it." Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Ancient Egyptian Herbalium.

Cairo can boast of the possession of the oldest herbalium in the world. It is in the museum, and consists of a collection of dried plants, or portions of plants taken from the tombs and garlands found in mummy-wraps and from the shilple plants which were set in earthenware vessels on the floor of the tombs. Many of these floral remains are as well preserved as if, after being treated with warm water, they can be handled as if they were modern specimens, while their colors are also remarkably well preserved.

Coffee Known for Centuries.

A pamphlet published by an Arab sheik in 1666 sheds light upon the origin and early use of coffee. This Arab sheik asserts that coffee was introduced into Arabia by the Abyssinians about the opening of the fifteenth century and that it had been known as a beverage in the latter country from the most remote period. Its peculiar properties were taken advantage of by the Mohammedans in connection with their prolonged religious ceremonies, but its use as a devotional antiposporic stirred up the fiercest opposition on the part of the orthodox element of the priests. Coffee was declared to be an intoxicant and was accordingly prohibited in the Koran, but in spite of this the coffee drinking habit spread rapidly. For two centuries the world's supply of coffee was obtained from the province of Yemen in southern Arabia, where the well-known Mocha is still cultivated.

Minister Sets Wife Free.

The Rev. B. Harrison of Charlton, Kings, England, committed suicide, leaving his wife a letter which began: "This will set you free from a climate so trying to you, and you may now live in London or any other place that may suit you."

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR Mrs. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me. I felt that my sun had set. But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and by my use I feel my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily, and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use." J. H. Day, of Clyde, Wash., it is reported, offered $1000 bonus for a 80-acre tract near town which he desired to secure.

S. W. Dingman has arrived from Stroud, Oklahoma, and is now on his land clearing and preparing for next year's crop.

R. W. Jones is building an addition on the rear of his block on Main street, which when completed will be used for bath rooms.

Born—Friday, December 30, 1904, to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Urie, a daughter, weight 11 1/2 pounds. Mother and child doing well.

Records & Skinner are busy laying sidewalks on Main street and Shoshone avenue, but have been detained on account of a lack of lumber.

L. Pettit, of the Idaho Lumber company, returned today from Park City, Utah, accompanied by his wife, who will make a brief visit with her husband.

Walter Rose left Soda Springs today with a number of teams and equipment which he will use during the winter freighting between Shoshone and this point.

The Cassia County Social club will give a New Year's dance Monday evening, January 2, 1905, at the school house. Good music and a good time is assured to all who attend.

The concrete footing for the basement walls of the new hotel is now being laid. Work is favorably progressing, the concrete machine being expected to arrive at any time.

J. A. Prater, of the Pioneer harness shop, left today for an extended visit to St. Anthony, his former home. The shop will be in charge of his partner, Mr. Bradley, who will attend to the wants of their customers.

A. H. OverSmith, attorney at law, of Dyersville, Iowa, arrived here Wednesday evening with a view of seeking a location. He is favorably impressed with the land proposition and will no doubt make a purchase.

The basement has been excavated for Perrine & Burton's new store building, and the foundation walls will soon be laid. It is expected that the building will be constructed of concrete blocks, but no final decision has as yet been made.

The Blue Front Cafe has opened for business and is receiving all the patronage that can be handled comfortably. Mr. Taylor, the proprietor, states that an addition will soon be built in order to better care for his rapidly increasing trade.

John A. Erickson has completed the construction of a house on his ranch, one mile north of town. He states that he has 20 acres cleared ready for the planting in the spring. His specialties will be bogs and chickens, both of which will prove very profitable here.

Edward Epper of Wallace, Idaho, and O. A. Iaham of Esterville, Iowa, are here looking for a location for a grocery and gent's furnishing store. They have selected a small building on the rear of St. John Skinner's lot for a temporary lodging house. They express themselves as well pleased with the prospects for the town, and expect to be ready for business in the near future.

Work on the railroad from Minidoka is making rapid progress, as 500 men and a large number of teams are now employed. It has been given out that only 3000 yards of dirt per mile has to be moved, which allows rapid completion of the grade. The bridge will be of piling and will be put in without delay when the track reaches that point.—Shoshone Post.

The outfit of Corey Brothers, the Ogden contractors, passed through town Wednesday on its way to Twin Falls, where they have the contract for digging ten miles of the ditch.—Albion Times.

H. H. Thornton will not commence teaching at Twin Falls until after the holidays. This will give him an opportunity to get the superintendent's office in shape and turned over to his successor.—Albion Times.

O. H. Barber, of the Twin Falls News, dropped into the Journal office Tuesday evening while waiting for the train west. Mr. Barber said things were going as well with the News as was anticipated and that the new company was on the forward jump.—Shoshone Journal.

O. H. Barber, of the Twin Falls News, was a passenger on No. 1 Tuesday en route to Mountain Home and Boise. He is very enthusiastic over the bright future that is in store for his town, and says that every day brings in new home-seekers for the lands under the Twin Falls canal.—Glenn's Ferry Signal.

George T. Meader of Houston, Mo., an attorney of 14 years' experience, came in this week and is stopping at the Cottage. Mr. Meader has an established reputation as an able attorney and will enter into business at this place. Later on, however, he expects to locate at Twin Falls.—Shoshone Post.

Christmas Trees.

About 200 grown people and 100 children gathered at the new school house on last Saturday evening to listen to a well-prepared program and witness a fine Christmas tree arranged for the occasion. The Christmas tree was a large sagebrush eight feet in height, neatly trimmed and decorated with tinsel cord and strings of popcorn. Candles were also placed thereon, but were not lighted because of danger of igniting the tree. Apples, nuts, popcorn, candy and oranges were placed on the tree for the children, and were distributed by Mr. Tripp, who took the part of Santa Claus.

A number of children were trained in their various parts which went to make up a very enjoyable program. Mrs. H. W. Clouchek had charge of the entertainment, the following is the
