TRIUMPH FOR LAW AND ORDER

Jerome Constable Calms Two Belligerent Ditch Diggers.

Two "Christy ditch diggers" wended their way into Jerome on a hot afternoon a few days ago and proceeded to wash the dust from their brows with copious buckets of fluid not obtained from the Jerome waterworks. In time a quarrel arose in their minds as to which was the better man; they argued the question long and earnestly, before the bar, on the sidewalk, and finally they took positions in the middle of the street. Attracted by the threats of the ditch diggers to "rumple" each other's countenances, a crowd gathered around the belligerents. More sulphuric grew the conversation and finally the combatants came together with a blif.

"Squid him, squid!" "Go it, Slim!" "Break away there," came from the spectators. The scrappers were too roagry to hurt each other but they mangled away with intense earnestness, urged on by the cries from the crowd. They were furnishing all kinds of amusement when a little straggled man with a sharp nose and round rimmed spectacles forced his way through the spectators.

"Where's the constable? Is there no law in this town? I say, where's the constable?" answered Kinney.

"This disgraceful affair must be stopped. I say, where's the constable?"

"He's asking for you, Gil!" said one of the boys, poking Gilmore Kinney in the ribs.

"I don't know him from a hotted almond," answered Kinney. "He don't look very respectable either."

"Sure, but you are the constable of Jerome and he claims that the peace and dignity of the city is being denied. Get busy."

"Go!" said Gil. "That's so, I am the constable and I forgot all about it."

"Gentlemen, you will have to cut out this rough stuff," commanded Kinney in stern tones, as he flipped the belligerents apart. "If you must fight, go out on the desert where you will have more room. We will have to put you in the horse trough if you don't behave. Be good, now."

The tired belligerents shook hands and went back to wind up their unfinished business at the bar and the crowd dispersed.

"Guess I'll have to wear a star 'zite a string around my finger to remind me of my official duties," said Kinney. "I was never on the force before and I'm not used to the signals. I came mighty near making a fumble that time."

"You sustained the dignity of your office in very fine shape," said Mayor Reed. "The citizens of Jerome can slumber in peace during the dark hours while you are on the job. Personally I feel greatly relieved. I am always a little bit nervous when Deputy Sheriff Lyme Hughes is away, but I will rest easier now that law and order has been vindicated. The Jeronites will extend you a vote of thanks at their next meeting and present you with a star."

ECONOMY IN FEEDING CALVES

Separator Milk Mixed with Grain Makes Good Fodder.

There are many farmers, as we say, who would not object so much to milking cows as they would to creaming. If they felt assured they could raise a calf without credit to themselves and their other farming operations, they object to it so low that it is possible to rear a calf on the sweet hand separator skim milk properly combined with grain and which calf at the end of 12 months will be worth as much money to the farmer, either for placing in his feed lot or in selling to some feeder, as the calf which has been reared at its mother's side. I will not resort to any figures to prove that as good a skim milk calf can be produced at the end of 12 months as a calf which has suckled its dam through the summer and winter in the usual way. I will not resort to any figures to show the comparative cost of a skim milk calf 12 months old as compared with a calf raised on the cow at that age. Figures on each of these points abound everywhere. They can be found in the bulletin of the experiment stations from one end of the United States to the other. I take it for granted that the farmer knows that if a skim-milk calf can be produced at the end of 12 months and as compared with a calf which has had the entire and exclusive attention of its dam.

Skim milk, as stated, contains all the elements necessary for growth. However, some fat must be fed in connection with milk to produce a certain amount of fat in the calf's body and also for the purpose of keeping the calf warm. It will be seen in the first place, therefore, that calves nursing with their dams are eating more fat than they really need, which results in loss to the owner because it does the calf no good. It is a surplus of fat which the calf does not need, and when butter-fat is selling at an average price of 22 to 23 cents per pound, it can be seen that it will be economy on the part of the farmer to save this fat and sell it. On the other hand, if a substitute for this fat can be added to the skim milk and this substitute is cheaper than butter-fat, as it is, then the farmer is again practicing a system of economy which he can't afford to overlook.—T. A. Hornum.

Six miles from Hansen, on Rock creek, are orchards which have been bearing for over 20 years and on which the trees are loaded with peaches, pears, apples, apricots, plums, etc. today. Hansen has railway facilities and a splendid graded school and it will have waterworks, electric light and power so soon as these utilities can be installed. A large grain warehouse will be completed in time for this year's crop. A bank will be opened so soon as the building can be completed. Several business buildings will also be erected and mercantile houses opened.

Reliable information regarding the city and country promptly and cheerfully furnished. Address all communications to The News Publishing Company, Twin Falls, Idaho.

Entered as second-class matter, December 7, 1891, at the postoffice at Twin Falls, Idaho, under act of Congress of March 2, 1879.

The News has never taken seriously the talk of opposition to Senator Heyburn. Its estimate of the senator has been published so frequently that it is immune from the suspicion of "trailing after the band wagon." Twin Falls and Twin Falls county have good reason to remember the services of Senator Heyburn for this section of the state. Not for one second has there been the slightest doubt as to where he stood on any question affecting the welfare of Idaho. The rapid growth of the Twin Falls tract has caused many importunate demands upon various departments of the federal government and the aid of Senator Heyburn has never been invoked in vain. Senator Heyburn never allows his friends to drift away from him. He keeps in touch with all sections of the state and is ever ready to act for the good of the commonwealth which he represents with a thorough knowledge of conditions and a full appreciation of what is needed. His presentation of the measure by which Idaho was given an additional million acres of Carey act land was one of the very best tributes ever paid to the Twin Falls project. In many a notable debate Senator Heyburn has demonstrated his ability to cope with the leading orators and statesmen of America and has compelled admiration, even from those holding opposite views. He should be unanimously endorsed by the Republican state convention in Boise and re-elected by acclamation.

PROPER TIME TO CUT ALFALFA

Condition of Plant Should Be Closely Observed. We do not need to give any instructions or suggestions to experienced alfalfa growers, who have by this time learned that alfalfa is a rather delicate maiden and must be dealt with in the right way if she is to be won. In the two thousand or more years in which alfalfa has been grown as a forage crop she has necessarily acquired some fixed habits. She is an ancient maiden who has had her own way and will have it. She is, in fact, somewhat cranky and, therefore, must be studied if we are to get along with her comfortably.

Alfalfa has been in the habit of having her head cut off by mowing during all these years, until the mowing process has become a necessity to the thrift and vigor of the plant. It is not worth while to try to change these alfalfa habits. One of them is that when the usual time for harvesting the crop approaches it begins to prepare for it as though it were a foreseen event, by throwing out buds near the root, thus forming a crown. If our readers cut their alfalfa before these buds have been formed, the result will be a weak and puny plant. Meanwhile weeds will fight for possession of the land and, therefore, if you cut your alfalfa too early, you will inevitably have a slight crop followed by a bumper crop.

On the other hand, if you let it go too late, the plant will throw its strength to the shoots and the main stem will begin to crumble. It will go on and produce seed, but all alfalfa growers know that a seed crop detracts very much from the crop that is to follow, and for the reasons above given.

We are appealing now to men who have a small acreage of alfalfa, for example, ten acres or less. Before cutting, examine your field carefully and see if there is a growth of from one-half to an inch of new plants between the rows. If you cut this growth appears about the time that the plant begins to bloom. Usually you can find bloom started by the time these buds start, but the buds are a safer guide as to the time to cut than the bloom. Of course where a man has one or two hundred acres of alfalfa he must commence at the earliest moment possible and push things until he is through. He can probably better stand it to injure the second crop on the entire cutting than to suffer injury from the latest cutting. Where there is a large acreage of alfalfa the mowing action stops more than a few days between crops. By the time the first crop is harvested the second is nearly ready for the mower. We do not offer advice to these people, for we know by experience the problems of those who have a couple of hundred acres of alfalfa to cut. Another thing: There is a great temptation where a man has a small acreage of alfalfa and especially if corn is scarce, to mow it and use it as a soiling crop for pigs. We tried that, once and with the following result: The alfalfa that was cut when a foot light and before it showed any signs of buds or bloom simply waited, just as corn waits when it is blown down about the time it is tasseling out to readjust itself to the unexpected condition of affairs. While it was waiting the weeds grew, and the result was that we were obliged to plow up all that he had mown before the proper time. If you want to use alfalfa for your hogs, put in enough alfalfa to make mowing through it and then mow as if there was not a hog on the place. Study the nature of the plant; conform to it, but don't try to change it—Wallace's Farmer.

PRIZE ESSAY ON THE SALOON

Awarded by Collier's Weekly to Emma Brush.

Collier's Weekly is now running a series of articles on the saloon-quest which are of absorbing interest. To the essay which follows was awarded the first prize of $100. It was written by Emma Brush and was selected from 3000 manuscripts submitted.

The women have been congregating unusually late in our southern tier New York town, and a wise one, with ten words, has turned the ordinary canteen-spattery thought bubbling into a stream. She said: "Last month ended our first no-license year. What of it?"

It may be worth noting that no woman, in the discussion engendered, has backed up against any man's fire-side, smoke-ringed opinion. In the matter, perhaps this feminine lone-thinking carries in itself the first modest tally-son for the new order.

The licentious wife, who has lived in many places, omitted the first rounded opinion: "We had the best saloons in the state, I think. Where else would a saloon-keeper come, as did Mr. Kern, and tell me my boy was there too much? I'd rather my husband would stop in at a place like that than to be finding bottles about the house, as I do now."

The next clear word came from a farm four miles in the hills. Only strong feeling and lone thought could have pulled the quiet woman out to say: "I will come down and work day and night, any way I can, on my knees in the street if need be, to hold the town dry. You know why. It's been a new kind of year for us—the first prospering one in ten. Yes, there's more hard labor drunk—sometimes too much—and every one knows how it was last Fourth. But the habit is broken—the habit of running to town, with all its petty excesses, deserted work and miserable night hours of waiting, keeping us all poor, sick and sour. Oh! It's been a good year, up our way—a new kind of year for us." "Best of all, I think, and my girls think so, too," said Mrs. Van Ness, "is the feeling—the clean feeling as one walks the town. No more dodging round to avoid Hanson's and the other corners. They may be drinking just behind the walls, but the streets are ours anyway, and the place somehow has a different feel to me—clearer, more trouble—and my girls notice it too."

"Those that want it will get it," said the licentious wife. "Mrs. Hurd's license was carried home helpless Saturday night."

"And the mother takes it cheerfully," broke in Mrs. Hurd's neighbor. "What's a spree now and then?" says Mrs. Hurd. "It's the dribble-dribble, so many a day and increasing every year, that breaks the hearts.

Bennie's all right; it will be a long time before he'll want to be so again. A man's got to blow off every so often, somehow; and we can take that and laugh. But it's the coming with four drinks in every night that eats the vitals out of a home—and then eats the home. And that's the saloon every time. I've lived them both and I'm for the spree."

So the talk has run. But for the most part the women have become unwontedly cautious and thoughtful, knowing as never before that the problem is a little more than half theirs. The sudden change in our life's civic machine caught some fingers, even crushed and crippled in a rare place. Some fine dreams have gone up and out like our yard-garden smoke; and we could wish that many of our last year's brave predictions and promises had been less loudly voiced.

We know that drink is being sold, as in rear rooms at the lower hotel, by one druggist, strangely at the dress-shop, and at a farm a mile out. We know that the drinkers will drink, our old liars will go on lying, our consumptives are bound to cough. But youth's youth remains to us! Youth is the field—the hope of all temperance. Somewhere, in youth, the drinkers learned to drink, in a bad way, and with few exceptions, not readily, but through repeated sicknesses, pains, mental and physical disgusts, self-dedications, kept on because the path was well graded and well respected, and the others were going that way, until the body and mind adjusted themselves to the new conditions, and another habit claimed to the driver's seat and laid life-long hand upon the steering gear.

I know a man in the country who formed the habit of going each night after supper to a neighbor's porch and just sitting, with nothing to give or take. When the neighbors moved, leaving the house empty, he still went to the porch. After the house burned he would go and sit on the wall.

We had good saloons. If one may so use the words. The keepers and their families were our friends and neighbors. But they were too many; they grew insidiously upon us. They took the best corners; they inter-penetrated and cluttered the town. Their hold was increasing upon all the forces of our lives. But, worst of all, they stood open there day and night to our youth—easy schools of habit, with no entrance requirements and minimum fees—sanctioned by us, apparently.

And now, a year without them—and what of it? Well, no one admits that the gross quantity of alcohol consumed in the community—farms and quarries and all—is greatly diminished; a definite physiological gain, anyway. The contrary. We have had drink less and been drunk more times. The doctors tell us that's better for them. Some have shown considerable periods of sobriety. The wives generally, with Mrs. Hurd, prefer the "spree" career. Variety, even in pusillanimity, is worth something. Hard cider has been in increased demand, and one thoughtful tourist son sent to his disgruntled and dyspeptic father a full hoghead of Jamaica rum. Only the stomach pump saved some of them after this. But to our young men with habits forming (and our girls are, of course, equally involved), with too much motor feeling yet, and how to sneak for drinks, who were going to the bar because the man ahead went—to these we turn and find such a year's record of advancement and social good living, of increased town pride and athletic success and right marrying, that for these alone we are ready with the farmer's wife, to go down in the dirt to keep the saloon from re-establishment in our town.

PROMISING MINES
BEING DEVELOPED

IN THE ELK MOUNTAIN MINING DISTRICT.

Good Strikes Have Been Made 15
Miles Northwest of Contact Copper
Camp and About 65 Miles Southwest of Twin Falls.

The Elk Mountain mining district in Nevada, 15 miles northwest of Contact and 65 miles southwest of Twin Falls, is attracting a great deal of attention this season. Several parties are at work in the vicinity of Limo and Canyon creeks. A number of good strikes have been made and many promising claims are being opened up. The formation is limo and granite, with a granite foot wall, and the ore contains gold, silver and copper, with copper predominating.
Assays of ore taken from near the surface show 3 per cent copper, seven ounces of silver and $1.50 gold to the ton. Better ore is now being obtained with depth and the veins are opening up in a very encouraging manner.

C. W. Robinson, A. E. Benolt, J. J.
Roblnett, Henry Boehme, J. H. Richmond, E. M. Reas and J. A. Henaley are developing five claims for the Elk Mountain Mining Co., of which C. W.
Roblnett is secretary. These claims are between Limo and Canyon creeks,
and splendid ore is now being taken from them. Louis Estes, M. S. Estes,
C. E. Ross, L. R. Estes and Arthur Estes have eight claims which they are opening up. William Auetta is working on five claims, and George Thomas on three. Richard O'Neil, Charles O'Neil, William O'Neil and James O'Neil are at work in the district and others are coming in.
The strikes have been made on what is commonly known as the "contact" or the point where the geological formation changes. Little or no granite or porphyry is found north of the "contact." Wherever the "contact" has been found, good ledges of copper ore have been uncovered.
The Elk Mountain district is reached by way of the Salmon river bridge and dam site. The stream is crossed at the bridge and the road on the west side followed for about 15 miles southward, thence southwest to the Holley place, near which the development work is being done.
