Entered as second-class matter, December 2, 1904, at the postoffice at Twin Falls, Idaho, under Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

The enterprising citizens of Buhl have demonstrated the possibility of obtaining well water on the Twin Falls south side tract, thereby conferring a great boon upon the entire community. They clubbed together and provided funds to defray the expense of drilling a deep well and it is gratifying to know that their efforts were crowned with success. Already they are reaping benefits in the form of increased valuation of town property. Now that the people of Buhl have taken the lead, wells will be drilled elsewhere on the tract. The question of drilling a well on the south side tract has often been agitated, but it remained for the citizens of Buhl to take the risk and they are entitled to a full measure of credit.

The question of locating the state agricultural college is now before the Idaho legislature. At present the agricultural college is affiliated with the University of Idaho at Moscow and it has been persistently charged that appropriations made for the college have been absorbed by the university. Even if this charge were true, it merely illustrates the need of a more liberal policy toward the university. It is degrading to see the friends of the state educational institutions hogging for money, year after year. Without casting any reflection whatever upon that admirable seat of learning, it must be admitted by all fair-minded citizens that the University of Idaho is not the place for an agricultural college. Conceding the advisability of centralizing the state institutions instead of scattering them all over the country, the fact is still apparent that the agricultural college should be located where it would do the most good. When it is further considered that but one student has been graduated by the state agricultural college of Idaho, the necessity for a change of location is obvious. Nothing can justify the location of the Idaho agricultural college within 10 miles of the Washington agricultural college at Pullman, a much more pretentious institution and one that is much better equipped. Nothing but agriculture, horticulture, irrigation, dairying and kindred subjects are taught at Pullman. Every student is on the same footing. The boy who goes there to study farming is not jeered at by his fellow students and called a "hayseed." He is surrounded by proper environment and he imbibes the proper atmosphere. The result is that Pullman interests its students and holds them while the Idaho agricultural college does not. Furthermore, the Idaho college at Moscow does not do so. In Idaho a parcel of good, except through institute work, and it is weak on the subject of irrigation, the subject most vital to the farmers in this section of the state. From the Milner dam alone, water is now being distributed over half a million acres, and before many months have passed this area will be increased 50 per cent. If the west of Salmon extension is built, an additional million acres will be added. The Twin Falls irrigation system today equals that of the entire empire of India in acreage, and far exceeds it in stability of construction and facility of distribution. What is Idaho doing for the thousands of farmers that the enterprising irrigation companies operating in Twin Falls and Lincoln counties have brought to this state? What has the state done to show its appreciation of the millions of dollars that have been added to its wealth through the reclamation and settlement of the lands now watered from the Milner dam? It is the duty of the state to provide an institution where the sons of the farmers can learn the secrets of agriculture, horticulture and irrigation. The irrigation companies are spending money to help the farmers, but the state is and has been idle. There should be an agricultural college and it should be located in an irrigated district where the pupils would constantly have great object lessons before their eyes. The legislature should not deprive the University of Idaho of a single penny or cripple it in any way, but it should afford the farmers who are building an empire in southern Idaho the opportunity to educate their children to take up farm life and pursue it along scientific lines. Moreover, the farmers who are coming here with their money and helping to reclaim what was hitherto a desert waste should not be left to shift for themselves and pay for their experience. They are the empire builders of today and their children are the voters and taxpayers of tomorrow. Let the state welcome them and show its appreciation of their presence by giving them the finest agricultural college in America. Logan, Utah, and Pullman, Washington, are turning out the brightest and best farmers in the country today and it is time that Idaho, with more land under irrigation than any state in the Union, should give the children a chance.

KEPT PRISONERS RIGHT OUT LOUD

AWKWARD PREDICAMENT OF THE JEROME CONSTABLE.

Was Obligated to Herd Three Prisoners Who Were Alleging Trial—Has Leased a Cellar Which He Will Use as a Calaboose.

They are going to build a jail in Jerome. A calaboose is about the last thing the law-abiding citizens of the North Side capital need, but the sneers of the town occasionally receive accommodations which are now available. The decision to build a jail was reached after an embarrassing experience. A rancher came in and demanded a warrant for the arrest of three men who he accused of having looted his camp and cut up his tent. He was very wrathful and insistent. The warrant was issued and the three accused men were identified by the complainant. Constable Gilmore Kinney was given the warrant and informed as to the location of the men wanted. A number of Mr. Kinney's friends accompanied him to see him make his first arrest. He found the alleged vandals and took them in charge. They were brought before Judge R. H. Traill, who set their hearing for the following morning. Kinney held at a sum in excess of their cash capital. Then the necessity for a jail arose. Constable Kinney had three large men with appetites on his hands and he did not know what to do with them. No place could be found in which they could be confined and the constable was in a quandary.

Directed that Marshall Smith of Twin Falls once preserved law and order in Milner during the turbulent construction days without a calaboose. Constable Kinney telephoned to the Twin Falls sleuth for advice. "Handout them to a telephone pole or an electric light pole," said Traill. "If they haven't been drinking squirrel whiskey they won't climb the pole and you have them in plain sight all the time."

Unfortunately the weather was too cold for that method of detention, so Constable Kinney did the next best thing and shackled his victims to a bench in a pool room, where they were night herded until the following morning. The complaining witness standing his turn as guard.

At the hour set for the hearing the prisoners were again taken before Judge Traill. The evidence was something like the complainant's tent, shattered and leaky, but Judge Traill hid each of the men $20 and costs, which they were unable to pay. It was suggested that they be allowed their freedom, which they "hustled" the money, but the vandals proved refractory and a visit to a blacksmith was necessary. The blacksmith was busy, very busy. Everybody in Jerome is in the interest of justice, law and order, the smith agreed to file off one hand-cut from each prisoner, and the three men started to "hustle" with the remaining shackles hanging from their wrists. They are still "hustling." The jail movement was there and there. Meanwhile Constable Kinney has leased a cellar with a waterproof covering in which he will incarcerate his prisoners. If they dig down they will strike water and drown and if they attempt a lateral movement they will surely be detected.

There is a nice little cave in the Rock creek canyon at Twin Falls which was used for a jail and which has been offered to Constable Kinney, but the roads are so bad that it cannot be transported to Jerome at present. The constable has laid in a fresh supply of handcuffs and is now fully prepared for emergencies.

STREET PAVING IS DISCUSSED At the Regular Meeting of the Council on Monday.

At the monthly meeting of the city council on Monday evening Mayor Volgt appointed a committee of three members to act with the committee of business men on the paving question. The latter committee has made a canvass of the property owners on Main avenue and Shoshone street in the section which is proposed to be paved and found sentiment to be almost unanimous in favor of paving. Practically all the lot owners have signed the paving petition and the signatures of others who are not residents will likely be obtained in a short time. Various kinds of paving were discussed.

In response to a petition from property owners the council created a new sewer district in the western section of the city.

GOODING, IDAHO

Registration begins Friday morning, February 5th, at Gooding, Idaho.

The drawing will be under the supervision of the State Land board and will begin at 1 p. m. and will be similar in character to previous Carey act drawings, preference being given to entrymen in the order in which their numbers are drawn.

The cost of land and water rights under the Clover Creek extension is $45.50 per acre, $45 for the water right and 50 cents for the land. The first payment required is $3.25 per acre, of which $3.00 is applied on the water right and 25 cents on the land.

The Clover Creek extension covers some of the very best land in Idaho. It is traversed by the main line of the Oregon Short Line, placing it favorably as regards market facilities; it is within reach of the great mining section of the state and it has the added benefit of free range adjacent.

Notices are up advertising that an examination will be held here Feb. 27th for carrier on the local rural route, which will be started April 1. Several have already applied to take the examination. There is about $900 per year at salary. There will also be a substitute carrier appointed to take the route in cases of emergency and when the regular carrier is unable to go.

Mr. Gaskill of Filer was here a few days ago looking at the local drug store. He has sold his store at Filer and is contemplating buying here or having some of his associates invest here.

E. W. Tilley is engaging in the chicken business and has a model chicken house erected here in town which will be admired by local chicken men.

TELEPHONE TALK

The attitude of telephone users determines largely the character of telephone service in a community. Without the co-operation of its subscribers no company can give ideal service, but co-operation will help subscriber and company alike.

HERE IS ONE IMPORTANT POINT—When your telephone gets out of order or your service becomes unsatisfactory in any way, advise the manager of the telephone company immediately. Do not wait a day or a week, but tell him about it at once and he will have it corrected. That's what he is here for. Don't bother your neighbors with your telephone troubles—bothers us. The neighbors can't help you, but we can and will if you give us a chance. We expect you to complain when things go wrong, but we ask you to complain to us and complain promptly so the trouble can be found and corrected. That's one thing we mean by co-operation.

THE HOG

(By Fred E. Drake; Filer, Idaho.)

You have assigned me the subject of "hogs," and I have asked me to point out his virtues and name his faults, and explain how to realize a profit from the pesky old nuisance that has filled to pay his bills for the past two years. He who roots up the pasture you have provided, crawls through the new made fence that was supposed to be tight, cuts the new hatched chickens at a single bite, and splits the sloe wall and creates a reign of terror. How expectant you were when you bought the first old sow and watched the piglets grow smooth and sleek from the bountiful fields of high-priced grains, and how you figured the profits and the gains, and multiplied these figures again and again until you could see the mortgage all paid, and the new house, that you have needed so long, and the other little luxuries you have wished for since your most years, and piglets were to pay all the bills. And you wished you could get into the hog business, oh, so quick, and not have any other business, but heca and heca in the feed pens, hogs in the pasture, all sizes, and you pictured how your neighbors would come to buy your hogs, and how the hog buyer would come and offer you pleasing prices for this pen and that lot, and you almost laughed with yourself as you thought of these pleasant things. And you told the good wife of the profits, and you rejoiced together that you had come to Idaho, and had started with the hog business.

Have you ever had thoughts and dreams as these when you first broke down the sage brush and began as an empire builder on these fertile acres? And everything looked bright and promising when, to your pleasant thoughts and dreams changed to realities, and it seemed so changed? The hogs did not fatten like they did back in the old corn state; your neighbors did not come to buy as you had figured, and the hog buyer came and offered you, oh, such sickly prices, and talked with you about the freight rates and the markets, and showed you that our rates were too high and our markets so far away, and pointed out that only the well fed and overfat hog was wanted at all. And you figured your grain and you counted your time, and you added the loss and measured the fence, and to his expense you compared the stinky prices just offered, and oh, you were so disappointed and wondered why you make such a mistake as to go into the hog business in a state where everything seemed out of order and harmony, so you sold at a loss and said goodbye to the unprofitable hog and washed your hands clean of the business.

But wait, friends; let us inquire into the matter. There must be something wrong somewhere, is it the hog? Is it the man? Is it the business, or is it the unfortunate place?

And let me answer: It is not the hog. It is not the man, for better never lived, nor is it the place. It is simply a condition that has not been properly worked out, and it is required into. And it is our aim and wish this afternoon to point a few glimpses that may point to the better way and the sure profit. My remarks are intended more for those farmers that raise hogs in considerable numbers, for the man only caring for a few can give them such attention that they will do well on almost any condition. But the man who intends to devote considerable time and depend on the hog as a business is the man calling for direction and help. My first recommendation is a good fence, well made and if possible around the entire farm. By this means the hog will pick up all shelled grain from the grain fields and all extra growth of alfalfa that would be lost otherwise. Fence in a liberal amount of alfalfa for pasture, and make the old hogs depend on pasture principally for feed.

I would not breed for spring litters. It has proven very unsatisfactory in almost every instance. I have lost several valuable sows as well as a large number of young pigs. For some reason this breed sows do not seem to be in proper condition in the spring for farrowing, and I think it is due to lack of green feed, and the wheat which we have to feed.

I would recommend that only one litter of pigs be raised from a sow each year, doing away entirely with the spring litter. Breed the sows about June 1st to 15th. This will bring the farrowing time about September 1st to 15th. In this way your litters will come while the hogs are in prime condition, and there will scarcely be any loss of pigs or mothers. They will come strong and healthy, while the reverse will be the rule if you breed for spring farrowing—if you have large sows you can let the sows make their nest where they will and they will usually have no trouble. But if the range is limited or if the sows are inclined to eat each other's pigs, then each sow should be shut up by herself at farrowing time and kept as long as it seems necessary. I sometimes keep them up for six weeks. By this time the pigs have become independent and can eat for themselves. I would weigh the pigs at from ten to 10 weeks old, or at least supply them at all times with plenty of grain where the old hog cannot get it away from them. Put the pigs on full feed of mixed wheat and corn, if possible; have an enclosure made so the pigs can get in but the old hogs can not. Use a cow self-feeder for my pigs and prefer it to the trough. Now keep my pigs on feed all winter, at the same time letting them run at will with the old hogs. But the mothers I turn out on the stubble and alfalfa, and keep them there as long as there is a green feed to be picked up. I then winter them on alfalfa hay alone. They will have a good shape to be turned on the alfalfa pasture in the spring. Here I keep them until they are an average market, about August or September. At this time they might be given a little grain to finish them and improve the quality of the meat. But depend on alfalfa to fatten—your hogs—grain is too high. Let the alfalfa do it. It is clean and grows abundantly. Now the mothers are shipped to market and disposed of. We will go back to the pigs that I have been feeding my grain all winter. They come out plump and fat in the spring, ready to throw on alfalfa pasture. I make them live on this alone without grain. I breed the new young about June 1st for fall farrowing. I breed nothing but young sows, and have them raise one litter only and then dispose of them. I like to always have growing stock on hand; it is more profitable than keeping mature stock over. By the above method you will have your hogs fat for a summer and early fall. You will get a cheap price (the highest market for meats of all kinds. Do not try to feed 80c wheat to 50 hogs in the winter time. They will not pay for it. It is better to depend on the alfalfa to make the hog and then finish with very little grain.

But do not be stinky with the young pigs. Give them plenty of grain as soon as they will begin to eat, and keep them on feed until the alfalfa is green in the spring, then turn them out and they have the best and will do well on the change. If they get to rooting up the pasture you must get a hog tamer and cut the rooting. This will put a stop to the rooting.

If the hogs eat chickens do not sell the hogs in disgust. Shut up the chickens and keep them away from the pens. Hogs and chickens do not go well together.

Keep your fences always in repair and above all, do not go back on the hog. He will meet the necessity of your farm and bring prosperity to you and yours, if you follow the proper methods, always keeping in mind that this is an age of cheap meats. Most meat is produced on the cheapest possible plan, and you have every advantage to supply this meat at minimum cost.

FARM LIFE

will renew a woman's interest in her home, enable her to do her work more wisely and cheerfully, and will help her to keep out of the narrow roads to death. It will encourage her to read along lines pertinent to farm life, to her own advantage, and of her husband, and best of all, it will keep her young for the children.

"But," some one says, "My husband doesn't believe in such things for women." Very likely not. The farmer has for so long a time been progressing faster than his wife that he has come to think there is no room for a woman to change her methods. It is her own fault; but as there is no class of men so ready to adopt new machinery and new methods of work, so they will gladly accept their wives' efforts when her methods are proven to be helpful. There are well known labor-saving devices which ought to be in every farm kitchen, and when the housekeeper is able to prove that they will bring as great returns to the home, according to the money saved, as a new machine for field work, they will have them. Men have always shown more willingness to adopt new methods, and women are able to manage their work, so as to show the advantage of new methods, they will meet with no opposition.

If by any method the country woman can keep herself cheerful and contented on the farm, she has solved half the problem of keeping her sons and daughters with her. She is receiving more help every day in encouraging them to stay on the farm, than she could expect to receive from the state colleges, experiment stations and the press, in their recognition of farm problems and of the rewards that come to progressive farmers. Contented country women are also providing much toward filling the lack of social life, which has in the past made a country child so lonely.

Farmers have in time past made the mistake of saving every penny until the children were grown, thinking they would appreciate it more then. The results have been painful experiences for both parents and children, and the mistake is fast losing favor. Luxuries are not necessary to tempt any child, but a few dollars spent in privileges for the growing son and daughter will surely bring its reward in contentment. The social life of the lady on the farm must be looked after also—it cannot be avoided. An occasional party need not make much work nor expense, and will give the child much pleasure and profitable experience. Then, too, is there any reason why a farmer's child should not have a subscription to a magazine or some value of good book at least once a year? It may prove of more benefit to the family life than the same money invested in hogs or alfalfa.

I believe the time is coming, not many years hence, when many groups of farmers around central school houses will enjoy a lecture course every winter, and when it will not be an unheard of thing for mothers and daughters to hear a few days demonstration from a good cooking expert, occasionally in short, while the country woman will appreciate alike her duties and her privileges.

Then we may expect to see country boys and girls enjoying their home and developing into better farmers than their parents. The country woman will no longer envy her city sister, but will realize with a deep sense of gratitude her larger life and be thankful.

NO BLIZZARDS IN TWIN FALLS

EASTERN STATES ARE SWEEPED BY STORMS.

Southern Idaho Particularly Favored by the Weather Man—Electrical Display in Chicago Brings Out Many New and Novel Devices.

(From Our Special Correspondent.) CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—Weather! It is weather the world over. And each day every locality is getting up a crop of "unusual" weather. Maybe it is, but it is with us all the same. There have been days in Chicago when some of our schools had to be closed by "unusual" weather. Maybe the city kept its loop, otherwise its business district, clear from snow by a system of street cleaning not excelled by any other municipality. And this "dirty" Chicago. Its outlying districts were made comfortable by precipitation in the continual use of the snow plough, a sort of primitive affair but effective, nevertheless. In less than 30 hours after the first onslaught by Old Boreas the south insisted upon sending us a consignment of weather and temperature combined, that summer clothing took the form of winter garb. The south robbed itself, for down in Dixie, where we of the north ache to go to escape the ravage of winter weather, they poured their rain again, and then took heart of grace and kept it going with a chill in the atmosphere that beat the life out of the city.

Washington, the capital city, has been a sea of slush and the pedestrians waded ankle deep; Boston, artistic in design, founded around like conditions for several days, while the streets were so coated with ice that broken limbs were reported from falls on slippery pavements daily. Other portions of California and other western states have had the "unusual" in weather. Snowstorms, rainstorms, the like of which had never been known before, impeded travel and caused much loss of life. And Italy, sunny Italy; Italy of the poets and painters, has been such a "dramatic" and "dramatic" wreck and desolation of earthquake swept the rains and the wind, followed by a drifting snow, such as Messenia had never known before. Lucky Twin Falls.

Weather? Well, of what have you to complain in the Twin Falls country? True, a bit of the "unusual" had to be dropped in your midst, just as it is in the case of the "unusual" plus does not quite forget the arid regions. Was he jealous, think you, of your own rain-making? Of the capabilities of these wonderfully built canals, and the carrying capacity of those laughing, merry laterals and ditches? Who knows? But there came something, perhaps, that the Indian had never known in that part of the country. Were you prepared with umbrellas, rubbers, waterproof coats and the like? Or were you in the same category as the foolish virgins? Unprepared. It is all a lesson in life, in the art of living—we must be prepared for the "unusual." But the thirty earth in your part of the country, furnished as it has been for years for want of a good hard drink, must have absorbed it all as quickly almost as it rained down, while the ditch remains a power for the future and a blessing that cannot be too highly priced.

An article Chicago in the thralls of the "worst ever." It came from two directions in the northwest, hesitated at our threshold and then caught it out as in which was the right of way, with the result that we have a wild wind, a swirling snow and a tendency to anything in the nature of an "unusual."

Chicago has outdone itself in its electrical display at the Coliseum, which has been there for the past two weeks and is the largest of the roof of this immense auditorium was so arranged by the assistance of electricity as to represent the starry firmament of the heavens. The planets twinkled the stars, while the planets remained in their fixed orbits, dignified and observant of what this noisy city was endeavoring to accomplish in the scientific field, and which is to redound to his own credit. If the inhabitants of the Twin Falls country could have wandered around this exhibition, what a world of suggestion it might offer in the way of labor saving devices and domestic comforts. When washing can be done by electricity while the housewife sits calmly with her knitting, sewing or reading. To see the soap-suds coming from the vents in the cylinder in which the garments are being freed from dirt, without the interminable rubbing process, is an inspiration. "Why, it'd just as soon," remarked a woman at my elbow, "as watch that thing spewing out the suds." But were we not just as opposed to the sewing machine and other labor saving devices in the past? Of course we were. Electricity is with us. It has come to stay, and you in the Twin Falls country are beginning the settlement of the new country with all the benefits of advanced thought along scientific lines. By a simple attachment the iron is heated and the garments are pressed more evenly than by the old method. The apparatus for cooking shows wonderful developments. The switch can be so regulated as to produce a slow, moderate or quick heat, while the utensils, containing as many of them as could be packed into the economy as well as to the best hygienic principles in the preparation of food, should be the delight of all good housewives.

Not the least interesting of the uses of electricity on the farm was the exhibition of an electric hatching machine, by means of which chickens came from the shell in view of the speculators. There was also a group of four days old and eight days old youngsters of the feather. The latter were scratching about lively among some alfalfa that had been cut up and spread over the stand. "Wonder do they miss having mother?" asked a child at my elbow. Should hardly think they did as they seemed to be doing a lively business of scratching on their own account and taking a tremendous fund of amusement out of it.

When one thinks of all the power you have in that Twin Falls country it does not take a prophet's soul to predict that in less than ten years everything that can be accomplished by the aid of electricity, both in your commercial and domestic life, on farm and ranch, will be.
