Commissioners Hart and Kartzke Meet County Board.

COST OF BRIDGE AT FALLS IS FOUND TO BE LOW:

Lincoln County Men Think Their Constituents Will Not Vote Bonds for Bridges.

Commissioners Hart and Kartzke of Lincoln county arrived in this city Tuesday and together with the Twin Falls county commissioners, met immediately for the sites of the two bridges proposed to connect the two counties across the Snake river. Shoshone falls was first visited and a careful investigation of the rock formation showed that the bridge could be put in for a much smaller sum than the $15,000 first estimated. The lower cost being due to the small amount of artificial footings needed.

HANSEN GIVEN A STRONG BANK

Ranchers of That Vicinity Heavily Interested.

C. B. WILFLEY ELECTED PRESIDENT OF NEW INSTITUTION

New Bank Capitalized at $25,000, Is Endorsed by Prominent Hansen Boosters.

Hansen, Idaho, Jan. 25, 1910. The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Hansen was held at the hotel room here on Saturday, January 22, 1910, all the subscribed stock, $15,000 of the authorized capital of $25,000, being present. Organization was perfected and the following officers and directors elected: President, C. B. Wilfley of Hansen and Twin Falls; vice president, Honorable Lawrence Hansen of Rock Creek; cashier, M. B. Provost; directors, Hon. Lawrence Hansen, C. B. Wilfley, Christian Peterson, J. H. Hinton, F. Rauch.

A pleasant incident of this first annual meeting was a dinner given by the bank management to shareholders and invited friends and relatives. The new bank starts out under most favorable auspices, meeting the need that has long existed in Hansen for such an institution, and finding ready subscribers for its shares when the proposition was first put on foot. The success of the management is such as to command the confidence of those who will become patrons of the bank; and the well-known bank resources of the benefit of his wide business connection throughout this state and elsewhere.

Mr. Wilfley is well and favorably known in Twin Falls, where he has been active in financial connections for some time. He will give his active personal attention to the management of the Hansen bank, giving it the benefit of his wide business connection throughout this state and elsewhere.

Mr. Provost, the cashier actually in charge of the new bank, is a native of Nebraska, where he began his business career, later being connected with a banking firm in Wyoming, coming to the Twin Falls tract, where he is actively identified with its present and future by investing in real estate here and elsewhere. Mr. Provost is a young man of great energy and capacity, and has back of him an enviable record in the business world. He has not yet already taken up their residence in Hansen and are already actively working for the progress of the community.

WELSH CHURCH.

Large Number of Citizens Plan Organization.

Last Sunday our Welsh friends in this city met together in the Union hall, and organized a Welsh church. They all agreed to meet on fifty-five, all told, but look to the arrival of a large number from the east in the course of a few weeks. The Rev. R. H. Owen, pastor of the Baptist church, will be in charge of the church temporarily. On the first of March they will meet at the "David's Day" and are arranging for a banquet.

MANY RUSHING FOR JARBIDGE.

First Hotel Purchased for Camp—Caravans Taken in Supplies.

"Do you know Twin Falls is about as lively a place as there is anywhere in the country just now?" said W. A. Stevens of San Francisco at the Coliseum today. He just arrived from the Jarbridge-Twin Falls country. "Twin Falls is full and overflowing with strangers. They are rushing in there from the northwest, now, Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, and Spokane, being well represented. In order to get a bed you must telegraph ahead several days. I would advise Twin Falls today has a population of 6,000 people, by spring it will be 10,000. I was offered a few days ago at a certain figure I hesitated, and before I had hardly time to turn round my opportunity was gone, for the price had jumped 50 per cent. Real estate is rushing up there now."

"The members of the new stock exchange are a lively bunch of fellows. They are full of the deep snows and the weather they are in a strong outfit and sent it off down the country to fit up all the bad places in the Twin Falls-Twin Falls and Jarbridge. They intend to make Twin Falls the only route and it looks as though they will accomplish their end."

"A caravan of a crew of hardy strike at Jarbridge. This is on their property near Hanker Hill. And now they are supplying the camp. It is worth. While I was in Twin Falls they sent south an outfit that strung along the road so far that it looked like a regular caravan. It consisted of two three-horse teams, and one two-horse team, containing 14 animals in all. This outfit contained sufficient equipment to outfit a party of 20 men for a shaft at least 200 feet. They get into a depth they should get into values that will stir the camp again."

"Send First Hotel." The first hotel for Jarbridge was purchased in Salt Lake Wednesday and will be ready to open in a few days. It is on a short line to Twin Falls, and Oregon Work It will be giving over the deep snow from there on its 10-mile trip by the route to Jarbridge. The machinery was purchased by C. O. Winter and will be used on the Escalator property, known in the country as "Ferguson place."

This has been bonded and loaned by Mr. Winter and associates. But the labor of getting this heavy machinery to Jarbridge is no small matter. Even the best route into the camp covers two miles and a piece of road. These places are at Wilkins canyon and Jack creek. Here the men in charge of the hotel will have to adopt some such tactics as did Napoleon in his celebrated scaling of the Alps. The men will have to block-and-tackle. First they must draw the machinery up the precipitous side of the canyon, and having gained the summit they use the block-and-tackle method to lower it down on the opposite side of the declivity. This will have to be done at both places have been passed, the progress to the Escalator property is a comparatively easy matter. Work on this property is now being pushed vigorously, and it is thought that by the time the hotel reaches the camp the shaft will have gained such depth that the wireless now in use may be discarded.—Desert Evening News.

LOCAL OPTION LAWS UPHOLD

Supreme Court Decides in Favor of "Drys."

OTHER ISSUES MUST COME UP LATER.

Opinion Does Not Discuss Questions Involving Provisions for Enforcement of Statute.

OPINION IN BRIEF.

The local option statute enacted by the Tenth session of the legislature is held to be a valid law by the supreme court. No person in the state of Idaho has a vested right to engage in the sale of intoxicating liquor and the regulation, control and prohibition of the traffic is a proper exercise of the police power.

The law is not uncertain or ambiguous. Where there is no specific provision for matters pertaining to elections and registration, the general election laws of the state apply. Registration commences on the first Saturday after notice for the special election is given and continues up until and including the Saturday next preceding the election. The court holds that the different sections of the statute governing its enforcement and the methods of carrying out the will of the people are independent and separate provisions, and in no way govern or control the method provided by the legislature for the submission of the question to the electors. Under this ruling, the dissenting opinion is limited to matters pertaining to provision for elections. Issues raised as to provision for the enforcement of the law are not considered.

An entire act will not be declared void or unconstitutional by reason of the fact that a section may be unconstitutional and void, the latter is distinct and separable from the remaining provisions.

The supreme court of the state handed down an opinion yesterday upholding the constitutionality of the local option law enacted by the Tenth session of the legislature. The act which 14 of the 23 counties of the state have voted prohibition. The court holds the machinery for the special election provided for by the act in its provisions for the enforcement of the statute in carrying out the will of the people. Should any of these be found void or unconstitutional, the act in its entirety, it is asserted, would not be affected. The opinion is a distinct victory for the local option forces.

DEMONSTRATION ATTRACTS CROWD

Special Train of Oregon Short Line in Tuesday.

EXPERTS ON FARM PRODUCTS HAVE LARGE AUDIENCE.

Interested Ranchers Fill Three Caches and Listen to Valuable Advice.

The Oregon Short Line special demonstration train arrived in Twin Falls noon Tuesday and was here for two hours while the agricultural experts delivered brief practical demonstration lectures on potato types and their culture, and on proper cultivation of the grasses most important to this section. In the baggage car of the train a number of first class samples of potatoes and of up-to-date machinery for the ranch.

The discussion on potato types, selection of seed and growing was delivered by H. L. Edgerton, of Carbonide, Colton, who is a specialist in the Twin Falls Milling & Elevator company, and A. E. Egan brought out the best varieties of potatoes for the general market and for hotel consumption. J. E. Wing brought to this section from Pennsylvania as the acknowledged expert of instructors on alfalfa, clover and soil culture, proved most interesting and gave a great deal of valuable advice on the value of the two crops for soil development. The demonstration on orchard heating by smudging given by Messrs. Manly and Hamilton, Grand Junction, Colo., came in for a great deal of attention by the fruit raisers.

HALLEY'S COMET VISIBLE.

Heavily Observed by Large Number of Citizens.

The long looked for Halley's comet which has caused so much comment here, was visible for a long time through the telescopes at the various observatories, was plainly visible last night between 6:30 and 7:30. The comet, which has been searched for the past three months by the citizens of this city, owing to erroneous reports received from the west, was visible low in the western sky last evening and passed from view below the horizon about 7:30. The visitant from the west of the evening star, which is distinct to the naked eye, with the head of the comet pointing toward the west of the evening star. As the comet approaches nearer the earth it will prove brighter and reach a higher point in the sky than at present.

The comet is the heavens for about twice hours and can also be seen in the northeastern sky at an hour before the morning with the head pointing upward and the tail extending to the horizon. This information the editor cannot confirm from the observatory at the University of Washington home some hours earlier than the notorious comet's slated appearance, and for the sake of his informant's reputation, no name will be mentioned.

The groom is a carpenter in the employ of M. H. Papp & Co. and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

MORE EXCITEMENT OVER JARBIDGE

Recent Arrivals From Oregon Camp are Most Enthusiastic.

PROMINENT COLORADO ASSAYER AND CHEMIST ARRIVES.

W. D. Green, I.P.M. Chemist for the Great Western Sugar Co. at Brush, Colo., Starts to Jarbridge Monday.

W. D. Green, head chemist for the Great Western Sugar Co. at Brush, Colo., arrived Friday to investigate the great gold strikes at Jarbridge. After talking with several representatives from Jarbridge, and after careful examination of their ore samples the first of the excellent Western Sugar Co. men and will put into Jarbridge one of the best assay laboratories in this part of the country. "Should Jarbridge prove to be the camp its friends expect, Mr. Green and the company he represents will probably build large sampling works at Jarbridge. Ed Bonane arrived Wednesday from the new gold camp, where he was one of the earliest arrivals after the first strike was made. Mr. Bonane is a partner of Mr. Winkler, who was in Twin Falls last week, and the two own some of the best properties in the district. When asked concerning the actual values and quantities of the ore at Jarbridge, Mr. Bonane said: "This camp has the best surface showing of any camp ever discovered in Nevada. Its natural advantages in the way of a plentiful supply of wood, and the pure water, are remarkable. On other camps, the water is so bad that the fact that a majority of the property owners are having their claims surveyed rather than having it done, is being done before the surveying would be necessary."

"When I left the camp there was not much more to be done. The camp leaves there is anxious to get back immediately." E. J. Roberts and C. H. Lamb arrived Wednesday from the Jarbridge camp. Both Messrs. Roberts and Lamb are experienced mining men, the former from Salt Lake City and the latter from Los Angeles. They expect to give the camp a thorough investigation, and if it is a good camp they will invest, if not, they will leave the property to C. C. Weir. Mr. Weir arrived the first of the week from Salt Lake City and will leave tomorrow for Jarbridge. Mr. Weir says that the Jarbridge section some years ago and stated that he would not go out there at this time if he did not believe there was something there. The Jarbridge camp is located on Salt Lake City, Mr. Weir said that there were hundreds of men getting prepared there for a strike. He said that Jarbridge was partly out of W. B. Hong, Sam Crismore, M. H. Wright and W. M. Tites left this morning for Jarbridge with the equipment of any new camp he had seen since Goldfield was discovered.

LESSON THREE.

Pronunciation.

In Lesson One we learned that the vowels, a, e, i, o, and u, are pronounced as follows:
A like a in "father."
E like e in "made."
I like e in "me."
O like o in "go."
U like oo in "too."
All other letters are pronounced as in English with the following exceptions:

G like "ga."
G like g in "go."
H like h in "home."
S like s in "so."
CH like ch in "church."
SH like sh in "shoe."
QU like qu in "queen."

The Infinitive.

The infinitive form of the verb is always indicated in English by the presence of the word "to": as, "to run," "to learn," etc. In the International Language the infinitive ends in AR, as "kuran" (to run), "lernar" (to learn), etc. In the infinitive form, the accent is always on the ending AR; in all other words the accent is on the next to the last syllable.

When one verb follows another, the second verb must have the infinitive ending; as "I have to go." "Me desva frar;" "I learned to speak the International Language;" "Me lernar parolar in Internaciona lingo."

Some Laws of the Kingdom. Matt. 5:17-26, 38-48.

Golden Text. Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. Matt. 5:48.

Verses 17-20.—In what sense did Jesus fulfill "the law and the prophets?" How many persons can you recall from the scriptures or otherwise who did the perfect will of God, other than Jesus?

There are those who teach that it is impossible for any man to keep all the commandments of God, what reason is there to suppose that these are among the number whom Jesus calls, "the least in kingdom of heaven?"

What was the "righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees?"

What are the reasons which lead us to believe, that all God's commandments are reasonable, and keepable by all Christians, and that those who do not keep them are verily culpable?

Verses 21, 22.—Recall the prominent outward sins, and then say if any, or all of them, can be committed in God's sight, without the culmination or outward act being committed?

Why is a man who, out of an angry revengeful heart, calls his brother in the worst of suffering, in danger of suffering himself that to which he would consign another?

Verses 23-25.—Why cannot a man truly worship God, or enjoy the love and favor of God, while he has bitterness in his heart to his brother?

According to the teaching of Jesus, what is our duty toward a person who is angry with us, either with or without cause?

Verses 28-31.—Are these precepts to be taken literally and if not, then what do they mean?

See Ex. 21:24-25, Lev. 24:20, Deut. 19:21, and say if these laws are in harmony with the teaching of Jesus.

Are these precepts of Jesus given as rules of conduct, or as underlying principles, and what is the difference in the two cases?

Can you mention supposed cases, where it would be wise to literally carry out these precepts of Jesus, and other cases where it would violate the spirit of Jesus' teaching to do so?

What motives would compel a child of God to literally carry out these precepts of Jesus, when, and as often as, the Holy Spirit should indicate?

Verses 32.—What attitude should the Christian always take, in the matter of giving or loaning money to those in need?

Verses 33-34.—What are the advantages of loving our enemies, and the disadvantages of hating them?

What does it imply, practically, to love our enemies, and it is possible of performance by every Christian?

Verses 35.—Why does God treat the evil as well as he does the good, in the matter of sunshine and rain, and the similar common blessings of life?

Verses 36-37.—Which gets the greater good out of life and why, the generous and forgiving, or harsh and those that render evil for evil?

Verses 38.—What does Jesus mean by this commandment, to be perfect as God is perfect?

WINTER CARE OF EWES.

Animals Usually Neglected, Especially at First Cold Spell.

No stock is quite so generally neglected at the beginning of winter as the breeding ewes. Because they are able to pick close and fill up, many farmers think they are doing well and leave them out to subsist on the scanty, nutritious herbage, without shelter or other care or attention.

It often takes weeks of the best care and feed to repair the damage of a single heavy cold, and that reaches the fleece to the skin. This is especially true if the rain is followed by freezing weather and high wind, and these are the conditions most likely to follow the rains of early winter.

The wind blowing over the saturated heavy must greatly reduce the temperature of the body, and the lost heat and energy must be counteracted by the free use of carbonaceous food or the carbohydrate class of feeds which will surely become greatly depleted.

I know that it is possible to winter sheep on the range almost without shelter. But it can only be done on an ample range that has a heavy growth of ungrazed grass at the beginning of winter. Even then I think the sheep would be better off to a shelter in which they could come during bad storms.

Some farmers withhold hay from their ewes at the beginning of winter, but they make a mistake in doing so. The sheep need a little hay at this time to supplement the frost-damaged nutritious grass. My own flock of seventy-five ewes have a well-lit yard and ample shed, where they come every night. Here they are given a light feed of corn and oats, and they always find a little clover hay in their racks. In case of very bad snows they are shut up in the shed; usually they are allowed to run in and out at will.

For a range they have twenty-six acres of meadow that will be plowed for corn next spring, and ten acres of rape, on which there is still a good deal of feed. Here they will run every pleasant day, and will practically get their (fleece) It will keep them till buried under deep snow, probably; but I shall make sure of their thirty cents worth of light daily ration of grain and hay before spoken of. It is much easier to keep them in condition than to bring them up when once they have begun to run down.

Many farmers feed no grain until well toward spring. This is practical only with small flocks. Flocks of considerable size are able to begin to run down toward spring, then grain will start them thriving, and they also start the wool, giving them a ragged, unkempt appearance, and make a weak staple of wool, thus reducing its value. For winter care of the breeding ewes, there is no more pleasant day is of the greatest importance. If I have no other available place I turn them out on the corn stubble. They wander back and forth over the corn field, picking up the thimbles from the stubble, and while they get no great feeding value, they do get a great deal of exercise, and the exercise gives strength and health so essential at the time of weaning.

Lambs from ewes that have all winter had ample opportunity for exercise are usually stronger at birth, and better able to take care of themselves, an advantage that every experienced flock master fully realizes. —E. P. S. Missouri, in Farm Progress.

ON GROUND EARLY.

Intentions Are Growing More Encouraging.

C. G. Winter came in from Jarbidge mining camp, 100 miles to the southwest of Twin Falls on Wednesday, recently in the Salt Lake Territory, having made the journey in two days, and brought most enthusiastic reports of the conditions in the newly-discovered gold region. He said that despite the extreme cold prevailing in the camp, as well as along the route, he passed twenty-two men pushing through the snowdrifts over the trail, and that freight for the district is piled up high at the Wilkins ranch sixteen miles west of the camp. The men, he said, have to be made from wagons to pack trails. "The operations in the camp were suspended but a few days after the first of the snow, but they are going on," because of the big snowstorm; but as soon as the snow packed sufficiently the prospectors were going over the hills and making headway. News has been among the principal work. There are some of the properties, however, on which the development is not so far advanced, and the old results in every instance, and everybody in the district now admits that it is not a question as to whether the camp "makes good" or not, but how great is it going to be.

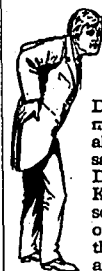

Winter owns a ranch within ten miles of the recently discovered uranium, together with his brother, and was among the first to respond to the announcement that the uranium had been located. He has been in the district for many years, and has been furnishing for many years the placer gold emanating from the region, and enjoys the reputation in northern Nevada, as well as in southern Idaho, of being absolutely a reliable man and inclined to be extremely conservative on mining matters, and he declares that the camp is positively the biggest thing ever found in the history of American gold discoveries.

Winter has secured a number of opinions on various properties within the last three weeks, since he was here, and he has organized the Twin Falls-Jarbidge Mining and Development company, composed of some of the principal business men of this section, and has taken for his headquarters during this trip into the district the Escallon group of claims, for $250,000. It is showing being regarded as the best property for copper in the Bourne group. The property shows a dyke that stands high above the surface similar to the Bourne property, and it is well shown above the surface to the naked eye, in addition to the tellurium sands, on which assays only will disclose the true values.

PUSHINGS LAMBS FORWARD.

Young Should Be taken From Ewp At Least In November.

If the ewes are desired to lamb early in the year the lambs should not be permitted to run with them after November. And it is very desirable to have the ewes drop their lambs early, as it makes it possible to wean the lambs in time to give the ewes a rest to make their growth. They go through the winter in good condition, and all the next season is brought about again a little earlier.

It will be necessary to give the lambs a little grain when they are separated from the ewes, which is best in the form of finely ground meal. This is wholly used by the lambs, and none of it is wasted for want of full digestion. There is no more satisfactory way to push lambs forward on the next than to put the ewes on good feed, and so supply the lambs with plenty of milk of the best quality.

To feed the ewes well when they are nursing the lambs adds fully a month to their growth, and thus puts them forward for a repetition of the same advance the year following. To one who has not tried this constant pushing of the lambs will be disappointed with the results. It easily adds a dollar to the value of each lamb, and this is of itself a very considerable bonus on the ewe's income from a flock.

Not long since I was in conversation with an old farmer who said that he especially disliked early lambs for the reason that they begin to eat too soon, making it necessary to feed them before the early spring grass is ready. While this is true, it is also a fact that one ounce of meal or grain is worth more than a full pound of grass, and in order to procure the best results it is necessary to push ahead all the lambs, and keep them growing, increasing naturally as the animal grows older.

It should be remembered that the last pound of increase in an animal will cost more than twice as much as the first. This rule will apply to all kinds and conditions of animals, but most of all lambs, and sheep after them.

Feeding is an art that must be learned by practice; it may be studied very profitably by reading the experience of others; and so one will know what to do and what to avoid in his own practice. It is a great mistake to think that the kind of experience that is not worth the time spent; it is quite otherwise. It is at the greatest value, because one learns what to avoid and what to follow.
In all my experience I find at the end that my greatest successes have been due to the avoiding of mistakes, by careful study of the experience of others, who honestly tell us of these things. What we learn through our own mistakes is very costly wisdom, but what we learn from others costs us nothing. It is therefore, to our great advantage to closely study good agricultural papers, such as Farm Progress, as the experience of others contained therein will be of much value to us.—W. H. U., Illinois.

The decision of the supreme court in sustaining the local option bill is an outlook for victory for the temperance forces; who because of the many points in doubt concerning the validity of the bill, thought the victory gained in the last election would be lost through the contest brought by the wets and which has just been decided by the highest court of the state.

Paul Clagstone, speaker of the last house, was in this city for a short time in the interest of the Country Life association, which is doing a great deal for the uplifting of the condition on the farm. Mr. Clagstone has been favorably mentioned as a candidate for governor, and is a candidate not to be lightly regarded because of his progressive ideas in politics which were brought out in the last legislature as leader of the party in the lower house. If Mr. Clagstone sheds his castor into the ring there will be some lively trouble for his opponents.

The recent boycott on the meat trust which threatens to become a national movement, is only the beginning of an organized warfare on the various trusts of the country by the consumers who are hit the hardest by the unprecedented rise in prices. The action of congress in the recent tariff law is given as the primary cause of the outburst first manifested against the butchers. Whether the tariff can be wholly blamed for the condition or not is a mooted question, but it is not the only cause of the rise in the cost of living. One factor which has caused the rise in the price of farm products is the segregation of the bulk of the population in the big cities and the consequent lowering of the wages due to surplus laborers. On the other hand the farms of the east are losing their productivity and are fast losing their tenants owing to that unproductive situation. While the west is filling up with ranchers yet the increase in the western products does not begin to keep pace with the growth in population and the increased demand for the fruits of the soil.

ITS OWN OFFERING.

Some of the leading Republicans are delving into public opinion to see if they can find a semblance of a solid foundation on which to base their desire to call a convention prior to the direct primary election to recommend nominees. Fortunately the sentiment they find is anything but favorable to their wish. But what if they did find enough favorable sentiment to justify them in calling such a convention? What sort of an ass would they make of the Republican party?

Here is a party that has recognized the demands of the people for a direct primary law. Its legislators framed, passed and placed the party's stamp of approval upon it. Then before it has been tried even once one of the would-be leaders would force the party into the embarrassing position of refusing to recognize its own offering.

Undoubtedly the Idaho law is not free from undesirable provisions, but without the law appears to be a good one. But good or bad, it is the creation of the Republican party and the Republican party should not be the first to spurn it.—Payette Independent.

didate does not have to consult, the party boss. Besides this the boss or the machine cannot keep out stronger candidates for the sake of helping some member of the machine, and in this way the usual political trading cannot make or unmake the candidate. As can easily be seen the direct primary in its intent was to get the actual results from the people and for this reason the politicians all over this state are in favor of doing most anything to make results certain before the primary election approaches. The suggestion convention would aid in such move by helping to stifle any candidates outside of the machine from even attempting to run. For this reason the Times deems the suggestion convention as only an evasion of the spirit of the direct primary. If the law is weak the coming campaign will bring out the weaknesses and the defects can be remedied. At any rate the law is entitled to a fair trial.

It is hard to criticize men in the profession from the viewpoint of a private citizen and try to do justice to all concerned, but The Times in bringing out the laxity of the quarantine regulations in this city is going to let the blame fall where it will. During the past two weeks three cases of scarlet fever and one of small pox have broken out to spread disease and perhaps death to the citizens of this city. Public safety demands that in every case the victims of the disease and those in the same house with them be promptly quarantined in order to keep those affected from the rest of the city. Such quarantine may be disagreeable in the extreme, and may work a great hardship, but it is nevertheless just and necessary. And the law does not stop at the quarantine of the victims when the nature of the disease is fully known, but goes farther and commands each physician to quarantine upon the slightest suspicion that the case is contagious and to properly warn the inmates of the house to stay inside until it is so decided. After careful investigation of the conditions here The Times is convinced that in every case proper precautions were not taken by the physicians when the disease was in its first stages. By such action a tardy quarantine has permitted people exposed to the disease to mingle with the citizens of this city and expose other. The blame cannot be laid upon the people quarantined if they are not told what the disease is and what should be done. But this excuse cannot be made for the doctors, who by their professional education, should be able to give the public better and quicker results in their diagnosis. They at least should place cases in doubt during the present prospect of contagion under strict quarantine. The wishes and desires of their various patients should not have weight against the welfare of the general public.

PINCHOT, THE IDEALIST.

The president has dismissed the chief forester, Gifford Pinchot, from the public service, says The Public. The reason—Pinchot appealed to the country over the president's head in the Alaska coal land cases, his appeal taking the form of a letter to Senator Dooliver which was read in the senate. It was a case of insubordination, if insubordination be stringently construed; for there is a Taft-made rule that things must not be said publicly or given out to the press by government department employes, with reference to the affairs of the departments, until they have been censored by the head of the department. Pinchot had talked with Secretary Wilson about the letter, and the secretary had not told him not to send it. On the other hand, he had not given permission for its sending; and he had "advised" against it. Nevertheless, Pinchot sent the letter—which was a justification of the whole anti-Ballinger record of the forest service, and of Glavis the land office inspector who had been discharged for too great zeal against the Cunningham coal claims, by the president himself. Glavis appealed to Taft over Ballinger's head, and was fired by wire by Taft. Pinchot appealed to the people over the president's head, and was fired with almost telegraphic suddenness by the same august Chief Magistrate.

Who are these men who risked the penalty of dismissal in these Cunningham cases? What are their motives? Are they striving? Are the men themselves striving for publicity? Are they men run mad? Are they great and unselfish souls sorely mistaken? Or are they unselfish patriots striving against odds to prevent the looting of the public domain? Passing by Mr. Glavis, whose acts cannot be explained on any basis of selfishness, let us consider this man Pinchot. He is rich and cultured. He is able—that is admitted. No one—not even the New York Sun—doubts his integrity. He created the profession of forestry in this country. He is a man of sense in practical ways; for his department is the model of all the government service in business methods. Loving faith that the earth belongs to the race, through forestry. He has adopted the faith that the earth belongs to the race, and that we of the present hold it only in usufruct for the race. He has never been a lime-lighter nor a grandstander, so it must have taken the strongest considerations to induce him to take the center of the stage now. He was for years about all there was of the American Forestry Association, and is said to have paid the expenses of the White House conference of governors out of his own pocket. He wanted a good secretary two years ago, and the man he wanted was able to command twice what the government was authorized to pay; Pinchot paid the difference out of his own pocket, that the forest service and the nation might be well served. All the time he was keeping in the background. He whispered "Conservation" into Roosevelt's ears, and Roosevelt shouted it to the world. Pinchot wanted nothing except to save the public domain and to see the forests in the way of restoration. It is a religion with him. Fitted for a cabinet position, he is said to have declined it because he could do more good in the forest service. Of all men in the public service, Gifford Pinchot has seemed to follow the highest ideals, and been guided by the purest motives.

Such is the man who has suddenly violated the letter of official propriety, and sent out to the people the message that the administration is allowing the nation to be robbed of billions of dollars' worth of coal. No one can doubt that in Pinchot's mind the alternative before him was violation of his official instructions or treason to the interests of the people. Is he, the trained public man, versed in all the tortuosities of Washington bureaucracy, likely to have been mistaken about this? Is he likely to have been so thoroughly convinced of the sinister nature of the Ballinger administration, unless something was really wrong? Would Pinchot have thus carried this fight on from month to month against the president himself, if he had not been sure of his ground? Everyone must hope to see Ballinger and Taft—for the one cannot be embraced now without the other being tainted—execrated. Just now, however, they stand accused as much by the weight of the integrity and ability of Pinchot as by the known facts, of acts which will stand a lot of excupulation. However, the matter may turn out, Pinchot will be credited with the sacrifice of a position of great power for the sake of an ideal—an act of a sort too seldom seen in this age. And along with Pinchot stands Glavis. This is not a heretic age, perhaps, but in both these men, the nation will see much of heroism.—Doise Citizen.

HANSEN GIVEN A STRONG BANK.

Rock Creek, having more recently established a business of the nature of the town of Hansen and now conducting both enterprises under the name of John F. Hansen & Son.

Professor John S. Hinton, formerly a capable educator, is now an extensive land owner and enterprising rancher living near to Hansen. Hinton was one of the earliest to take land when the great Twin Falls South Side tract was opened, and since then has been actively at work in purchasing the progress of his community.

Mr. T. J. Ranch came to Twin Falls county before the opening and has since been active in the interest of the county and Hansen. Mr. Ranch was the original locator of the land that is now Hansen townsite; was the first postmaster of the village, owns the property here and in the city of Twin Falls and owns a fine ranch of 160 acres immediately adjoining the town of Hansen.

Christian Peterson is a wealthy rancher and for many years and at present, resident at Rock Creek. He is a splendid type of citizen, quiet, unostentatious, honorable in every act. The new bank is fortunate in having actively connected with it and its management meet as Mr. Peterson and the others who constitute its board and official directory.

George W. Shoemaker, who went from Hansen to the new Jarbridge mining camp six weeks ago, returned last Sunday by way of Boise for a brief stay to consult with tools and supplies preparatory to beginning real development work on the group of fifteen claims he located on Rock creek, a tributary of Jarbridge creek, and some three miles southward and parallel to the Bourne and other earlier locations. Mr. Shoemaker is optimistic over the prospects of the new mining district, but seems to convey the idea that the camp will be one of vast bodies of paying ores, rather than the earlier claims of fabulously rich lodes, and as his experience in other camps gives him a chance to compare it with the ores and characteristics of other districts, his conservatism lends probability to his judgment.

Hansen still has its depot. The rumor that the depot had been removed and that no agent of the railroad would be installed was, as rumor usually is, false. The depot will probably be here until other districts are holes in the ground again—but we may not have an agent there until that time.

Humanities rejoice! A plentiful supply of coal has been permitted to divert to the village. This gives us courage to hope that the village will need to resort to the excellent bulk team method of quick and certain freightling in of goods.

A man can be carried with 150 pounds of baggage by going on this stage to Jarbridge and staying at the hotel. We note that congress is again wrestling with the problem of deficit in the postal service. The president has recommended that it be made up by increased rate of postage on fourth class matter, which the public will pay by increased rates of mail reading matter sent through the mails. No hint is dropped, however, of decreasing the pay of railroads for carrying the mails, although Uncle Sam now pays them more than all other countries of the world combined, pay for the same service.

NEWS ITEMS OF JARBIDGE

Inrush of Prospectors Begins Before Roads are Broken.

TIMES' SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
WRITES OF GREAT CAMP.

Several Outfits Going In With Stocks of Groceries, Clothing and Mining Supplies.

Jarbidge, Nev., Jan. 20, 1910. Twin Falls Times, Twin Falls, Idn. After spending a month in the camp, S. S. Smith of the Millit store of Twin Falls, left for his home. He has prospected over the district as extensively as can be done at this season of the year and succeeded in getting four claims that have a good showing of ore on each one of them. He could have done a great deal of prospecting had he seen fit, but he did not consider them profitable. The McCallister party, of which he was a member, expects to return in about a month, after they have performed the location work upon the claims.

With the melting of the snow, slides are becoming rather annoying, especially in the high timbered areas of the camp. No one has been hurt as yet, but some have had a very close escape. It will be best to be cautious in this matter.

A board of arbitration has been established by the camp for the settling of many of the disputes that may arise concerning locations.

W. A. Whice has an application signed by most of the men here, asking for the establishment of a post office here and himself as postmaster. He will be held for the post office and it should be established at once. George Walters carries the mail in from Three Creek once each week with his pack train. He received $60 a month, which is contributed by those who wish to have their mail. But the mail matter is growing so large that other arrangements must be made in time.

There is a report in camp that lumber is now on the way to the camp for the construction of bridges along the route from Twin Falls. Now is the time to get busy as the streams are already beginning to flow with the melting snow and soon it will be impossible to get across.

All along the route the farm houses are busy making care of the invading stock feeder, but the busiest place is the Hamilton Cafe at Three Creek and Logan's restaurant and lodging house at Wilkinson Island. The cluster of four claims that has therefore been the humble ranch house of Jerome Hestley has been crowded to its limit during the past week. The miners and the boys have built their tents in the sleeping apartments, where the hardened traveler can throw his "mud-sack" and not complain of a close room.

Henry Price is now running a close room from Bull to the Island every day, carrying from two to a half dozen men on each trip. The trip takes a day and a half. His charges for this trip are $8.00, with 20 pounds of baggage free and three cents a pound for the baggage above that amount.

Jas. Cameron and H. E. Dodd had experiences along the trail which wile them up out of their sleep in a sweat. But they are brave boys and will return to the camp after arranging for their new undertakings. Cameron took into the mercantile store, restaurant and lodging house at the junction business. It is the younger men that is making the camp. There are not very few old men and they are young with enthusiasm.

Tom Higley went to Twin Falls for supplies for his Three Creek store. He has been doing a big business the last month and being an old miner he knows just what is needed in the new camp.

At the Island there has been as many as ten wagon loads of outfits waiting for packing into the camp at one time, but the pack trains have been able to take it to the mines, though the trail is hard. Their charges are five cents a pound for freight and five dollars a saddle horse.

The snow has been melting very fast and in day or two the roads are going to be muddy. No one has suffered with the snow as yet, and while the snow is on the ground seems to be the best time to get to the "diggings." Little prospecting is now being done, but everybody seems to be busy on location work, and getting logs in shape for log cabins. Within a week or two the principal companies are going to put up a large frame camp. If the weather remains satisfactory, but this has been the first real sunny day for a long time.

Mr. H. Carr and H. E. Carr came in from Twin Falls with a large outfit and prepared to stay.

Mr. J. S. Kimmel, W. E. Brennan and W. Bright are the last arrivals to date. There has been an average increase of population of about ten per cent. This has led to the question that the ore is here and that there is going to be a big boom in the spring. In fact, the rush is now on, and such an increase in population is going to be some fun. And now is the time to come.

Nevada has the largest representation of any state except Idaho. Among the Nevada boosters are some of the best promoters of Goldfield and Nevada and represent some large interests. Though there has been little prospecting during the past month, there is not one dissatisfied man.

George W. Bhoemker has just left Jarbidge for Twin Falls. He will return immediately and put up a log cabin on his claims four and a half miles above the townsite, in his month's stay he has been able to pick up a number of excellent showings.

M. W. McCauley and Z. B. Drum, after having secured a number of good claims during the past month, returned to Twin Falls. They arranged to have their location work completed and started on foot for the trail, Las Vegas, N. M.

heard that they had landed at Three Creek, still on foot, but somewhat sore.

G. M. Lane and C. G. Morgan of Rawhide, Nev., have just closed a deal for the Ed Bonnac claims, joining the townsite of Jarbidge. The consideration was $15,000. This will be surveyed and platted, together with the original townsite. They are returning to Twin Falls to complete arrangements with S. S. Smith and Byrne, who are now in Twin Falls. All the Nevada men believe that this deal has the prospects of any camp that has yet been in this state.

FARMERS ROBBING THEIR LAND.

"Take All, Return Nothing," Folley Gradually Wearing Out Soil.

I read recently a report of a conversation of James J. Hill, the great railroad man of the northwest, that surely has been very serious thought by most farmers. As I suppose most of the readers of Farm Progress know, Mr. Hill is one of the greatest railroads men in the country. In fact, he is one of the wealthiest men in America, and as the prosperity of his railroads depends very greatly on the success of the farmers through the northwest, there is no reason to doubt the intelligence or soundness of the views he takes of all things that affect the interest of the farmers.

In a few words Mr. Hill says that the methods of farming practiced in the region where his railroads run are simply ruinous. The men who own these farms, he says, are simply killing them. They take off the crops all the time and make no effort to plant on the land any equivalent of the plant food the crops remove, and consequently the soil is losing its productivity every year and the yield is constantly growing less. And very naturally, he says, the crop returns will soon be too small to be profitable.

When Mr. Hill says all this he is merely stating what every thoughtful man already knows, and it surely is very hard to get a farmer to see his farm in that way to go on with it. For the time will soon come when the production will be so small that the man who farms cannot make a living. What will they do about it? It is the most important question that can be presented to them. I know of own knowledge that this is all true. Over twenty-five years ago I spent some months in the region where Mr. Hill's roads run. There was a common thing for the average yield where it had been to run up thirty bushels and over. Now there are very few farms on which any of the land makes such returns and the yield is steadily decreasing constantly. In a few years it will get to the point where the returns will not pay the expenses, and as there is no more new, rich land to take up, what are the people going to do?

The wise and thrifty ones will not wait for the soil to get "dead poor." They will take time by the forelock and begin to help the land before grim necessity compels them to do so. Fortunately, it is impossible.

Some eastern farmers have restored old, overworked farms by plowing deep, cultivating thoroughly, saving and keep cultivating thoroughly, and clover.

This is simple enough if the owners will begin this practice before it is too late. In all these new western lands there is apparently abundant potash and phosphorus. It is the nitrogen that is most quickly exhausted. Manure and clover are the only economical sources for supplying it. Every man who wants to keep up his soil should begin at once a rotation in which there shall be clover for at least one year in three. Those who think they cannot use so much clover for hay for their stock can increase the number or else plow it under. If common red clover does not do well, they might try alfalfa or sweet clover. The latter is coming to the front at last as a good crop for stock, and I have found that it makes a vigorous growth where other clovers do not. When not too far north for covering to take a crop, they will do as well as anything else; but any sort of clover has some advantages over them.

The main point is to induce the owners of farms that are running down to do something to prevent it. We cannot go on as now much longer without continuing our falling off. Our population is rapidly increasing and our yield of wheat is growing less. Grim necessity is now upon us to abandon our selfishness and to put more earnest thought and study into our business.

Farming under the most favorable circumstances is filled with difficulties, but if coupled with impoverished soil our abundant prosperity will soon be gone. The roughness has got to be the main factor in our methods. No other business on earth has ever been so exacting where the methods were so careless as the American farmer's handling practice. And yet we consider ourselves the most intelligent agriculturist people in the world. We simply have not yet been driven by stern necessity to put the study and care into our work that all the older nations have practiced for generations.

TO CURE STOMACH WORMS.

Brench With Gasoline Solution Simplest Remedy.

During the past two or three years quite a good many inquiries have come to Farm Progress in regard to the stomach worms that affect sheep. I was later able to send the accurate information given by inquirers as to the cause of the trouble with their lambs, and concluded to study up the question.

I never have any trouble with my own sheep, and was not interested at the time on that account, but thought the time might come when a knowledge of the subject would be useful. Nothing is more wonderful in nature than the life history of these worms. It looks as if they were created with a hardness and tenacity of life that could endure all sorts of hardship, only for the purpose of finally accomplishing their end.

The stomach worm of the sheep, when called by its scientific name, is Hæmaphysa contortus. And it is one of the worst pests that affect the sheep flocks. Or, rather, it is not so injurious to the full-grown sheep, but it is a serious pest in the case of lambs, the three that are so often fatal, but that they keep the lambs in a weak condition and they do not make normal growth, and in many cases never attain to a full normal vigorous condition.

If one's flock of sheep seems in a late and untimely condition, it is a sign that they are infested with worms, and then, if found, to treat them in the proper way. If full-grown sheep are infested with worms by eating the eggs in pasture they have to be treated to make them worm free. The way to make a test and find out if they are infested with worms is to kill and take out the contents of the stomach and mix a little water with the contents. If a small parasite like minute snakes are seen wriggling about in the liquid they are the stomach worms. They are about an inch and a quarter in length and the size of a common pin.

Nature seems to provide special means to keep these pests alive. The little worms that are hatched from the eggs laid by the female worm, without quite sovereal cold, and if eaten on the grass they survive and lay eggs in the sheep's stomach, which the next time they are hatched, thus again make the cycle of evolution.

The remedies in common use are castor, croton, linseed and gasoline. The last is most common. For grown sheep one-half ounce kerosene is used, and for lambs a quarter ounce. The oil should be shut up in the evening, and about 10 to the next morning should be treated. The kerosene should be put in a little milk or linseed oil, and the mixture should be poured through a small rubber tube with a funnel in the end. The tube should be held in the mouth of the sheep half an inch in diameter. The sheep should be held by one man so that it sits on its haunches, with its head up. The mouth should be held open by another man, and the tube run down the throat, not the windpipe, and when it stops going down, pour the kerosene in. Care must be taken to measure the dose properly by before mixing with the oil or milk. The kerosene cannot be given mixed with water, and with milk or linseed oil a tendency to loosen the stomach, and requires some work, but it is well worth the trouble to have the sheep in good condition.

Sheep are good property on the farm. To my mind they are the most valuable for the investment of money in any kind of a farm stock. And in times of adversity they are the only thing that they do not care to cure them of stomach worms, they are more than worth the trouble to have them in good condition. As the symptoms of these worms become present are not very marked. It will be best to kill one of the sheep, as soon as they are in the hands of the veterinarian, and examine for the worms. Then, if found, they should all be treated. The one that is killed may be used for mutton.—H. G. J. Ohio.

Sheep and Fertility. Sheep, when properly managed, are the most profitable live stock on the farm to store fertility to the soil and at the same time leave both the soil and fertilizer in the best possible condition. It is a common error to regard a grower. It has been my experience and observation that sheep improve the soil in every kind of way more than any other kind of live stock. As a general rule, farmers are coming to believe that the pasturing of heavy live stock, such as the horse and dairy and beef cattle, and to compact (illable soils and make much more difficult to till, and besides does a tendency to loosen the surface soil and induce the formation of a shallow mulch that in no way injures the growth and development of the forces, but assists in the formation of a blanket to the soil that materially aids in the conservation of soil moisture.

I have observed on my farm, where sheep have been pastured alongside of cattle in adjoining fields, that the pasture on which the sheep grazed possessed a deeper green appearance during the summer months than that upon which the cattle were pasturing. —Farm Progress.
