

TO BEGIN WORK ON RIVAL LINE

Interurban to start construction. The new line will be started at once.

The line will run north on Blue lakes boulevard to the waters connection of standard gauge with the interurban.

The rolling stock of the company will consist of cars, the motor power which is to be gasoline.

While the gasoline driven car is perhaps somewhat of an innovation in this part of the country, it goes to show that there is nothing new under the sun.

The articles of incorporation provide that the company may construct lines of standard gauge or other gauge.

Capitalization of Company. The authorized capital stock of the company is $400,000 of which $130,000 is paid up.

IDAHO CLUB WOMEN ARE GUESTS OF MAGIC CITY CANAL COMPANY ASKS BIG DAMAGES

City Decried in Honor of Delegates and Plans for Giving to Hundreds of Members Worked Out in Finest Detail--Prizes and Addresses Thoroughly Enjoyed and Reports of Committees Thorough and Comprehensive--Social Features Form Prominent Part of Busy Two-Day Session.

With Mrs. Eugene Wright of Idaho Falls, first vice-president, in the chair, the eleventh annual meeting of the First District Federation of Women...

With the characteristic enthusiasm for which the Magic City is noted the falling club women were met at the depot by a receiving committee...

All meals during the convention, except breakfast, which were served at the homes of the ladies of the Christian church.

A hearty welcome on behalf of Twin Falls was extended by Mrs. M. J. McClellan...

After a song of welcome by the Ladies chorus, Mrs. G. H. Hansborough of Blackfoot made a witty response on behalf of the Federation.

The chair appointed to the committee on resolutions, Mrs. M. J. McClellan, Mrs. R. H. Lewis, Mrs. L. A. Passo...

The minutes of the first federation, held in 1910 at Pocatello, were read by the district recording secretary...

A communion of broad minds, with widening influence and culture. It brings one and all into a channel in which we give and receive in turn, and each one helps to impart some beautiful thought as well as to receive them.

Sometimes we are prone to question ourselves: "What does the Federation do for us? Have we the necessary time and inclination for the work?"

The distinct progress, made by Idaho club women, is shown in the following: "First: The admission to complete rights of citizenship in the following states: Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, Idaho, Washington, California, Oregon, Nevada, May 1st, 1911."

"Second: Fully recognized admission to all occupations, business or professional.

"Third: The acceptance of motherhood versus a profession, realizing that it brings woman's highest reward.

"A new era has dawned upon us, and it is for us to keep pace with it. We are history and culture together to speak our opinions regarding oppression and justice.

"Club work does not detract from our domestic life, which features and most admires in woman, but the old-fashioned home is still the center of life.

By a unanimous vote, the following were given the privilege of the ballot by virtue of their position on the executive committee: Mrs. Bettina Blackfoot, Miss Alice Beach of Idaho Falls, Mrs. W. S. Hill of Twin Falls, Mrs. Leslie Yeaman of Idaho Falls and Mrs. M. J. Sweeley of Twin Falls.

The morning session ended with a roll call of clubs, to which the clubs representative committee, Mrs. Bettina Blackfoot, Mrs. W. S. Hill of Twin Falls, Mrs. Leslie Yeaman of Idaho Falls and Mrs. M. J. Sweeley of Twin Falls.

An interesting diversion from the regular reports was the debate upon the improvement of the state civil service commission on the subject of "Resolved, that civil service or other system in Idaho should be reformed."

Mrs. Eugene Wright, who was present, led by argument was read by Mrs. Susan Bethian of Blackfoot, president of the state committee.

Mrs. G. L. Morgan of Mackay, in her report as chairman of the forestry committee, made an earnest plea for the club women to actively promote a forestry and reforestation board as legislative issue, before the next legislature.

Mrs. Eva Hunt Dockery of Boise made a plea for the club women to actively promote a forestry and reforestation board as legislative issue, before the next legislature.

On Wednesday evening the Commercial club with the Twentieth Century club in tendering to the visiting club women a most enjoyable reception at the Elks hall.

Interesting talk not on the program, given by Miss Swasey, teacher of domestic science in the Academy of Idaho at Pocatello, on the subject of household economics, as taught in the state academy.

Miss Margaret Roberts of Boise, in her speech on "Responsibility of Citizenship," postponed from the Wednesday program, divided women into three classes, as follows:

1. Women who are thinking and doing all the while and proud of their citizenship.

2. Women who want all the honors, but do not want to be called so.

In closing, Miss Roberts laid down the law to the report of voters which were listened to with rapt attention.

Mrs. O. A. Stalker of Twin Falls, owing to the inability of James H. Pocatello, chairman of the report of voters, read a splendid message sent by that official to the federation, in which he urged club women as householders to be vigilant in the cleanliness of the food products and in insisting on full weight, instead of the holding of county contracts.

After luncheon at the Christian church, the convention assembled for an hour in the afternoon to complete the business of the session.

CANAL COMPANY ASKS BIG DAMAGES

SUIT FILED AGAINST TWIN FALLS LAND AND WATER COMPANY

Plaintiff Company Claims Injury in the Sum of $43,900 for Non-compliance of Land and Water Company with Terms of Contract with State.

The complaint alleges that the contractor made the canal as it was specified that the headgates for the main canal should be built in solid rock, that the main waste gate or spillway should be built in solid rock, that all other waste gates, lateral gates and waste should be of masonry construction.

According to the complaint, the defendant in the construction of the irrigation system has failed to comply with the terms of the contract with the state; that the said irrigation system is incomplete, unsatisfactory and defective and that the defendant is required a large expenditure to keep in repair; that the laterals were not constructed as contemplated, so that the defendant has suffered a substantial loss from seepage and percolation, which has been so extensive as to cause damage to adjoining lands.

The contract with the state, which is to be introduced in evidence, stipulates that the irrigation system shall be constructed in accordance with the specifications and requirements of the defendant's contracts with the state, and that the defendant for water was provided for. It further stipulates that upon full payment of the purchase price there is given such purchaser either a stock certificate in lieu of three shares of stock in the corporation, and upon the formation of such corporation the defendant company should convey to the state the land and water rights free of debt or incumbrance.

It is also claimed that at the time of the transfer all the stock and specifications of the defendant company or its officers and agents, and that the land holders and purchasers of water rights, who had contracted with the defendant for water, were not consulted and had no voice in the matter; that the plaintiff had never accepted the irrigation system constructed in accordance with the specifications and requirements of the defendant's contracts with the state, and that the defendant for water was provided for.

KEEN INTEREST IN MANY STATES

SEVEN NEW GOVERNORS ARE ELECTED THIS YEAR

Heads of Legislatures, Mayors, and Supreme Justices to be Balloted for November 7, and Both Sides Working Hard for Victory.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Although the elections to be held November 7 will be quiet compared with the excitement of a year hence, interest in them is keen.

States that will elect governors are Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky, Mississippi, Louisiana and New Mexico. In other states justices of the supreme court, members of legislatures and mayors will be among the officials chosen.

Several vacancies are to be filled. While this is regarded as an off-year, national interest centers in Massachusetts, where the Democratic and Republican parties have named full state tickets. Eugene N. Foss, who was elected as a Democratic governor in a Republican state last year, is a candidate for re-election.

The Republican ticket is headed by Louis A. Frothingham, the present Republican lieutenant governor. Members of the legislature also will be elected, as well as several justices of the supreme court and city and county officials. The assembly election will be unusually important this year, as the Republicans will endeavor to regain control of the lower house, thus enabling them to block any political legislation next year.

First Vote as State
New Mexico votes the first time in its history as a state for a full set of state officers, members of congress and for a supreme court, eight district judges and either the president or also will vote on a proposed amendment to the constitution, making the constitution more easily amendable.

Ohio will vote for municipal officers and delegates to the constitutional convention. In the larger Ohio cities, the contests for city offices are unusually spirited because of divisions in the lines of both old parties and the determination of leaders to strengthen their organization preparatory to the fight next year for delegates to the national convention.

Pennsylvania elects mayors in all cities and in a number of these contests there is considerable interest. Municipal officers also will be voted for among other states. In California, Utah and Tennessee, Georgia will hold a primary to nominate a candidate for governor in December. It will hold a primary to nominate a candidate for governor in December. It will hold a primary to nominate a candidate for governor in December. It will hold a primary to nominate a candidate for governor in December.

not will choose a state comptroller, attorney general, judge of the court of appeals, the full membership of the house of delegates will have to be elected. Arthur W. Gorman, the choice of the Democrats for governor, while the Republicans have named Phillip S. Lee, Colquhoun.

Mississippi's state legislature, but no state officials.

In Nebraska, judges of the supreme court, a railway commissioner and regulars of the state university are to be elected, as well as a successor to the late Representative Latta in the Third district. Five parties have taken part in the election.

Five parties also in Rhode Island, where a full state ticket is to be elected, have nominated candidates. A legislature will be chosen.

There is no general election in Kansas, but successors to the late Representative Mitchell and Madison will be chosen.

California will hold no general election this year, but San Francisco, Sacramento and some smaller cities will hold for municipal officers. In San Francisco the issue is between the labor union party machine, controlled by Mayor McCarthy and a coalition of Republicans and Democrats.

Mississippi will vote for all state offices; in Kentucky, a governor, lieutenant governor and railroad commissioners will be elected, and Victory officers.

WHY BUY INDIGESTION?
If you know how much your grocer sells couldn't you tell pretty well how much indigestion there is in the neighborhood? Lard is made from hog fat and is often indigestible. It is heavier in your stomach than on the scales. Buy Cottolene, however, and you get a vegetable-oil cooking fat that is as pure and wholesome as olive oil. Besides, Cottolene is more economical than butter or lard—one-third less being required.

Remember, Cottolene contains no bad fat; there is no lead in it, no arsenic in food cooked with Cottolene.

GOD'S PROVIDENCE ARE TWO QUEENS.

Vaahli's Method—Eather's Method—Present Day Applications—Esther IV, 1-18—Nov. 5

"The Lord preserveth all them that love him."—Psalms cxdv. 20.

Today's study has Queen Esther for its topic. She was a Jewess, noted for her beauty, and on this account she was chosen of Ahasuerus, King of Persia, to be his consort. It is presumed that she received the name Esther, which signifies a star, because of her beauty. Hitherto being the Chaldean equivalent for Haman, she succeeded Vaahli, the former queen, who had displeased the king and been divorced.

In the opposite course of these two queens we find a lesson in the Suftrage question of today. The king had a banquet with the lords of his empire. It may be assumed that it was a revel, and that the king and his lords were more or less under the influence of wine. Giving Queen Vaahli the benefit of the doubt, this was probably her reason for presenting the king's request that she come into the banquet garden.

Many will say she did just right in asserting her womanhood in "standing up for her rights," etc. We will not dispute that all women have rights, and that Queen Vaahli had hers and that she asserted them. We merely offer the suggestion that in question of rights, along lines of force and compulsion, Queen Vaahli won a victory which cost her dearly. In Queen Esther's case, the subject of this lesson, we see the opposite course pursued—the queen won a great victory with happy results by a total abstinence from wine, and one which in our judgment recommends itself to the wisest and best of men and women.

Queen Esther could have taken a similar course, but did not. However much she might have felt that the king's requirement of her presence would expose her to jest or rudeness, she should have relied upon her charms and tact and purity and upon her husband's love and care. While it did not seem to her to be a banquet, she should have been a hallowed one, a sweet perfume, a rebuke to any immodesty. Like many another well-meaning woman, Queen Vaahli was unwise; she abandoned the most potent defense of pure womanhood when she met command with refusal. But then we must remember that Vaahli was either a Christian or a Jewess and was therefore without any Divine instruction or guidance.

While recognizing the fact that, as spiritual New Testament Christians, these are not esteemed of God on account of pedigree, station or sex, that "there is neither male nor female" in Christ, James viii. 1, we find that in the Scriptures "Man is the head of the woman," and she is the "helpmeet for him." See Genesis II, 18; I Corinthians xi, 3; Ephesians v, 22-24.

Esther, Stopped For Victory

Queen Esther was not a suffragette. When invited to become the queen, she did not decline and see to it that she stood on the same ground as Vaahli. She accepted her position as divine providence had clothed her with humbly and with the most becoming of her fine apparel. She made herself as agreeable to the king as possible. In presence of him at this time she was in her fifteenth year. Haman, the king's favorite, took a dislike to the gate-keeper of the palace, Mordecai, a Jew, because the latter did not bow before him, as did others. Mordecai was so faithful that Haman could not hope to find a fault with him, and thus to cause his removal from office. He prevailed upon the king to issue a decree that all the Jews of his kingdom should be set upon and killed as enemies of the country. This, of course, would include Mordecai, this special enemy whom he would then feel free to kill. As the time for the entertainment of the Jewish drew near, and Haman and Mordecai and all the Jews throughout the empire were in great distress and fear, yet not without hope, that they did would spare for them some deliverance. This matter is detailed in our lesson.

Queen Esther was cousin to Mordecai, the latter had been adopted to have been her father. She was indeed his adopted daughter. He appealed to her to use the influence of the Jewish law and the king's respect for the order. She declared, because strangely enough, at this very time, the king had shown coldness toward her, and had not called for her for a month. Mordecai pressed the matter more urgently, assuring her that she was about to lose a great privilege of service for her people and that God's family raised her to this position in the kingdom for this very hour and for this very purpose of bringing to the Jews relief and that she had failed to note and to use the privilege. God doubtless would use some other agency, and still bring deliverance in harmony with His promises. The appeal to Queen Esther was repeated and enlarged for three days more, requesting that Mordecai and all the Jews of the royal city should join with her in a petition to the king before the king's court. Included, petitions to God for the deliverance of His people, and for wisdom to guide Esther in her endeavor to use her talent and opportunity wisely.

Love and Beauty Conquered. Queen Esther risked her station and even her life in going into the banquet without a summons; but attended in her royal apparel she risked everything for her people. She charmed the king, who ordered that his royal scepter, which she touched. He perceived that she had a request to make, and urged her to speak. Wisely she refused and invited the king and Haman, his prime minister, her enemy, to partake of a special dinner with her in the court garden. After the vigils the king again urged her to say what she wished of her people, and she could gratify. This was queen Esther's opportunity, and she replied, asking why if he loved her, he would have an edict that she should be killed, and all of her race, the Jews?

Her case was immediately won. The king perceived that he had been favored by the Jews, and he made an unjust decree (a bad law) that decreed that no decree of a Persian king could be changed. This decree had been stamped with the king's seal, and the king, angry at Haman, made another decree, namely, that Haman should be hanged, and that the Jews everywhere should be notified that they had royal consent to use force against their enemies in defending their lives.

Some one has said: There is nothing so safe as doing one's duty to her people, and her example is an inspiration coming down to us through centuries. God will recognize and reward the love and seal and energy of His people, as the words of our text declare. He also says, "I love them that love Me."

FRANKS' TRAGEDY
The publication of the history of the Franks' tragedy, the most remarkable case ever tried in the United States courts, brings to light the interesting fact that Frank C. Woodruff of Mayer and Franks, of the United States, was a witness whose testimony was of a determining nature in preventing the successful culmination of a plot by the Franks' company in executing which a man was hired to be killed and then deliberately murdered. The victim was Eugene S. Chapman, a contractor for those of the chief contractor, which a short time previously had been purchased from Woodruff at Lawrence, Kansas. When the plot was exposed by Lawrence's identification, Woodruff was the first witness called upon and denied that it was that of the man whom he had sold to Franks for a price of $500. He was heavily insured. His life, Woodruff was a witness in all of the subsequent cases. In the trial of the case, held at Lawrence, Kan., on August 22, which in the end was thrown out of the United States courts.

Story of Unusual Case.
The story of the strange circumstances, as related by the Saturday Evening Post, is as follows:

One of the greatest illustrative cases in this country is that of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, U. S. v. E. H. Brown, of December 25, 1910. John W. Hillmon and Levi Baldwin resided in Douglas county in the state of Kansas. They struck a conspiracy to defraud the life insurance companies with the assistance of a person named John H. Brown.

Their plan was to take out insurance on Hillmon's life for a large sum, since the insured is supposed under circumstances indicating his death and thereby secure the insurance. The story of this remarkable insurance taking cannot be better presented than it was to one of the affidavits that Brown finally made in this case, when circumstances began to favor him and when in fact he understood to secure immunity by talking what he knew. He said:

Life insurance for $25,000.
Our original arrangement was to get Hillmon's life insured for $15,000, but was afterwards increased to twenty thousand dollars. Hillmon and myself were to go off southwest from Wichita, Kansas, ostensibly to locate a ranch, but in fact to get Hillmon a subject to pass off as the body of John W. Hillmon, for the purpose of obtaining the large amount of money. We had no definite plan of getting a subject, but to let some stranger get one. The final termination of the matter was the last I had thought of.

Our first trip out from Wichita to the town of Lawrence, while the snow was on the ground, we expected to find a subject that would appear to be Hillmon, Brown, to death, and that could be identified only by his clothes and papers found on it, and so it would pass off as Hillmon. We went from Wichita to Medicine Lodge, then direct to Sun City and from there to Great Bend on the Santa Fe Road; then to Larned and on to Wichita via Hutchinson. Hillmon and myself were entirely alone on that trip.

I then stayed at Wichita until the fourth of March. Hillmon in the mean time went to Lawrence, to see his wife and get some 'news' on his business. He was the first of March and on the fifth we left on our second trip. We went west to Cowank Creek, and then west to Harper, then by Medicine Lodge, on by Sun City and turned northeast down Medicine River to camp on Crooked Creek about eight or ten miles north of Medicine Lodge, where Hillmon claimed to have been killed. We got there about an hour before sundown and stayed in camp until the next evening.

"We overtook a stranger on this trip the first day out from Wichita, about one of two and a half miles from town, where Hillmon applied to get in and ride, and whom he, Hillmon, proposed to hire to work for him on the ranch. This man was with us during all our trip. Hillmon proposed to me that this man would do for a subject to pass off for him. I told him and contended with him that the case would not pass off for him, giving him various reasons why the man would not answer the description and complained and objected because his proposition was to take the man's life. I pretended and said that was going beyond what I agreed and something I had never before thought of, and was beyond my grit entirely; but he seemed to get more and more determined and more desperate in the matter.
"Palms were taken not to have more than two of us seen together in the wagon; but sometimes one and then the other would be kept back out of sight. On this trip to Lawrence Hillmon was accompanied; his arm was quite bad, Hillmon used to take him and take him to vacinate him, which he did, taking his pocket knife and using it from his own arm for the purpose. He also traded clothes with him. Hillmon first giving him a change of underclothing; then traded gaiters, the one he was killed in. The suit he was buried in was a suit Hillmon traded with Baldwin for.
"This man appeared to be a stranger in the country, a sort of an easy-going fellow, but suspicious or very suspicious to anything. His arm became very sore and he got stupid and dull. He said his name was either Berkeley or Burgess, something like that. We always called him Joe. He said he had been around Fort Scott a while and also had worked about Wellisand Burgess, City. I don't know where he was from, nor where his boss or friends was. I didn't know much of Wichita that I knew of. I had very little to say to him and he led me to the train with him. His name was Berkeley Burgess. It was to be some name, but I have more to do. He was a stranger and he was to be some name, but I have more to do.

Presently associated with Hillmon, and tried to draw him from Lawrence, but his intention of killing him was to be some name, but I have more to do.

On the next evening after we got to the camp, just named, the man Joe was sitting by the fire. I was at the hind end of the wagon, either putting food in the box for the horse or taking a sack of corn out when I heard a gun go off. I looked around and saw the man shot, and Hillmon was pulling him away toward to keep him out of the fire.

Cold Blooded Plans Executed.
Hillmon changed a satchel from his own coat to Joe's. He said to me, 'I was to be a man who I wanted, just as he wanted it, and that I need not be afraid; but it would be all right. He told me to get on a pony and go down to a ranch about three-quarters of a mile and get some one to come up. He took Joe's valise and started north. This was about sundown. We had arranged to communicate with each other. He first proposed to do so, but I told him, I did not want to know where he was; but in case I should find out, I would find out some other way. I have never heard a word from him since.

"At Lawrence, Mr. Hillmon gave me to understand that she knew where Hillmon was, all right and it was all right. The man over whom an inquest was held at camp, afterward at Medicine Lodge and at Lawrence, Kansas, was the man Joe Burgess, of Barber County, killed by Hillmon as related above, and John Hillmon I believe to be, still living; at least, he left our camp and went north, as stated above, after killing Joe."

This was in fact what occurred. But the purpose of their plan, Brown told a different story when he first returned from this adventure. He said that he and Hillmon went into camp on Crooked Creek in Barber County, Kansas, on the eighteenth day of March, that after supper he went to the wagon for the purpose of removing some blankets or other like material; that a gun had been put to the man by Hillmon so that its muzzle projected from the side; that in his effort to remove the blankets they became entangled with the gun and discharged it, thereby his companion, Hillmon, was shot through the head and instantly killed.

Brown went at once and notified parties living in the neighborhood of Crooked Creek. The first party, his companion, Hillmon, causing his instant death. The persons notified went to the camp, found the dead body of the man, but were not able to bring by the campfire. Brown told them this person was Hillmon. The body was taken to Medicine Lodge and buried. Brown's account of this case was given to the life insurance company for the money. Hillmon was never again heard of.

One Fact Turning Tables.
But on one salient circumstance this elaborate conspiracy might have been carried to a successful issue. Hillmon had picked up a wandering person who seemed to be unknown. The man evidently was a stranger; the country was wild; no living person knew that he was with Brown and Hillmon. There existed, so far as these men could determine, no evidence indicating the presence of this stranger.
Hillmon in carrying out his design to kill the man in the city, had been vaccinated, and he induced the stranger to permit a vaccination so that the mark would show on the body; he changed clothes with him and having prepared this evidence of identification in the camp at Crooked Creek; he killed him. No living person except Brown, the accomplice, and get some knowledge of these facts. They had taken great care that, only two men should be seen and every detail of the plan as conceived by Hillmon was perfectly carried out. Nothing interrupted it, no one had any knowledge of it, and Hillmon's attempt to conceal himself, was also so successful that no one could determine anything. Everything that Hillmon thought of, every difficulty that he could foresee, and every difficulty that was patent to any one was safeguarded.

Letter to Sweetheart.
Nevertheless, there was one thing Hillmon could not have foreseen that destroyed his plans. There existed here, as in every case, one of those invisible lines which attach individuals to each other. Ordinarily Hillmon could not have found a better subject than the person he picked up on his way to Crooked Creek. This stranger, named Alvina D. Kaston, and after he fell in with Hillmon he wrote her a letter addressed to Fort Medicine. The remarkable coincidence of this letter destroyed Hillmon's plan. It was quoted by the Supreme Court of the United States in its opinion:
"Dearest Alvina: Your kind and welcome letter was received yesterday afternoon about an hour before I left Emporia. I will stay here until the fore part of next week and then I will leave here to see a part of the country that I never expected to see when I left home, as I am going with a man known by the name of Hillmon, who sends me a letter every day. I have not yet promised me more wages than I could make at anything else. I concluded to take it for a while at least, until I got some thing better. There is so many folks in this country that have got the Leaville fever, and if I could not get of the situation that I have in, I would have sold these myself; but as it is at present I got to see the best portion of Kansas, the Territory, Colorado and Mexico. The reason that we intend to visit would cost travel from a hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars, but it will not cost me a cent; besides, I get good wages. I will drop a letter

WELCOME TO TWIN FALLS
 This week Twin Falls has upon her hands the pleasant duty of providing entertainment for the delegates from all over southeastern Idaho to the annual convention of the Second District Federation of Women's Clubs.
 Among the papers and addresses delivered during the session are many which indicate a degree of care and thought, making them worthy of any cause and from an intellectual standpoint alone, it is safe to assume that none among those who attend but will leave the Magic City with new realms of thought opened before them and with a broader and more catholic view on the mission of man and woman on earth.
 Twin Falls extends a sincere and hearty welcome to the visitors.

MAILING THE LIE
 If Twin Falls is to surpass the reputation of Greeley, the industry must be some regulation of the industry which is fast becoming important in this country and attaining prominence throughout the nation. There has been an effort upon the part of several growers to supply the demand, with culms a few surreptitiously packed in a sack, or a few sacks, slipped in a car, but enough to lower the standard. No one, this year, as yet, has attempted to load with stolene and stones, but in frequent instances they have been compelled to resort their spuds before shipping them.
 However, a further precaution would aid materially in establishing a high standard and securing recognition, now being sought for Twin Falls potatoes. It has been suggested, that the shippers, or an association of growers, require every farmer, who sells tubers, to insert a tag in each sack, giving his name and address and stating that the contents are Twin Falls potatoes. This not only would afford a check, but would in most cases be an excellent advertisement; for the tract and would hold the lie, whenever Twin Falls products are sold with the Greeley stamp upon them— which practice, by the way, is extensive at the present time.

ADJUSTMENT OF ALLEN CASE
 After reviewing the testimony of the witness cited to appear before the federal court at Boise on Monday last in the case of the United States versus H. P. Allen, the jury returned a verdict allowing the defendant $12,000 for the property, which comprises two of the six lots selected by Inspector Shipley for the federal building in this city.

 The matter appeared to be further complicated by the filing of attachments against the property for Saturday last by the Gray Harbor Mercantile company, and it was rumored that Albert had transferred the property, but this was evidently an error. In any event, the matter was decided for all time, and the question of the post office site definitely settled. Allen was offered $22,000 for his holdings by the government, which he refused to accept, and the witnesses who were called from this city to testify as to the value of the property differed in their estimates from $7,000 to $14,000. The jury after weighing the evidence compromised by allowing the defendant $11,000, being out only three hours.

TWO COUPLES ARE MARRIED
 Two marriage ceremonies were the order in justice court on Saturday, October 22. Judge W. J. Smith officiating at the nuptials of Elmer Moon and Miss Fernie Austin, both of Elmer, and also James H. Marsh and Miss Flossie Gustaf of Twin Falls. Cashen, Sheriff.
 John C. Cashen and Miss Iva Vivian Bluff, both of Jerome, were quietly married on Monday at 10 o'clock at the residence of Rev. Gootley. The young couple will make their home at Jerome.

 There could not be a greater commentary on the inability of the criminal agent to anticipate the immortal-unforeseen agencies that lie in wait to destroy him. While Edimon was taking his elaborate precautions to prevent the three persons from being arrested, while he was lavishing his plans to establish the feasibility of the body, and while he congratulated himself that he had picked up a wandering ne'er-do-well in whom one was interested and whose relations with other persons had been already severed, his victim was writing the letter that destroyed him.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures.

"Favorite Prescription" is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper, contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice.

Some of the numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take, as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

IRRIGATING PLANTS SPELL FUTURE GROWTH OF IDAHO

Thousands of Acres of Land, Unavailable by Gravity Systems of Irrigation, Can Be Reclaimed—Successful Projects Demonstrate Efficiency and Safety

The development of Idaho has been giving entire satisfaction. The vast project at Minidoka, one of the largest irrigation pumping projects in the world, covering 50,000 acres of land is a part of the state government project, located near the Twin Falls town in southern Idaho. The land is watered by three successive lifts of 81 feet each. The first is directly from the High Line gravity canal, covering 10,000 acres of land. The plant for the second is located about a mile from the first. It lifts the water from the canal of the lower plant and covers 16,000 acres of land. The third, consisting of 24,000 acres of land, is supplied with water from the canal feeding into the intermediate plant. The first 10,000 acres is irrigated by raising the water 31 feet; the second, 10,000 acres, by raising it 63 feet; and the remaining 30,000 acres, by raising it 88 feet.

Each new project has proven itself to be more expensive and more difficult of construction than its predecessor until it now is practically impossible to find a proposition that does not require one or more reservoirs, an impounding or diversion dam, a long rock or earth tunnel, or many miles of side hill canal that not only is costly to build, but is unsafe and unsatisfactory for owners of land. other hand, a pumping plant is cheaper to construct, unless, of course, it is found necessary to confine the water in a reservoir. The machinery is of a standard type, made in shops, and the cost can be figured with absolute accuracy. There are no dams or canals to break at a time when water is most needed, and in case of damage to the power lines or machinery, it is a matter of hours rather than of days until the system can be repaired. Another advantage is the fact that water can be delivered directly to the land to be irrigated, and there is little chance of loss through seepage and evaporation.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE nomination of Kelvin and Rollins came as an astounding surprise to the public, for their names in connection with the presidency had been carefully suppressed throughout, though Senator Sawyer's publicity bureau had kept the papers full of both men in other ways. They were the new economic conscience. They were the new commercial philanthropy. They were the new justice. They were the new foe of the oppressor and friend of the poor. Kelvin, individually, had forced Henry Breed to reduce the price of bread permanently from $5 to 4 cents a loaf. That was the story that touched every man's (fearful) concern for the poor man's pocketbook.

A dozen favorite sons were first put in nomination at the convention, and this Senator Killian, recounting the story of the breaking up of the Stock Exchange and of the capture of the railroads, the amazing of the trusts and the reduction of the price of bread, put up Kelvin's name for consideration. Pandemonium broke loose as per schedule, one of the officials arranged spontaneous outbursts as dear to American politics, and on the crest of the nomination of Kelvin as candidate for the high office of president of the United States, the youngest man ever to achieve that honor, because of a mere counting of long sticks arranged for breaking up, which convention much more calmly and rationally proceeded to nominate Rollins.

One-half of the public received those two names with gasps of gratitude; the other half received them with snarls of scorn, and the campaign was on. Kelvin, refusing to make a mousetrap of himself, let his managers flail it out for him. But upon his vast stretches of Long Island waste there now sprang up a long succession of residence blocks, each surrounded with the cement sidewalks, each containing little cement houses, each after the Edison idea, and each house set in a generous plot of ground. Water, light, sewerage, parks, schools, all were provided as if by magic; and the whole was made still more accessible by the new and wonderful transportation system that Rollins had inaugurated at the same time.

As soon as the work had begun to take some form his magnitude could not escape the newspapers. Their first two questions were "Who is he?" and "Who is doing it?" To both of these queries Kelvin's publicity bureau had a ready answer—light and air and cleanliness and life for the workingman at a cheaper price than he paid for business and poisoned atmosphere and dirt and death in the city.

Kelvin, appealed to, curtly pointed out that the scheme had been projected long before his name had been mentioned for the nomination and that it was merely one of Henry Breed's plans for the use of his money in ameliorating the condition of mankind. Nor did he deny that the undertaking was expected to pay a legitimate rate of interest upon the outlay. He was entirely practical, he stated, and the inference was that he would make an entirely practical president; also, a working president, for he was busy right up to the time of election.

As if arranged by Providence, a chance to display his vigorous practicality came just a few days before election. One Paulson, remembered as a once foremost man of Wall street, then as a "has-been," had suddenly blossomed into the intellect as the real estate sensation of New York. Working quietly, he had secured options upon tenement house districts, block after block in extent. Now he announced the formation of a monster real-estate company, which, under the care of all the freight and passenger transportation entering New York and the erection of huge structures covering blocks in extent. Immediately following this notice of evilious were served upon every miserable dweller in the congested tenement districts that he had purchased. Thousands upon thousands of families were rendered homeless, and every newspaper blazed with the wholesale oppression.

Who then came to the rescue? Why, Kelvin, Kelvin the disbarner of Breed's billions, Kelvin the annihilator of the Stock Exchange, Kelvin the breaker of trusts, Kelvin the reducer of the price of bread, Kelvin the poor man's friend, Kelvin the candidate for president of the United States! He would furnish them free transportation for themselves and their goods and chattels. He would at once install each homeless family in a separate little home of its own free of moving cost, and to avoid any entering that might be attendant upon the confusion would stock each house with a week's provisions. Would a summer and fall of campaign speeches have beaten that?

Countless thousands of dazed and helpless families thrust suddenly homeless into the streets attached themselves in pitiful haste to each of a distressful little pile of battered and scratched and splintered and ragged goods and merely waited in numbed leader of that procession announced briefly to those nearest him the terms of Kelvin's offer.

"Would they go?"

A cheer answered that question, a cheer of mighty relief, as of famished men in sight of water, as of lost souls that had found the gates of paradise. Then began the most amazing happenings in the history of civilization. Out to the new cement cities they were carried into fresh air and clean surroundings and a new life, away from squalor and disease and degradation, and though taxed by the change they were the happiest people and better for it.

Through the day and the night for more than two weeks this tremendous episode went on. Only Harry McCallen, bereft of his leadership because there was no one to lead, put his stubby finger upon the facts.

"He said he'd take it away from me, and he done it, dash him!" exclaimed an old man indignantly and half admiringly, his red face puffed redder and curious little wrinkles forming upon both sides of the mole on his nose. "Them three districts would 'a' beat Kelvin in this election, and now there won't be enough voters left in the whole neighborhood to make a come on in a festival. And the whole game's a frame-up. Breed's money's back of Kelvin, and it's Breed's money that's back of Rollins, and Breed gets his all out again by selling all this property Rollins bought in the railroads. It cost only half cost to make all this election grand stand play from here to Frisco, but it makes money! Think of that, will you? If Kelvin frames up this deal, he's a bigger man than Dick Croker, sure he is!"

Nobody, however, paid any attention to Patsy McCallen.

Election night found Henry Breed, as eager in his interest as any could have been in New York for the first time in years, and with him came Lillian, Mrs. McCallen, Dr. Zolman and the usual servants. Two splendid suits on Kelvin's door at the Esplanade were secured, and the common meeting point for all of them that night was a magnificent drawing room upon the corner overlooking the entrance to the park, and overlooking a meeting picture bulletin which an enterprising newspaper had established there. Breed surveyed Kelvin and Rollins in turn with paternal delight, but he studied both men shrewdly and ended by putting his hand on Kelvin's shoulder.

"My boy, you are made of the right stuff," he announced in his shrill voice. "Here's the man"—and he turned to the others—"fitted to sustain a world's crisis. There is no nervousness here, no empty words in worry, no flinching, face straight ahead. Fine boy, this Kelvin."

"Really," not in Mrs. Rensselaer. "We are all intensely interested, and even absorbed, in your campaign, Mr. Kelvin. We think it has been very cleverly conducted indeed."

"I thank you," said Kelvin to Mrs. Rensselaer, who he knew hated him. "But we all have to remember that, while the campaign is over, our election is not yet assured by any means. Mr. Rollins and Mr. Breed and my self as monopolists and manufacturers and capitalists of great wealth and a few other reprehensible things have come in for some hard scourgings in the past few days, and just how much effect that is going to have on the attitude of the public it is hard to tell."

"Eh! It isn't worth considering," said Breed. "Politics is too thoroughly organized for that. Get the leaders who own the little leaders, who in turn own the minor workers clear down to the ward tramps, and you have the country."

"I cannot agree with you," broke in Rollins. "The man who disregards the tremendous, restless force of public sentiment reckons without the mighty power which has made every important change upon the map since history began."

"Mercy," cried Lillian, "how vitally serious we are becoming! When and where are we to have dinner?"

"Right in this apartment, I think, if Mr. Breed will allow it," said Kelvin with a laugh. "Suppose we scatter and make ready for dinner as quickly as we can. I ordered it rather early, and the butler would probably be glad to have this room."

Breed stepped into the hall with Kelvin. "I will be glad when the night is over, so I can go back to Forest Lakes," he confided to Phillip. "I cannot get out of my mind the fact of all that money there—alone. It—it calls to me, Phillip."

"Nonsense," replied Kelvin, glancing at him curiously. The old man was prone to pass from normality to abnormality and back again, with not only surprising but discomforting swiftness. "No one knows about it, and an army could not force the fault."

"It isn't that," Breed half whispered. "It—it calls to me, I say. I hear it in tongues of silver and of gold and in soft, silken rustlings when I try to sleep away from home. As for safety, my safe is strong, but, if it calls me out for protection, you know, but for company—just company—not that it's

you. I have a solid line of them all around the home and all around the walls and all around the drive with instructions to shoot the first man that comes near." His voice sank to a whisper. "They have shot twice in the past month. They dragged them away and buried them at night." Kelvin turned to Breed, shocked and horror-stricken. "The old man's eyes were blazing and his hand was laid flat upon Phillip's arm as he trembled, not with fright, but with some more painful passion. "Mine is the appointed hand," he went on. "Mine is the appointed hand. From the just wrath of the Most High there is no security."

"No, I presume not," admitted Kelvin, with calmness, at least in his voice. "There is not so much to guard as there used to be," he suggested.

"No," admitted Breed, shaking his head, "that's true." He seemed quite cast down about it for a moment, then suddenly he chuckled shrilly. "But we'll get it all back, Phillip. It's only an investment, and when you become president and we get a senate and congress that we can handle my vault will receive every cash dollar in the United States. They will see what we shall see." And he bobbed his old bald head like a toy mackerel.

"We shall see what we shall see," repeated Kelvin emphatically and turned abruptly toward his suit.

PUMPING PLANTS

Practically there is no limit to which water may be lifted, providing the crop to be raised will justify the expense of pumping it. In California and Colorado there are many places where it is elevated 300, 400 and even 500 feet for irrigation purposes. In the Hawaiian islands, where sugarcane is grown extensively, there are found to be 30 pumping installations lifting water over 200 feet, 25 lifting it over 300 feet, 14 lifting it over 400 feet, and three lifting it over 400 feet. All of these plants are of 200 horsepower capacity, or more, and one of the installations, Hitiang, was 800 feet, is of 1000 horse-power capacity.

At Payette, Idaho, the Payette Heights pumping plant is raising water 141 feet and covering about 3000 acres of land. An organization recently has been formed, consisting of the owners on high Dead Oak Flat, in the vicinity of Ontario, Oregon, where it is proposed to cover 10,000 acres of land under a lift of 235 feet.

The pumping of water for irrigation purposes has been thoroughly tried and tested. It is no experiment.
