WOULD TAKE OVER LOST RIVER LAND

Eastern Bondholders in Boise in Connection with Sale

REPORT THAT THEY WILL BID IN PROPERTY AT SALE

Would Pay 'Core' Brothers Part of Their $250,000 Loan and Give Them New Mortgage for Balance.

George S. Spear of Chicago, representing the Trust committee of bondholders of the Idaho-Dewey Light & Power company, was in Boise for the purpose of taking up matters in connection with the power company. While in this state Mr. Spear, who also represents the bondholders in the Big Lost river project, was met at the receiver's sale of the property to satisfy the judgment held by the 'Core' brothers.

Mr. Spear arrived early Tuesday and spent most of the day in consultation with Mr. Hagan. When he returned to his hotel and was asked for an interview he said that he did not care to make any statement regarding the purpose of his visit, but returned the reporter to Mr. Hagan.

While no statement was forthcoming on the Big Lost river project from Mr. Spear, who owns the debt for the land, he said that his visit has much to do with the coming receiver's sale of the property at Halsey by James E. Clinton, the receiver, some time in the latter part of this month.

BILLY (SINGLE) CLIFFORD CO.

As in the instance of Billy (Single) Clifford, the legitimate stage is constantly recurring from the vaudeville stage. Mr. Clifford is one of the best known and most popular actors on the vaudeville platform and he has been a headliner for many years. But the demand for good actors in the dramatic and comic stage has been great and the supply has not kept up with the demand.

CRUSADE AGAINST CIGARETTE IS ON

Public Mass Meeting Develops Amazing Facts

CLOSE QUESTIONING OF PRIVATE JUDGE A REVELATION.

Officers Start Out to Tighten up on Laws as Result of Instance of Citizens.

The mass meeting called last Tuesday evening for the purpose of protesting against the use of tobacco by minors evidently started things to-night at least an attempt at reform. The meeting was attended by about seventy-five citizens, a great many women being present.

During the course of the debate by the questioning of Mr. Thomson, the statement was made by Judge Blank that public opinion did not demand enforcement of the cigarette law, was challenged.

Even being asked who volunteered to see to it, the responsibility was passed onto the Superintendent of the schools when Judge Blank claimed and advised the Probation Officer against arresting the boys, and that it would make them unpopular with the superintendent when the above was made by Judge Blank, but it is his duty to do so.

The city authorities were agreeing—and Mayor McConnell is anxious to see the enforcement of the law. The city authorities were agreeing—and Mayor McConnell is anxious to see the enforcement of the law.

It is essentially unselfish in that it directs us to give to our brother what belongs to him. Its practice leads to the safety of property, the security of life and its enjoyment, the preservation of its integrity, and the possibility of "human" and "sacred" relationships. In all of Your Priced Matter, it represents Good Workmanship, Good Wages, and Good Conditions.

The attention now being carried on against the use of tobacco by minors should bring to the minds of the parents and the business men of this city the responsibility of every citizen for the welfare of the children.

Of course the parental responsibility must come first, but it should be supplemented by every safeguard and every aid that the citizen can place around the boys. This much attention is paid to housing everything under the sun in the way of material things while the most precious heritage of the whole city is neglected. The young people of this city have inherited little in the way of natural beauties provided by climatic conditions such as skating, skiing and canoeing in the winter. Absence of lakes and quiet running rivers places boating, swimming and other aquatic sports out of the reach of the young.

There is hardly a place within twenty miles suitable for skating. When the matter is carefully considered on all angles, the citizens have not much to give the boys in the way of natural boyish sports and it is small wonder that the boys depart easily from the straight and narrow. Twin Falls needs to wake up to the fact that it owes a community duty to the growing boys that will not falter when it comes to the expenditure of money to provide pleasant and safe quarters for the boys and to provide playgrounds in summer for their recreation.

It might not be said that Twin Falls can take fifty thousand dollars for a place to exhibit fat boys and effete and refuse to heed the demands of the humanity.

The anti-tobacco crusade started by citizens of this town should have the support of every parent having the good of the young boys at heart. The times will, for the sake of argument admit that methods of curbing the growing evil may differ. It will accept that many people are sincere in the belief that moral suasion is the key to the cure. There is no question that it may erode the enforcement of laws which the youth to concealment in order to practice the smoking habit. To a large extent it is up to the parents to stop the practice by careful watching and education against the harm of cigarettes. But there is a feature or two of the question that should get the best shot of for a minute.

The superintendent of the schools has it in his power to stop all smoking on the school premises at all times. He can not contract with both the school laws and from the state anti-tobacco law. There is no excuse for allowing it on the school grounds, no matter what the attitude of the parents may be on the question. There is no excuse for his interpreting the attitude of the public regarding law enforcement his attitude should be that any law should be enforced, good or bad. Nor are the prohibition officers less culpable because of the lack of completely given enforcement. Their activity points only one direction and they should not hesitate to take any objection or obstacle presented by independent or any other private citizen. Public opinion does not constitute the ideas of any one man or set of men. It is too broad in its scope to be dominated by any village. The state law is plain and needs no interpretation from the superintendent of the public schools to the extent of enforcement. If boys are arrested it is left up to the parents to see that offense is not repeated. When such action is the policy of the prohibition officer and he lives up to the law, there can be no criticism of his conduct. In such action the parental responsibility is "brought home" and cannot be overlooked by any true parent.

STARVING THE RAILROADS. Financial starvation, our railroads say, is the fate confronting them unless they are permitted to increase their freight rates. So acute is the condition of our transportation systems, according to railroad officials, only alternative to increased rates is business without day book or ledger?—Every household should keep a regular account of all earnings and expenditures. Only in this way can you be able to make up a domestic budget intelligently and know just where you have a saving and how much you can afford to spend in any given direction. Thus an orderly person will know beforehand what is required and will be provided with the necessary means of obtaining it.

But it must be on a more detailed plan than that of the wife whose accounting consisted of the two entries: On one side—"received from John, $50.00," and on the other side—"Spent it all."

The work of the home consists of general household occupations. The housewife, in conducting the affairs of the home, performs a multitude of jobs before her, including food and shelter, the work of a caterer in providing food, the work of the laundry in the various cleaning processes, the work of the nursery in caring for the children, and many other duties that are considered separate occupations outside the home, but which in housekeeping are classed as one occupation for one person, and are supposed to be conducted with economy. Great as this task is in itself, it is usually made more difficult through the absence of any regular method of handling the various items of income and expense.

The very best way to reduce expense is to organize everything and set it down in black and white, and then cut out each item. This means having one's notes in a practical way. It may be unpleasant but, after all, one can be economical and yet respectable and comfortable if it is done with a cheerful spirit and in a dignified way.

There are especially prepared books for household use which may be procured cheaply, or you can make one to suit your own requirements from a blank book such as can be obtained at any stationery store. Here is a plan which you will find entirely feasible:

Get a book with pages about 10x12 inches. Then rule each two facing pages vertically so that there are, say, eighteen columns. The first space at the left is for the names of the various items of receipt and expenditure from day to day. The second column is for the amounts of the items of income received, the third column is for the figures of expenditure, and the fifth column across the two pages are for the classification of the various items carried out from column 2. For example, some such division of it may be as follows: Column 1, receipts; 2, expenditures; 3, food; 4, clothing; 5, help; 6, savings bank or real estate; 7, insurance; 8, car; 9, recreation; 10, gifts; 11, furniture; 12, water and sewer; 13, utilities; 14, lawn and garden; 15, miscellaneous expense.

Foot up each column at the bottom of each page and carry it forward to the top of the next, checking the correctness of your bookkeeping by seeing that the grand total of the totals of the last fifteen columns equals the total of column 2. Start anew each month and then you can easily compare the figures of one month with those of another in the same year, or you can make a comparison of corresponding months in different years. At the end of the year you can add up the monthly totals to get the totals for year.

The experience of one thrifty woman whom this line was described in a woman's magazine, are as follows: At the beginning of the year she made an appointment for groceries, meat, clothes, house furnishings, etc., on the basis of just experience and anticipated needs. This is one of the most important features of an efficient budget where the finances of many a family go on the rocks. Suppose our income for a month, we must not spend as much as we think nearly as much, for we must provide for the inevitable "rainy day."

Every family would set its face like flint on this to be avoided. After our estimates are made, we add up our figures. Alas! we find that we have planned to spend over a hundred dollars more than our income, counting the little margin allowed for the savings bank. What shall we do? Cut down on the savings account? No, never, but we set out to cut off a little here and there until the total comes within our income. Do we live up to our estimate in all cases? No, but as we see that we exceed our allowance in one department, we cut down in another and always come through the twelve months with a little to spare over our total estimate. This means that we do not cut down on the satisfaction of knowing that you are to have something to show for it all in the future.

It is a wise rule to set aside a certain per cent of your income regularly, considering that this per cent is insurance against the future. Look upon it as a debt which must be paid. As your income increases, your savings will increase.

WINDOWS

Your Bedroom Windows Open If You Want Good Health.

With the approach of cold weather we are finding the season when many people thoughtfully close all windows in the house and keep them closed day and night. This habit is the cause of much illness. We need air and we need fresh air. A great many people think only of warming their homes without any reference to the way in which the air is done. During the day when we are in our living rooms with our stoves and not provided for the cold, it is reasonable to expect that the air in the room will be fresh and pure for most of the time, but there is no reason why the rooms can not be flushed with fresh air at intervals. Every home should be thoroughly aired on several times a day, and you will know people of considerable means in whose houses the windows are never closed during the entire cold season. The custom of opening windows in our bedrooms at night is generally raising fevers. This was not and not very long ago either, that people were afraid of "catching cold."

It has been pointed out established that night air does differ from day air, except that it is free from dust and smoke, otherwise it is exactly the same thing, and as some people have not put it, it is the same air that is dangerous. Last night's open the window and let it out. There is no occasion for one hour's airing of the room if they are already covered up in their beds at night; the fact that the air blows about in the room does not bring with it the dust of the outside air. The air is pure, and is the best of health by assuring them a sleep which is restful and refreshing. This is not an idle theory; it has been tried out by a large number of people, and they all agree that they sleep better if they sleep in rooms in which the windows are also open late in tightly closed rooms. Try it now. The weather is not so cold that it will be disagreeable at all to make the experiment. If you have not done it previously, and by has time the weather gets severely cold you will regret to find your windows even in zero weather.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY DEVELOPING RAPIDLY

By Henry J. Young.

In our great commonwealth, growth seems to be the order of the day. The growth in the dairy industry is particularly noteworthy and represents a spark in the wheel of progress toward the rank which we should be commanding among the states of the Union. Our varied and almost boundless agricultural resources, which with the exception of a few, are in the northern part of the state, lay for agriculture, containing no hint of their possibilities in answer to the miracle water, responded to the hands of the farmer, and are bringing forth in abundance—yield, fruits, grains, grasses, in fact, any and all the products of the temperate zone.

Yet we have proceeded in the reclaiming and development of the soil and the raising of crops. We have been brought face to face with the fact that in view of our international location and transportation facilities, great crops alone cannot make our country a success. Neither can we build solidly upon them a permanent agricultural industry.

Within the past three years there has been growing in the mind of the Idaho farmer, except probably in the great grain fields of north Idaho, which those particular sections give a better idea of growth, the conviction that animal husbandry with the dairy cow as its central pivot, was to be the basis of our prosperity—and that through this system was agricultural Idaho to come into her own.

Acting on this conviction, our farmers have been racing out to the old or dairy states and are eager purchasers of their improved grades of dairy stock.

The writer estimates that there have been approximately 3,000 head of dairy breed stock brought into what is generally called the Idaho country during the past 18 months and other districts have been in a measure working along the same lines. Yet the farmers are generally teaching with the time of their fingers the dairy possibilities here.

trains, and when coupled with the fact that these cows represent an average value of from $5 to $10 each, he is here is destined to be our predominant industry. In the barren towns he will find well built and modernly equipped creameries, and in some a cheese factory turning out a product that compares favorably with that of the great central and eastern states. In this day of our fair trade, of Canada and the dragon's teeth we read that Columbus county is the center of the Idaho dairy industry. The circle told him to follow a cow wherever she went, and where she found a place to stop, he followed her. He obeyed the oracle, and there he found a city, and founded the city of Tilden. In the summer the farms of Idaho have begun to follow the cow.

We are beginning to reap an idea of our possibilities as producers of dairy products. We are beginning to realize that it will mean to us as a state to ship out the product of a half million dairy cows each year and have for sale a surplus of horses and high grade beefers. These things are possible. They are our possibilities. We are beginning to realize that it will mean to us as a state to ship out the product of a half million dairy cows each year and have for sale a surplus of horses and high grade beefers. These things are possible. They are our possibilities. Salve Can't Cure Eczema

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this: Don't impute the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy ointments, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid. WASH THE SKIN! A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Watergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done. A few cent bottles will start the cure and give you instant relief. We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this D.D.D. Prescription to a skin ailment. Get one here, and we want you to try it now on our positive guarantee. AER CHRISTMAS GIFT
by DOROTHY DIX

Copyright by Dutton Street, Inc. 1914
"I don't believe I have forgotten anybody I love," said Alice Mattland, and then she sat still. "Why do you not send him some little trifle, just a token that you have not forgotten the old days?" suggested her heart.

"Never," said Pride.

"Even casual acquaintances may exchange gifts at Christmas," urged her heart, persistently.

"It would cost my gift back at my feet," said Pride.

"Christmas," said her heart, "is the time of peace and good will towards men. It is a time when old wrongs should be forgotten, when old wounds should be mended, and hearts estranged should be reunited. Why do you not kiss and make up, an children do?"

"What?" cried Pride, "and be hunted once more?"

"You were very tired of the empty life, with its monotony of selfish gaudy," went on.

"You were that lonely and most forlorn of human beings, a great between and an orphan. All your life you had had everything you wanted, except the thing you wanted most of all—affection and disinterested love. Your father and mother had died before you could remember them, and you had been left to the care of a cold uncle and aunt, who thought that they had done their entire duty towards you by sending you to a boarding school, where you were properly fed, clothed and educated, and implanted in you a distrust of every human being who came about you.

acceptance reminder of the blessed season to her; the string of pearls that Alice had been openly admiring for months, and a check for Jack for his college books—once's relatives aren't bashful about letting one know what they want, and that is a comfort, at any rate, at Christmas.

"Then, unobtrusively, a gold bangle for Mayme Whitlow that she will take right down to the jeweler's to appraise, and a tortoise shell and ostrich feather fan for Sally Sitton; she'll be sure to need one somewhere, though she hasn't had the little cat, and a couple of brooches for dear old Mrs. Hutton, though where she'll put them in that never wear, and the seven cups that Aunt Maude coyly hinted would be an excellent idea for the children's Christmas gifts. He thought that the children would enjoy the idea of having their own Christmas gifts, and he thought that the children would enjoy the idea of having their own Christmas gifts.

"You never knew the joy that other rich had of being liked for themselves. When suitors came you were told they were fortune hunters. People, in speaking of you, never praised you for any charity of your own, or any grace, or accomplishment." They always said that you were rich, and you wondered sometimes if they knew how their words hurt, or how it must seem to a girl to come to believe that there was nothing about her that could be loved—that she must buy it with the money she had.

"I really began to realize that your whole nature was being warped by your environment, that your soul was being atrophied, and so you ran away from it all. You persuaded dear old Mrs. Hutton to take you away as her hired companion to a little quiet place, where no one would recognize you, and where you could be plain little cotton gowns, and snobs who would have flunked before the rich Miss Mattland snubbed and ignored you, but there was a man who saw the woman's heart under the snobby gown, and the woman's brain under the common hat, and he loved you, and asked you to be his wife. 'We shall be very poor,' he said, 'for I have my way yet to make in the world. But please God, we shall fight the battle out shoulder to shoulder.'

"You remember," went on her heart, "how, with your head upon his breast, and his arms around you, you planned out the future—the little house, with the rose above the door, the dear little necessities, the struggle, and the final success, and you drank deep of the cup of joy, for you knew life had made you rich at last, for you were loved for yourself alone—loved as a woman would be when a strong man trembles at her feet, and his smile grows soft and tender only for you. Then, at last, came the time when you had to tell him that you were none other than the rich Miss Mattland."

"And he went white as a death white, and he said, 'I would never have asked you to be his wife,' interrupted Pride.

"But it was then too late," triumphantly cried her heart, "he loved you, and nothing—not money, nor position, nor anything, could change that. You came home," continued her heart, "and your worldly wise uncle and aunt called him a fortune hunter, and said that he was going to marry you for your money. You did not believe them, but by and by, as you plunged into the old life, with its stunted affluence, and selfishness, and distaste for all that is high and true, the old distrust began to creep up and poison his again."

"It should have been," said Pride, "the should have known that you were merely playing."

"His life," said her heart, sadly, "and not thought him how to play. It had all been hard, bitter, and so when he saw you smiling into this other man's eyes with the counterfeit of the look you had worn when your head lay upon his breast, he thought you were foolish, and so he loved, and that you—you who had so much—had come down out of your high estate to rob him of the little he had, and to make life worthless."

"Then," said Pride, "desperately, she came and flung back your promise in your face, and told you that he was ashamed to have loved so poor a thing."

"You do not go at any man's bidding," cried her heart, "you saw him the other day. He looked ill, and worn, and poor. Tomorrow will be Christmas day."

"The next morning Miss Mattland arose early, and spent much time at her desk printing a large placard in bold and unmistakable letters. This would be a simple little thing—a long placard, and over this she drew a long coil. As her hand directed her astonished coachman to drive her to a certain building on one of those upper floors a struggling young lawyer was waiting for her, and he was gazing with his eye the photograph of a comely young woman. As she reached his office door, Miss Mattland's courage wavered and sank, but, taking a death grip upon it, she hurriedly passed the outer door, and before she knew it was in his presence.

"Alice!" he cried, starting to his feet, but she did not wait for him to speak.

"Tom," she said, hurriedly, "I have come to bring you a little Christmas present, and with that she dropped the enveloping cloak aside, and placed upon the table a large placard with the inscription—

FOR TOM, WITH ALICE'S LOVE.

A CHRISTMAS STORY

I SPENT a happy Christmas eve At "lithesome Emmedale. And sitting by the cozy hearth, I listened to this tale.

Old Thomas told it—he had seen Some seventy years or so, And over many lands had been.

"I remember to and fro. When I was but a boy," he said, "There dwelt not far from here A woman young, in widowhood— Her name was Helen Vere.

"One child she had—a little boy— Thereacredly need to say He was her only earthly joy. Her comfort night and day.

"Of woe she stroke his golden hair And sigh, and say, 'Ah, me, Oh, woe, weary, weary was the day Thy, father went to sea!'

"One day he to his mother said: 'I long so much to be A sailor, as my father was, And, like the wide, wide sea.'

"She grieved, although her heart Was bound up in her son— It may be bitter for us both— O, Lord, Thy will be done.

"You won't forget me, my dear boy When far away, I know, So with my blessing and my prayers, Go, my own Willie, go."

"Ten long, long years then rolled away, And sorely Helen pined; No letter from her son had come, No news of any kind."

Here Thomas poked the fire, and said: "The flames leap high and clear— 'Now I must shift the scene,' he said, 'And tell of Willie Vere;'

"When Willie left his mother's home He shipped on board the 'Tyne,' And all went happily and well Until they crossed the line.

"Then on their burst a furious storm That fierce grew each day, Until upon a lonely ledge The ship was cast away.

"And when the raging storm drew off, Its work of havoc done, Of all the crew but one survived, And Willie was that one.

"For two long years he strolled his gaze Across the wide, wide wave, But never came a friendly ship To succor or to save.

"For two long years his only food Was shell-fish from the shore, And wondrous eggs and leaves and fruit The feathery palm-trees bore.

"The long third year drew near, its close, And it was Christmas Day, Poor Willie sat upon the shore— His thoughts were far away.

"A hand is on his slender side, A loud voice greets his ear— 'What, mate! who would have thought to find A human being here?'

"Don't cry, my man, but come on board, Belay your thanks and fuss, We're sailing for a land of gold, So come along with us."

Here Thomas poked the fire, and said: "Again shift time and scene— The Christmas Eve at Emmedale, The wind blows wild and keen.

"Poor Helen epoches o'er the fire And slumbers at the storm; The latch is lifted, at the door There stands a manly form.

"'I've been a wanderer,' spoke the man— 'On many a far-off shore; I've traveled twenty thousand miles To look on home once more.

"She rose up slowly from her chair, Her lips no words expressed; She clung her arms around his neck And swooned upon his breast."

Here Thomas poked the fire, and turned His face to hide the tears That filled his eyes, when'er he told The story of the Vere.

"And then he said with tremulous voice— 'No words can tell the joy Of Helen when she looked again Upon her long-lost boy.

"They left the poor and humble cot That had such sorrows seen, And dwelt together in one home— Down by old Harroldan.

"Old William Vere, whom I know well, Has often said to me— 'Wanderer I read my mother's gift I took with me to sea.

"I feel I never can forget, That bliss mother's love, Or ever cease to render thanks To God the Lord above."

DRESSING SACKS AND OTHER DAINTY GIFTS

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY. What could please a dainty woman more than the little dressing sacks made of fluff or silk or any of the thin filmy fabrics of which there are so many? These fabrics are gay with printed flowers or coverings with dots and embossed designs. When a dainty girl or matron is used to be embellished with ruffles, embroidery and lace, ribbons and such things are not used on all of these pretty, becoming Jackie and lace makes a delightful and harmonious finish for them. A dressing sack of tulle lawn is shown here, cut from a piece covered with half-inch tufts. It has the popular kimono sleeve with plain binding set in through which an inch-wide ribbon is run. The bodice is not to top a half-inch narrower, the bodice being set on the left, is plain and finished with a narrow hand-banded hem. An edging of Val lace is whipped to the hem and finishes the neck and sleeves. Lines of narrow ribbon decorate the sleeves and are placed over the button fastening at the neck and waist.

The material for such a sack will cost anywhere from one to two dollars in good quality. A short kimono jacket of silk or printed cottons cuts next to nothing in the matter of material. Two yards of yard-wide goods is an ample allowance for it.

The woman who can sew neatly finds it possible to take the simplest materials—short lengths and remnants of goods that cost next to nothing—and convert them into just such pretty kimono and dressing sacks as are shown here. It requires very little expenditure of money, but some time and ability to make them up—but they are worth it.

Showing pretty and useful as well makes the best of all Christmas gifts to women friends. Here is a group of dainty feminine belongings all easy to make and costing anywhere from 50 cents to $2 or $3, depending upon the sort of lace used in them.

The bonnet-shaped cap is made of a half-yard of all-over lace and three-quarters of a yard of lace plaiting which is bought ready-made. A French having a diameter of 18 inches makes the crown. This is gathered into the bound edge of the ready-made plaiting. Two yards of ribbon an inch and a half wide forms a band about the face and neck finished with a little bow at each side. The plaiting is turned back about the face and tucked to place.

The crown of the other cap is made of two strips of ribbon and three of lace, each six inches wide. They are stuck together. A yard of plaited net makes the ruffle. The crown is sewed to the plaiting and an elastic 27 inches long is sewed at the joining. Satin ribbon one inch wide is gathered to form little flowers of four petals each. Four of these are set across the front of the cap with a hanging loop and end making a finish at the joining. The correct cover made of strips of joint d'espirt takes some time to make, but very little expense to buy the materials. The point d'espirt strips (or narrow edging of this pattern) are joined by an inexpensive cluny pattern of insertion. A heading of Swiss embroidery about the top and the waist carries a satin ribbon less than an inch wide. A very narrow Val edge finishes the top and the shoulder straps are made of these narrow insertions stitched together.

These airy bits of froxy are meant to wear under thin dresses, for special occasions. They are so pretty, the recipient is sure to treasure them and enjoy the luxury of wearing them.

CHRISTMAS SURPRISE

By THOMAS L. MASSON.

was just going out, shut the door,
came back, and sat down in front of his wife.

"My dear girl," he said, "I am glad that you have brought this up, because we may well settle it now as at any other time. You know that for years we have been doing this sort of thing every Christmas." About this time we both declare that we won't give each other anything; then, just before Christmas, we sneak out, and each of us buys the other a present. This year it will be the same. We will promise faithfully not to do it; but, just as sure as fate, we shall break our word."

"In view of this alarming fact, that we are apparently the slaves of a yearly habit, what have you to suggest?"

"Simply this—that we each of us agree now to buy the other a present."
"I know that you will get me something I don't want!"

"And I know that you will do the same; but isn't that what we have been doing all along?"

"Then I don't see that we have gained anything."
"Haven't you? Why not? Aren't you doing it openly? Think of the moral uplift!"

Mrs. Whittier shook her head.
"I don't agree with you," she said.
"I think it would be much better for us to select ourselves the presents we want. If you like, you can come with me while I get mine."

"Nonsense! That won't do at all. It is absolutely necessary for us to carry out the element of surprise. There is some sneaking, contemptible trait in human nature which makes us want, once a year, to surprise others. That is at the basis of all Christmas giving.
It's a kind of impulsive, irresponsible stunt which impels us to buy something that we delude ourselves into believing the recipient is crazy for;
while all the time we ought to know that he or she wants the very thing we buy for him or her. We do not buy on both of this foolish pleasure"

Never! The only thing to do is to be natural. I therefore announce to you that I am going to surprise you with a present; and you must promise to do the same with me."

Mrs. Whittier
considered.
"Well," she said
at last, "I suppose that is really the best thing for us
to do—let's both agree to do it!"
When Christmas
eve came, therefore—the time
when the Whittiers were accustomed to "spring" their annual surprises—
each of them bore that perfectly confident and identically joyful air which usually preceded the presentation of something we think the other person has been longing for.

"Whittier advanced with a smile.
"My dear," he said, "I have the surprise of a lifetime for you."
"Oh, do tell me!" said Mrs. Whittier, with a hypocritical air of gratified anticipation; although inwardly she shrank from the ordeal. "I know it is something that I want!"

"What do you suppose it is?" her husband cheerfully inquired.
"I haven't the least idea."
"Well—let's both guess!"
"Oh, I couldn't! Tell me, quick!"
"Well, it's absolutely nothing. Now, isn't that a surprise?"

Mrs. Whittier burst into tears.
"You haven't things!" she exclaimed.
"I shall never forgive you!"
"But—"

"Don't you know that it isn't the value of the thing, I might not have liked it; but the thought that you had tried to please me would have been everything. I didn't do that to you!"

Whittier, beside himself with sudden remorse, sprang to her side.
"I was only joking," he exclaimed breathlessly. "Honest, I was only joking. What have you got for me?"

She drew from a neighboring closet
a dressing-sack, over which Whittier went into raptures, all the time feeling like a criminal. Then, with a solemn air, he drew from his pocket a twenty-dollar bill.

"If you don't like it," he said, "you can exchange it for something else."
Mrs. Whittier shook her head.
"You didn't intend to give it to me, and I'm not going to take it now," she said. "It was an afterthought."

"But—"
She folded it up and put it back into his waistcoat pocket.
"I'll forgive you this time," she smiled; "but remember, my dear, that it is very much better to go on year after year giving each other things that we don't want than to attempt to break up an old habit; which, after all, foolish as it seems, is founded upon a genuine human sentiment"

SOME ODD THINGS
ABOUT CHRISTMAS

IN Greece the halli-mantrol are generally represented as more tricky, sprites who live, as a rule, underground, appearing to men only on the nights of the Year has-ween. In some parts of England they appear on December 25 and January 6. They pass the days during this period in dark caverns, where they subsist on serpents and li-ards, and come forth to dance in the moonlight, either alone or in company with the mermaids, and also with mortal women. If they can lure any to join them.

INDIANS say the best time to catch a deer is on Christmas night at twelve o'clock, when they believe the deer kneels.

ROMANIAN girls can learn, during the Christmas season, whether or not they are going to be married within the coming year. At midnight they enter the stable and strike the foot of the first ox they come across, saying: "This year, next year." If the ox gets up at the first stroke the girl will marry within the year; if it gets up at the second stroke her marriage will take place the year following; if it does not get up at all the gods have not yet decided on her wedding date.

IN many countries where they go by the old calendar Christmas is celebrated January 6, the celebration
beginning twelve days before.

CAKES weighing from one to twelve pounds are made by English staid. They place them in exalted position and play to them, repeating, as they say they do, St. Nicholas. Of rye bread they make a loaf or hog, six or seven inches high, with gold around and tall, with gold rings around its necks. The business men put goods they have exhibited for sale on a revolving disk and rotate them off.

KLINGEST (King Jesus or Child Jesus) presides over all Christmas celebrations in Schleswig-Holstein. He is supposed to bring presents to the children, and sometimes punishes naughty ones.

ON Christmas day in Dittmarsh the cattle get an extra allowance of fodder. The cats and dogs, too, get better meals. At times the cattle are adorned to the higher joys to the extent that a candle is placed above
the trough from which they feed, just as each member of the family has his own candle, made by himself.
These candles must be heavy and big,
for the one that goes out first will die
first.

LITTLE CHOIR SISTER

HEY called her the Choir Sister, because she was the daughter of the Choir Mother. Children have mothers to mend their clothes—and see that their faces and hands are clean before they march into church. The Choir Mother was the "mum" of the janitor of the church where the choir sang, and she loved her.

It was easy to like the Choir Sister, too, because she played ball with the boys before rehearsals. And those nights when the Choir Master and them invited their friends in for games she was the girl most of them wanted for a partner.

So anyone can see why the boys were blue when Ricky Jackson, her brother, came into the choir room Christmas eve and said:

"Mill" (short for Mildred, her real name) "Isn't going to have any Christmas!"

The boys stopped right there, some with their choir clothes only half on. If they didn't find out right away what was the matter with the Choir Sister, the Christmas eve service would have to go without their singing.

So Ricky told how she had come down that morning with a funny tired feeling, and sniffles, and hot cheeks, and had to stay in bed, and how she cried when she thought of the tree she was going to miss.

You can see why that Christmas eve service was not as happy as it should have been for these boys. Afterward, when the tree was lighted with the starlike candles and the Sunday school room was filled with boys and girls opening their presents, each choir boy was thinking of the Choir Sister, lying there at home, wishing she could be with them.

Next day people in church thought the boys sang the Christmas hymns better than ever. But the people did not know that just before the boys marched in the Choir Master had told them a plan by which the Choir Sister would have a Christmas she would never forget.

At evening the janitor's doorknob rang. The Choir Mother opened it, and in came the Choir Master and a lot of boys with red cheeks and smiling faces. Back of the others four of the biggest boys dragged through the door a small Christmas tree.

They set the tree up in the parlor. Everyone was still for they didn't want the Choir Sister to know anything about it till it was all ready. Soon the candles were in place, and the trimmings and they lit the candles, and each boy placed a package under the tree, and then a wonderful usage happened:

The door opened and the Choir Mother and the Choir Master walked in, carrying between them a little sleigher, and upon that lay the Choir Sister.

You should have seen her face! You could almost see the light of the candles sparkling in it, so happy was she! The boys held their breath, wondering what she would say. Her little cheeks glowed as she sat up straight and held her arms out toward the tree. And her eyes sparkled as she cried:

"Oh! my Christmas tree!"

Then she turned to the boys, and said:

"Oh! My Dear Choir Brothers!" Then she cried a little, just because she was happy, and some of the boys sniffled a bit, just because she was crying. Then there was all the jolly fun that goes with a tree.

But soon they took her away. She was so tired that she fell asleep right after they put her back in bed. She dreamed that she saw a flock of sheep with their shepherds on a great plain. Suddenly there was a great light from above and she seemed to hear angels singing.

She awoke. The singing did not stop. She arose and opened the window.

There, in the moonlight under her window stood her Choir Brothers with lighted candles, like the Christmas carol singers of Old England. They were singing this hymn:

"Hark! the Herald Angels sing."

When the verse was finished the Choir Sister leaped out and called down to them:

"Brothers, you have made me love God a whole lot more. A merry Christmas to you all!"

"And to you!" they echoed.

As the Choir Sister crept back to bed she heard the voices of the boys die away in the distance. These chimbo of bells somewhere out in the great snow-white world rang out the very hymn the boys had been singing, and the Choir Sister fell asleep.

HER TOKEN OF LOVE

By E. KIER

It was on the following evening that Frederick Allison suddenly turned to his wife. After dinner, saying:

"Oh, Juliet, I want to show you a job that I bought for myself today. It's just the thing I've been wanting for a long time."

Juliet's enthusiasm over it was much forced, as her husband might easily have seen, and perhaps did see. After they had dropped the subject she happened to glance at his scribble and—

"Now for spring up within her. She would get him a scribble for Christmas, for his old one was rather out of style and never had been an expensive one, anyway."

"By the way, dear," said Allison the next evening, "I bought something today that I'd like to have you look at."

Of course, it was a scarf. Juliet knew it would be the moment she saw the these paper package which he fished out of his vest pocket. She pretended, with a brave heart, to think it was very pretty, but she fancied that she could have made a better selection if he had only permitted her to have the choice.

At the office Allison had told the boys of the splendid plan he had hit upon for the purpose of keeping his wife from buying impossible things in the shops at Christmas presents for him, and it was with great satisfaction that he reported day after day how he was progressing.

Christmas was only a week away and Juliet saw a way a long time that night trying to think what present she could get for her husband. There were the new books, but he had informed her that he didn't want to see the library, and he never read any of the modern novels. Ah, a happy thought came to her. Some—where she had seen a metal box in which cigars could be kept fresh and moist. She would get a box of that kind for Frederick, dear old fellow. It happened, however, that Frederick came home the next evening with a metal cigar box and enough cigars, as he cheerfully informed her, to last him all winter.

Then it was that the iron-colored Juliet Allison's wife. She decided to give up the idea of making her husband a Christmas present that would be to any wise distinctive. She would merely get him a pair of gloves and perhaps a few handkerchiefs. Hardly had she adopted this resolution, however, before he turned to her saying:

"I happened to be in Withers, so I this afternoon to get some shirts, and I thought I might as well lay in a supply of gloves, handkerchiefs and suspenders. They'll probably be sent out tomorrow."

"I'm so glad," replied Juliet. "You need gloves and handkerchiefs, too. Of course, I don't know so much about your suspenders and I suppose you bought all the halfbores you'll need."

"Yes, I forgot to mention that I got dozen pair."

"And you have all the cuff buttons and studs and such things that you need, haven't you?"

"Enough to last me a lifetime."

She went back to her chair and sat for a long time gazing at the boxes which flickered around the gas. The daily paper was lying on the table at her elbow, and her glance at it fell upon some large black letters which presently resolved themselves into words. Then she read this advertisement:

"There, dear, is a set of things that you probably didn't think of when you were buying everything you thought I might possibly want to give you for a present. You don't need them yet, but you probably will some day, and I thought it would be nice to get them now, seeing that they were offered at a bargain."

He opened the case looked at the set of teeth it contained and said:

"Let's go to breakfast. I want to sit into something."

TURKEY TROT FOE TO BEAUTY

Russian—Princess—Warms—American—Girls—Against—the—Wild—New—Dance.

New York—Princess—Lowenstein the wife of a Russian nobleman and soldier who fell in the Philippines at the time Aguinaldo was captured, warns the American girls against turkey trotting as a foe to beauty.

"These wild new dances," the princess said, "which your girls are doing day in and day out are showing their effects. The dancers get to look like old, haggard women. The American girls I'm used to for her looks, and justly, too; but she certainly will lose all her freshness and sweetness if she persists in keeping up this everlasting bacchanalian dancing."

A MEMORABLE TREAT

The colonel sat comfortably in his chair. "And what a dramatical through a heavy cloud of hats at the Christmas crowd. "Ha-ha! colonel. "I had I've found you looking sad!" And a friend who had come up from behind and slapped him affectionately on the shoulder pulled a big chair alongside and sat down. The colonel leaned farther back in the enveloping leather and a volley of expanding rings poured from beneath the carefully trimmed white mustache. "That," he said, with a wave of his hand toward the throngs, "is me to thinking of how in my country school-days we big, had boys sometimes looked the teacher out to make me give us a Christmas treat. At the precise moment you soaked me on the shoulder I was thinking of the time we looked out our teacher. We noticed him a week beforehand that we expected him to give us a nice, substantial treat when school let out, as we said, on Christmas eve. He had been a good-natured fellow and had succeeded in keeping on good terms with us except in spite of us, so at, we wanted, for the reason, to let him off as easily as possible, so, spelled only a box of oranges and a box of candy. "I'll think about it," he said, laughing, and so supposed it was as good as agreed to. "So when on the morning of Christmas Eve day Mr. Teacher arrived without anything that possibly could contain a treat, we were hurt—doubtly hurt to think that a supposed friend would treat us so. We silently waited till the noon hour, and when lunch-boys had been hurriedly gulped, two of us were detailed to get him away from the school house on some pretext or other. They succeeded, but he didn't stay long, as it was a cold day and there was snow. When he found the door locked he rattled the knob and called: "Open the door, please! It is I, Mr. C. "Sorry," one of the boys replied through the keyhole, "but you'll have to give us a Christmas treat before we let you in." "Come, boys, come," he said sternly. "It is too cold for joking. Let me in at once!" "We're not joking; we yelled back. "We want a treat. Go to the store and see a big box of oranges and a big box of candy and have them here for this afternoon, and will open the door. Or, if you'll promise on your word of honor, we'll let you in." "For answer he pounded on the door and thundered. "Boys, I order you to open this door. What are you doing?" "Treat!" was our ultimatum. "Followed several minutes of silence and suspense, then he called to us: "Well, boys, I suppose the biggest box of oranges and the biggest box of candy will have to surrender. You may open the door. I will treat!" "The door was opened slowly, cautiously, for we were doubtful, almost distrustful, but the answer— "It is all right, boys," he assured us. "I have promised. We might as well close now till after the New Year's holiday. While I am going for the treat I want you all to get your books ready so I can lock the school house. I hope to be back with your treat within an hour." "Then he started in the brisk walk toward a little country town about three miles away. "It was a few minutes after two o'clock when a belated, drawn by a big, frothy horse, gay with white lights, glided up before the schoolhouse door. Mr. Teacher, looking as pleasant as any of us, jumped out and said: "Here you are! I am going to leave you to your treat to enjoy your treat," he explained, as he heartily fastened the window shutters and shut up the stove. He then locked the door and put the key in his pocket. By that time the boys had unrolled the horse and Mr. C. had opened himself his seat on the sled. "Merry Christmas to all!" he shouted. "The same to you!" we chorused. "Very heartily!" he called. The boxes. The lid came off the box marked oranges first, and soap was grabbed and the tissue wrapping removed. "Then there was a wild yell—'Vastated!' Nothing but old potatoes!" "We glanced sheepishly at the big girls' who were holding their breath in a terror of dread we took the top off the box labeled candy. Oh, utterly shattered hopes! The box was full of nice white candies!" The ample shoulders and girls of the colonel's friend shook freely. "Um," he said. "He was some teacher." "Yes, he," agreed the colonel. "If we boys had had money enough I think we'd have come pretty near to buying him a gold watch."—Detroit Free Press.

All Ladies' Tailored and Fancy Suits Reduced---Clearance Prices on All

This is a very timely happening for you, with the Christmas spirit in the air. Every garment in the store has been reduced, Coats and Suits. One piece dresses, separate skirts, also all of the children's wearables. The saving to you is considerable, we did not price them away up, at the beginning of the season—no, that would not be fair to those who bought early, even though they did get the best pick. We tell you frankly that the season has been backward and we find ourselves with too many on hand, consequently they are being genuinely sacrificed.
