OUR FIRST SINGLE-TAX CITY.
The most important election that was held last month, in the opinion of single-taxers, took place in Pueblo, Colorado. Other cities, observing the single-tax in Pueblo must furnish an object lesson that must touch other cities the wisdom of adopting the same policy. The experience of New Zealand, Australia, and Canada has shown that a city which has once adopted the single-tax system has voluntarily abandoned it. That is the difference between adoption of a fundamental reform and adoption of such superficial reform measures as re-organizing re-elected officials with better terms. While the nation was watching New York City to see whether the voters would overthrow an individual boss, the voters of Pueblo struck at the foundation of bossism. Little Pueblo has done far more than big New York to put an end forever to boss rule.—Literary Digest.

DEPOSIT GUARANTEE IN THE CURRENCY BILL.
Mr. Bryan's former advocacy of bank-deposit guarantees may be held responsible by some for the appearance of a guaranty plan in the currency bill. Yet the action of the Democratic senators in caucus seems to have been immediately suggested rather by Republicans and anti-administration Democrats than by the secretary of state. The name of Senator Hitchcock (Dem.) is associated with the authority report on the banking and currency committee, but with him were such Republicans as Senators Brewster, Crawford, and McLean. One improvement they decided to put in the Glass bill was a provision for a "depositors' insurance fund." This, remarks the New York Sun (Ind.), "seems to have caught the fancy of the Democratic caucus, and something of the sort" to The Sun's disgust—"is prohibited by the bill which the senate will be asked to pass." According to the summary of the caucus plan in The Sun's Washington correspondent, one-third of the "surplus profits from the reserve associations above the cost of conducting the banks and the payment of dividends, and after a surplus of 20 per cent has been accumulated," shall be "devoted to a guaranty fund to reimburse depositors in the reserve banks against loss. The amendment divides the surplus profits in three equal parts, one part to go to this guaranty fund for depositors, another to refund the 2 per cent bonds now used as a basis of circulation of national bank notes, and the third to be turned back to the bankers in the reserve association as extra profit." This says the Philadelphia Record (Ind. Dem.). A zealous supporter of the amendment, "is not a very objectionable proposal, nor a very important one."

Good Reasoning In Home Building
It seems natural with good citizens, but there is no denying the fact that our forefathers gave home-building a grand boost for all time when they allowed to a man selected wood as the best material. There's absolutely no doubt they adopted it not alone because of its low cost, but also because it afforded the most sanitary homes. For the same reasons people are still using wood to build homes. It's one thing in the world supplied by Nature that human hands and hands have not been able to improve upon. The lumber, however, made these days from Nature's wood does show a slight improvement—due to a man's ingenuity in the mill—and the stock we want to furnish you for your new home is truly a marvel in smoothness, grain, color, and texture.

"There's No Place Like Home."

GEM STATE LUMBER CO.

calone one of the new city commissioners is an out-and-out single-taxer, while "two members of the old board which had endeavored to keep the single-tax amendment off of the ballot were recalled." Quoting further from The Public's publicity campaign carried out on the Pueblo victory:

"In declaring for the single tax in municipal affairs the voters of the city have put themselves on record as favoring the first effective step toward social justice. Comparatively few persons, outside of Pueblo, were aware in this city that in that small city was being fought an issue of more importance than any issue at stake in the country's metropolis. Not many more realize that fact even now. But it is a fact nevertheless. The pulling into effect of single-tax-in-Pueblo must furnish an object lesson that must touch other cities the wisdom of adopting the same policy. The experience of New Zealand, Australia, and Canada has shown that a city which has once adopted the single-tax system has voluntarily abandoned it. That is the difference between adoption of a fundamental reform and adoption of such superficial reform measures as re-organizing re-elected officials with better terms. While the nation was watching New York City to see whether the voters would overthrow an individual boss, the voters of Pueblo struck at the foundation of bossism. tionable proposal, nor a very important one."
"It is a small thing compared with the guaranteeing of deposits that has been proposed at various times and tried in a state or two." The guaranteeing of bank deposits by all the banks acting mutually puts a premium on good banking and imposes a penalty on bad banking.

"That objection does not apply to this plan for using a small part of the profits of the regional reserve banks to insure their deposits. The deposits will be made by the member banks, which will be represented on the directors of the regional banks. * * * It is really a mutual insurance scheme by banks in a position to regulate the risks incurred by the regional banks. The Sun will have none of it. It may be deemed guaranty "in its broadest sense," but banking judgment will regard it as only a beginning. And we read further: "Opinion will probably be that once the new banking system is headed in that direction, no provision can safely be made about a stopping place. The best banks will not be anxious to get caught in the tails of such a movement. Yet these are the banks which above all the new banking system should comprise for the successful operation of the financial machinery. It will be a poor system made up chiefly of banks from which the conscientious financial institutions are eliminated.

"All experience indicates that the best guaranty of bank deposits is a good banking system and good banking under intelligent and alert government supervision."

"Another conservative editor of the projection of the guaranty of bank deposits. Into the currency situation seems 'likely to be more diverting than the red herring Mr. Vanderbilt is alleged to have drawn across the trail some time ago.' And the St. Louis Globe-Democrat's (Rev.) final judgment is that "the currency measure is a constant source of serious experiments without adding this figural heresy to the mixture. The administration is said to be unfavorable to it. If offered in good faith, it would be promptly and energetically rejected, regardless of party lines. If designed to embarrass the administration, it deserves the same treatment."—Literary Digest.

DRIVES AUTO IN SNOW

Drive From Twin Falls to Hellsfield, Part of Way in 8 to 10 Inches of Snow

Messrs. Jamerson and Hitchcock came over from Twin Falls Sunday in the Jamerson auto, just to show the people what an auto could do in the winter time, and under adverse conditions for traveling. The distance is about 55 miles, and the snow was from 6 to 8 inches deep all the way with an occasional snow drift. They made the trip in five hours, however, this including the time they spent in Hellsfield, where they had lunch. It is a record as a trail-blazer, tell the story.—Richfield Herald.

BREAKS AMERICAN RECORD

Payette Man is Winner When it Comes to Hauling Apples

The American potato record was broken by an Idahoan this year. He is the record holder for the state, with the record in acre yield—753 bushels and 29 1/2 pounds of potatoes. The present market value per acre is $142.77. The record was set by a man in the county, who assisted in harvesting the crop, very under oath as to the measurement of both the ground and the potatoes.

Prior to 1909 Mr. Gilmore was a hotel man, without experience in farming. He bought the 13 1/2 potato contest at Burley, he won the second prize of $250 on potatoes. This year's record gives him the title of "Potato Wizard." His record fully demonstrates that there are great opportunities in the Idaho farm.—Capital News.

RUNAWAY HORSES KILLED

Fast Train at Parma Hills Team of Runaways

While returning from the dance in Parma Thursday night Lester Howell was the recipient of a huge bunch of especially hard luck. He was driving a team belonging to W. H. Ross, and when just out of town the horses became frightened and bolted. They took full control of the rig, which was almost entirely destroyed, and started to run. They were heading toward the depot and started toward it at a lively clip, running up Main street and crossing on to the railroad track just above the depot. Their tracks showed that they were running straight up the railroad track when they were struck by No. 18, a fast passenger train, and instantly killed. The fatal accident occurred as nearly as could be ascertained, just below the station house. One of the horses was carried about 100 feet and the other about 50 feet up the track from the place where they were struck by the engine. Owing to the darkness the horses were found only in the early Friday morning.—Parma Herald.

WALLACE POSTOFFICE ROBBED

Mystery Surrounds Early Sunday Morning Crime—Officers Are Busy

Wallace—Without leaving as much as a finger print as a clue, burglars Saturday night robbed the local postoffice at Wallace, more than $1,000, and have apparently made good their escape; the robbery being committed between 1:30 and 6 o'clock Sunday morning.

The registered mail on Saturday night's Spokane train contained these $2000 registered packages, consigned from the Old National bank of Spokane to the First National bank of Mullan; the money being forwarded in order that local institutions might be able to handle the proceeds of the Morning Gold Hunter, Showman and other mines of the Mullan district. The money was in the hands of the holder these registered packages a

GRANDPA SQUELCHES A CANARD

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

Now Alferd Potts, he say he know
There isn't any Santy Claus!
He say his pa he tell him so
An' that he tell him so buhcause
He say that Alferd's old enough
Not to buhlieve that kind o' stuff.
But grampa say that Alferd's wrong,
And grampa has liv'd awful long.

My grampa he just laugh when I
Tell him what Alferd Potts he said.
Grampa say: "Ain't a Santy? My!
I hadn't heard that he was dead.
W'y, Santy's whole lots older 'n me—
He came to my first Christmas-tree."
So Alferd Potts tell 'wha am't so,
Buhcause my grampa ought to know.

My-grampa take me on his lap—
An' say, "I mind as plain as day.
When I was just a little chap
About your size, how some one say
There ain't a Santy Claus, an' how
It make me feel like you do now.
An' for a while I putty near Buhlieved it, too, but it seemed queer."

My grampa say 't Santy Claus
He's fond o' little girls an' boys
That always minds their pas an' mas
An' never makes un-seem-ly noise.
An' he say he has seen him—Yes!
O, most a thousand times, I guess.
"How does he look?" he say. "Let's see.
Well, what if he looks some like me?"

I ast my grampa after while
If Santy Claus is rully so,
An' then he look at me, an' smile;
An' say, "When you're my age, you'll know
That what is good is always true."
So now, then! Alferd never knew
So much, him nor that pa o' his
Is half as old as grampa is!

ASANTA CLAUS GIFT

ROSEY HAGGERTY pulled the worn coat more closely about her frail form as she hurried out into the cheerless dawn of the raw December day. The little lane sister—Maggie—made life possible. The little sister had never walked, but the small room where she lived was kept as sunny bright as was possible, even when it meant that the older sister went oftentimes hungry to bed.

As she climbed wearily to the office, grim and unbecomingly in the morning light, and prepared for the rough work ahead, her mind roved again and again to the question asked in such a pleading voice. "Sister Rosey, don't you think Irie will bring me a gold locket—a heart-shaped one like Miss Millie had on the day she called?"

A gold locket! Rosey's ears and nostrils, resulting in the magnificent purchase of a few candy toys, a new dress and a gingerbread man, suddenly sank into nothingness beside the startling significance of this childish question.

Other years she had glanced averted dollars from generous employers at Christmas time. Perhaps she might manage to get one that was not really, truly gold all the way through. She scribbled away vigorously. The dust flew before her persistent onslaught. And all through the hours only one thought was in those blue eyes.

The hour came that saw the finish of her labor—two crisp dollar bills and some loose change represented her gift for the day—money was not sleeping child turn on her pillow, but plentiful this year. The Christmas eve shoppers pushed and jostled her as she made her way along the crowded thoroughfare, where bright stores displayed their wares in tempting array. Carefully separating one of the new bills and putting it aside for the rent, she entered a store that promised the trinket she was looking for. The third saleslady answered the question that was put to her politely, undoubtedly reading a pathetic story in the pale face before her. No, she did not think it would be possible to get a gold locket, nor even an imitation one, for the amount mentioned. Why did the lady not try to purchase a pretty string of beads? Stuttering a low thanks for the suggestion, the disappointed woman turned once more to the street, depressed and forlorn, and decided to return home and make the best of what she had.

Suddenly her foot kicked something on the snowy pavement; it was a little square, rubber-bound package. Picking it up she blew down the street toward the spot she called home. Hitting it in her dress, she prepared this simple evening meal and after a few glasses coaxed the little sister off to sleep.

Nimbly and quickly the work-around and unbecomingly disgraced descended a small chair beside the child's bed; one by one the little dress, the candy animals and the gingerbread man took their places of honor to await a pair of blue eyes to the early dawn.

All this while the little square package lay like a bit of lead against the eager woman's breast. At the trembling fingers she removed the rubber bands and tissue wrappings. A loud exclamation of joy made the sleeping child turn on her pillow, but she did not waken. On a delicate and blue cotton, swung on a chain as delicate as a thread hung a toy gold locket. A queer half-settled feeling suddenly swept over the little woman, as she realized that this did not belong to her, a white card, fell from the wrapping and fluttered to the floor. Picking it up she read:

"Merry Christmas to Maggie."

She laughed with the joy of possession. It was for Maggie, and taking it over to the little chair, she hung it lovingly around the neck of the gingerbread man.

The Real Spirit of Christmas.

How often have I heard the word: "I wish I were rich at Christmas-time, for then I could do so much for others," writes Margaret Woodward in an article on the problem of Christmas giving, in Suburban Life. "How strange it is that we never seem to learn the lesson that it is not the giving of things, but the giving of self, that counts!—It is the spirit of Christmas which we must strive after—not the multiplication of gifts."

Christmas Athletics.

"Perley—Hallo, Jim! Going to take Christmas quietly?"
"Jim—No. Going to devote it to athletics."
"Perley—Good. What kind? Golf or football?"
"Jim—Neither. I am going to carve a turkey I bred myself for ten months."

GIRDLE OR SASH GIFT

"SHE" WILL WELCOME

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY.
The question that perplexes us at Christmas time more than any other—except one—is "What shall I get for her?" And the exception here, "What shall I get for him?" Every year brings a lot of novelties in dress accessories, whose ornaments and fascinating jewelry add up the thousand and one things that women require, so that selecting a present for woman, or girls is a matter of choosing one from among the many fascinating novelties displayed in the shops.

Fashion helps us out this year; such is the fad for sashes and girdles that everybody wants not one but several. So let "when in doubt buy a sash" govern you and you will probably succeed in delighting every one of those you remember with one of those tremendously popular and beautiful dress accessories.

Several new models in sashes and girdles are shown here. Examples of all the popular new ribbons appear in the sashes pictured here. In Figure 1, a wide, soft, masculine is shown which makes the most graceful of girdles. This one is in a deep rose color. The end of the girdle is finished with a hemstitched hem.

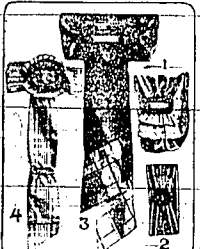

Figure 2 is a singular girdle in a narrower and heavier ribbon. It is a gay Roman striped affair to be worn with cloth or other afternoon gowns and with street dresses. Its buckle is smaller and an oval form. The end is turned under, forming a three-inch loop. Very little ribbon is required for this, about three-quarters of a yard for the average waist.

One of the prettiest designs is pictured in Figure 3. It is a plain girdle of black satin ribbon having two ends finished with plaid ribbon—it is boned at the gathered ends and fastened with hooks and eyes. The plaid ribbon is machine attached to the end with white silk thread.

The plaid sash in Figure 4 is one of the smartest of the new designs. The buckle at the waist is made of silk in the prevailing color of the plaid and is a second smaller buckle fastens the hanging loop and end together.

A more extravagant design is used for the next model that appears in any of the others. In Figure 5 a silk and velvet is shown having a dark green ground in-satin will-rose-in-salad colors and follows in blured outlines covering the surface. The girdle is laid in loose, irregular folds and stayed with bones. The shorter end overlapping the girdle is thirteen inches long and the longer end, thirteen. The ends are finished with plain green velvet ribbon machine attached to place. It is an inch wide.

A gay ribbon in a broken plaid and one color is pictured in Figure 6. It is dark gray with blue and rose and green in markings and border. The buckle is in green velvet. A plain tailored sash with plaid girdle is among the best and most popular of all the new ideas. It has a novel finish. A single end overlaps the girdle (which is stiffened with a small piece of buckram at this point). The end is laid in a shallow plait that ends with small silk covered buttons and a finish in the shape of two narrow ruffles is sewed under the ribbons to the buckram. Narrow brocaded ribbons and many wide designs appear among the dressier models. But above all the three-yard sash of wide black ribbon known as the "wlabbone" sash has captured the fancy of fashion's devotees. Some women simplify the buying of Christmas presents by choosing such a such pretty "fad" and confiding them to the

BEAVERS ALONG THE BIG WOOD

Challenger Has Not Driven Them Entirely Out of the Country.

W. H. Lamb, who spent some of the late November weather camping and fishing along the Big Wood river below the dam, says that there are quite a few beavers there, despite the prohibitionist's claim that they are entirely driven out of this part of the country. He says that he found not a few tracks where trappers had been at work; their stakes set along the river bank, where they had attached their traps. He was not able to say that any beaver had been caught, though the work was apparently that of men who knew how to trap. If any of the animals had been taken, their work would have been done, but he says that he was so well concealed that no incriminating evidence was found—except the stakes, which of themselves prove nothing save that someone had tried to catch the beavers.

Quite a few muskrats and muskrats are being taken along the Little Wood river, and muskrats in the canals away from the river. The prices of furs have gone so high that almost any kind of a wild skin is worth catching in Iowa. Big fat, beautiful skins, and sold them for 8 or 12 cents apiece. The muskrat brings from $4 to $7.50 apiece. There are said to be a good many bobcats out along the Big Wood river, and there are enough coonotes all over the country to make trapping profitable—Richard Tucker.

OF INTEREST TO FRUIT GROWERS

The Growing of Apples in Southern Idaho.

In selecting a location for profitable commercial orcharding the wise business man will carefully study: first, the climate; second, the soil; and third, transportation, the latter of equal importance to either of the others.

Consulting the weather bureau of Boise some years ago the officials of that department kindly placed at my disposal records of the weather here from Grand Junction, Colorado; Wenatchee and Yakima Valleys, Washington; and Hood River, Oregon, and these reports showed with remarkable clearness the danger from freezing weather in the month of April that the conditions are to danger from spring frosts in Southern Idaho were much less hazardous in the Boise district, which fairly represents Southern Idaho, than in the other districts named. The conformations of the country sheltered somewhat from violent storms from the northwest and its moderate elevation of from two thousand to three thousand feet all combine to give the Boise basin and Southern Idaho the most favorable condition for successful growing of winter apples.

Harvest.

From extended observations by the horticultural department of the United States the fact has been developed that the most favorable conditions for the growing of winter apples lie between an elevation of 2000 and 3000 feet. At the higher elevation at which apples are grown in commercial quantities the season is shortened at each end. Below an elevation of two thousand feet the keeping quality of the fruit is lessened. Between two and three thousand feet in most districts the season is long enough for proper ripening and coloring of the fruit. The keeping quality of the same is such as to make fruit growing under such conditions attractive to the commercial buyer for the winter and spring markets. In the Boise basin many varieties of winter apples keep in common farm cellars without extra care until March, April, and May, and sometimes June.

Soil.

The soil of Southern Idaho, and particularly in the Snake River Valley, and the tributaries of the Snake, consists of an admixture of loam, sand, silt and volcanic ash as to give conditions of unusual fertility. The great depth of this soil in many districts makes it practically inexhaustible if suitably handled and properly cultivated.

Transportation.

The apple crop in Southern Colorado must be moved up very heavy grades and over high mountain passes. The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern cross the mountains at a lower elevation than the Colorado system. The Harriman system among these trans-continental systems is the strongest, as it has done and is doing more work in the lowering of grades, straightening of curves and down-tracking than any other system. Five million dollars has been appropriated for the development of double-tracking and other improvements for this system, all to be completed prior to the Panama exhibition in 1915.

Traveling over the different systems on notes with interest the Jones freight trains moving over the Oregon Short Line, a part of the Harriman system. This assures the commercial orchardist that when his crop of fruit is ready to be moved the Harriman system will be able to supply cars and have power to move the crop market with greater expedition and certainty than any other system.

Irrigation.

From Colorado to New York often times the site of the fruit is lessened and its quality impaired by July, August, and September drought. The growing of large fine apple of superior quality requires an ample supply of moisture during the months of July, August and September. The commercial orchardist under irrigation has irrefutable advantages over this competitor in the fall. The thoughtful grower in any year ago to travel nine thousand miles seeking a new location and himself to travel ten thousand miles visiting the leading districts in the latter part of his selection, finally locating at Nampa, Idaho.

Varieties.

Discussing the question of varieties with our most successful commercial orchardists we find them disposed to plant only a very narrow list, and that particular list based on such varieties as bear successfully in the district where planted. Hood River grows the Newtown Pippin and Spitznagel. Their humid atmosphere being peculiarly suited to the production of a superior quality of these varieties. The Watsonville district of California grows the Golden Wonder, the Yellow Bellflower and other varieties suited to their very low elevation. Yakima and Wenatchee have their own favored varieties.

Markets and Storage.

The manufacturer of farm implements, or any other product, does not think of throwing all his goods on the market to be disposed of in a few months and probably 24 to 26 degrees during the winter months. Fortunately, in Southern Idaho the winters are usually cool and given a frost-free period of from 100 to 120 days for cold storage purposes, with provision for changing the air, carefully excluding the warm air of mid-day. Fruit can be kept under very favorable conditions until mid-winter or later and then offered to an appreciative and responsive market. Cold air storage, as a rule, is very much less expensive than refrigeration by ammonia process. I might state in this connection that several up-to-date orchardists at Wanda Spur have combined to erect for themselves a building that should contain and store 40 carloads of apples using cold air refrigeration. Their example should be steadily followed, thus holding the crop until the autumnal gale has passed by.

Transportation Again.

While Southern Idaho is located on one of the very strongest trans-continental routes and probably 24 to 26 degrees during the winter months. Fortunately, in Southern Idaho the winters are usually cool and given a frost-free period of from 100 to 120 days for cold storage purposes, with provision for changing the air, carefully excluding the warm air of mid-day. NEW IRRIGATION PROJECT

Cultural Men Ask Permission to Reclaim 2000 Acres

H. L. Fisher appeared before the state land board Wednesday afternoon making for permission to launch an irrigation project in Canyon county that is entirely out of the ordinary. The land he proposes to reclaim, approximately 2000 acres, adjoins the city of Carey. It is above the Selkirk canal and cannot be irrigated from that source. It would be subject to irrigation by the Black Canyon project, but according to Mr. Fisher, but no prospect of the Black Canyon project being completed.

GOOD NEWS FOR BEET MEN

Sugar Company Will Pay Same Price as Last Year.

Utah and Idaho will be the only sugar beet states in which the price to be paid for beets during the 1914 season will not be cut, according to the statement of the general manager of the Utah-Idaho sugar company. Mr. Cutler has just returned from the annual meeting of the American Beet Industry held at Chicago, where he had an opportunity to meet with the beet sugar representatives from every part of the United States where the sugar beet is grown.

"We are already signing contracts for the next season in Utah and Idaho at the same price as last year. As a matter of fact our company is the only one conducting this work in Idaho for two weeks. Although we are not certain what effect the reduction of the tariff will have on the beet sugar industry, we will endeavor to conduct our business next year on the same basis as in the past. Our manager will be better able to forecast the results of free sugar in 1915.

"In other states the factories have already arranged to reduce the price of sugar for beets during the coming season. In addition to this, many of the smaller factories will not open their doors next year. The tariff reduction will be a serious blow to the beet sugar industry in part for this condition. These small factories without sufficient capital to back them have met with financial reverses and the low price of sugar has been the last blow. At a rough estimate, I should say that between 10 and 20 per cent of the sugar factories will not be in operation for the 1914 season. This, however, includes only the weaker concerns.

"The report that the 1914 season would be the last for the beet sugar industry is greatly exaggerated. The industry is not so near the end as is generally supposed. All of the larger factories will operate in 1914. What the effect on the market next year will be through the establishment of free sugar in 1915 no one can forecast. Our company will endeavor to operate during the coming season on the same basis as in the past; but what steps will be taken in 1915 no one can tell at this time."

brief weeks for whatever the consuming public will be willing to give during that period. In other words, the orchardist cannot afford to neglect a major portion of his product to the consumer as the market can utilize his entire crop. He must have cold storage to secure full value for his product if the major portion of his crop is thrown on the markets of the country in October and November. The orchardist, then, must become a business man and handle his crop as any other business man would handle his output. He must have cold storage, and carry his fruit forward until such time as the consuming public can receive and pay him a fair price for his product. The fact that Idaho apples can be kept in common farm cellars until March, April, and May has led to the construction of several parties of storage houses cooled and handled by what we may term cold air storage.

Twenty-one million dozen eggs were exported from the United States in a brief year 1913, according to a report that a half million dozen eggs ten years ago, and 140,000 dozen twenty years ago, 1913 at 20,400,000 dozen eggs, valued at $4,910,000 and of 1914 at 20,000,000 dozen, valued at $4,910,000, bringing the grand total of eggs exported clearly above the 21 million dozen line, or over 250 million eggs.
