Trout, Fishermen Venture Too Near the Edge of Ice.

Trout fishing in the main channel of the river, after a long, dry season, is a fascinating sport and the fishermen are being lured today by the prospect of a good catch. The fishermen have ventured too near the edge, however, the ice is thin and the fishermen have been forced to abandon their fishing and return to shore.

Mark Palmer, who is fishing the banks of the river, says that the fishermen have been lured to the edge of the ice and have been forced to abandon their fishing and return to shore.

HERO IN A SKIFF

Crippled Rowed Through Gulf Storm to Save Ship.

Thomas A. Wells of Texas Town, Pad. Also-Frill Canoe Eight Miles in Raging Sea to Get Help for Rudderless Vessel.

Houston, Tex.—Thomas A. Wells of Palestine, the heroic cripple, who effected a frail trip through eight miles of raging sea to bring rescue to seven men who were on a rudderless boat, is visiting an aunt near Houston Heights.

The first statement Mr. Wells made was characteristic of the man. "It wasn't much," he said, when he was asked for an account of his perilous trip through an angry sea.

"It wasn't much" that seven men were saved from certain doom because a little man no more than five feet high, walked on "rudder" and launched a little skiff from the deck of the rudderless Mermald in the Gulf of Mexico!

"It wasn't much" that he had calmly seated himself in that skiff and coolly looked death "in the face" as he worked his way to safety and to help.

"I believed I could make the trip," he said. "Soon after launching the skiff I found the wind was blowing to sea, while the wind was blowing shoreward. So by turning my boat to catch all the breeze I could without adding too much water. I managed to keep from drifting out into the gulf. I didn't get more than two or three gallons of water in the skiff until I struck the breakers just out of Port O'Connor. But when I finally got to land the boat was more than half full. The sea was choppy there, and it was impossible to keep the water out."

"I couldn't get anybody at Port O'Connor that night to go to the rescue of the men in the Mermald. Finding I couldn't get help there, I telephoned to Palestine, finally getting in touch with Capt. William Butterfield, who came as soon as he could get his boat in readiness. C. M. Rhea and C. M. Amber were on the boat with Captain Butterfield. Their boat had a hard time riding the rough sea, but it finally reached the stranded Mermald."

"The sea was so rough that the men could not be brought on board Captain Butterfield's boat except by ropes. A rope was thrown to them and they had to dive at a time, jump into the water and be pulled up the side of the Mermald."

"How about your skiff? Looks like you would have had an awful time keeping it from filling up," was ventured.

"It wasn't so bad when the big waves came at me," he explained. "When two of them came together, each from a different direction, it was a little hard to decide which one to go for first."

"You would have had a nice time swimming to shore in that sea if your boat had been awamped," was an observation of the interviewer.

"I can't swim," he replied nonchalantly, as if that were merely an unimportant detail. "I had a life preserver. I could have kept afloat with it."

Certainly he could, and no one knew better than he. When he found that, with the current going favorably out to sea.

HE FINDS LONG LOST SISTER

The Woman Couldn't Talk English and Brother Was Called in by Accident.

Seattle, Wash.—Deputy Sheriff George W. Wash is reporting Mrs. Bertha Johnson, who had been discharged in insanity proceedings, to her home near Tolle, picked at random a fellow passenger on the train to talk the Norwegian language to her, and later found that the stranger was Mrs. Johnson's long lost brother, Ole Jude of Milwaukee, Wis.

He walked through the train, and in another car found a honest looking young man who appeared as if he might be a Scandinavian. He introduced him to Mrs. Johnson, and the two began a conversation. Soon Mrs. Johnson became animated, and her whole disposition changed from gloom. He then turned around in his seat to the deputy. "This is my sister," he said. "I have not seen her for twelve years."

MAN TRAVELS 311,080 MILES

Aged New Yorker Makes a Record; Another is Commemorative Sixty-Two Years.

New York.—Frederick H. Smith of Newark, N. J., winner of a commemorative contest held by a local newspaper, probably holds the world record for continuous daily travel back and forth to work. For 62 years, or since 1851, Mr. Smith has made the trip between Newark and New York, nine miles, twice a day, barring Sundays, holidays and vacations.

The distance record for five years goes to J. J. Marney of Hartford, Conn., who has made 1,500 miles commuting between New York and Hartford, and the greatest mileage made in a single year's travel to the credit of W. L. Lee of Philadelphia, who made 100,000 miles commuting between his home city and New York, commuting from July 1, 1908, to July 1, 1909.

BALKAN RAIL LINES

Some Details of How New Road's Are Built.

Austria-Hungary, While Not Rich in Capital, When Compared to Some Other Countries, Will Finance a Large Share of Work.

Vienna.—On the part of a high official of the Austro-Hungarian bank, the great state institution in this country, I received some details about the building of a number of new railroads, and the improvement of existing ones in the Balkan countries, especially so far as Austria-Hungary is involved. Although the dual monarchy is not rich in capital, when compared to some other countries, she will yet undertake a considerable share of the work. This will last for five years and more, and the money to be invested will altogether amount to not less than $600,000,000.

This money will be taken up in the shape of loans, and the loans will be floated in Paris, Vienna, Berlin and London, and the Balkan countries, including Bulgaria and Albania, will obtain such loans. Railroad construction will necessarily not begin until after the various loans have been obtained. Albania's new roads—the first that country will have—will consist of those of Greece and Serbia, one line being from Monastir to Durazzo, another from Valona to Janina. If the projected Danube-Adria line is really built by Austrian capital—which is doubtful, because it would not pay for years to come—there would be direct railroad connection between Vienna and Albania. The completion of the Trans-Balkan line, a Bulgarian work, and which it is to start as a concession on the Aegean and to connect with the Roumanian lines will give Bulgaria a perfect railroad system. Greece, above all, requires much capital for railroads, notably in her new territory. The Serbian road enterprises will all be capitalized by France. Greece will for the first time obtain railroad connections with the European network, both with Vienna and with Paris. Several of these projected lines will give Austrian, and Hungarian export trade and improved access to the Aegean, the Adriatic, the Black and the Indian seas.

For some time the Austro-Hungarian government has been on the track of unscrupulous combination agents who have facilitated the export of persons who for some reason or other were not legally entitled to leave the country, such as young men about to serve in the army. Lately, many hundreds of arrests were made.

The evidence shows that there has been all along a wide smuggling industry, the chief centres being in Vienna, Trieste, Plumb, Lemberg, Prague, Cracow, Budapest, Grosswardein and many smaller places. Government detectives ferreted out the facts, and they are certainly astounding enough. The wholesale manufacture of forged documents of all kinds, enabling the holders to pass the scrutiny of the government agents of the frontier and in the harbor towns, seems to have been carried on by notaries, lawyers, and in not a few cases by municipal or provincial officials for the worst cases that came to the surface, were ascertained in Vienna and Grosswardein.

LABOR CLASS GAINS

England's Middle Class Feel Adv. vantage of Former.

Paper Declares That the Lot of Professional With Moderate Income Is Far Worse Than That of the Average Working Man.

London.—A good deal of attention is being paid to the true meaning and effect of the almost continual labor upsets that have affected this country in the last few years, and that threaten to continue for an indefinite period. The Daily Express finds ground for hope of peace in the circumstance of alleged "circumstances" that, as a result of the recent strikes, many of the labor organizations are virtually bankrupt. "Not one of us," but nearly all the societies of organized workers, it says, "are suffering severely from the strain put on their resources by the strike mania of the last few years. The grand strikes have duly taken place. They have neither intimidated the employers nor broken the back of organized society, though it has done much to impair that right to work which ought to be no less inalienable than the right to strike. But they have, actually bankrupted the General Federation, reducing its reserve fund to a meagre sum, largely, it is said, hypothesized in other directions."

The Globe, pointing out another feature of the situation that has arisen from the labor unrest, refers to the article headed "Middle Class Durdene." "It is," it says, "easy to be sentimental over the woes of the so-called working classes; and now that labor has secured a certain amount of political power, democratic men are finding that to reap benefits from the ample coffers of the state upon the working man is a sure and safe road to the attainment and retention of office."

Obviously, however, says the Globe, the state can not continue to provide free education, old age pensions and copious insurance, as well as satisfying the hundred and one other demands of the trades unions, without some other class feeling the pinch. "It goes on to say: 'If the added burden fell solely or chiefly upon those already possessed of a superfluity of this world's goods, there would not be much cause for complaint. Probably we should all, collectively and individually, be better off if poverty were so constituted that neither the millions, nor the pauper could resist; but that in a prospect outside, reasonable calculation, and, as things are, the people who pay for the lighting of the cities, the maintenance of the life of the great middle class, which, even before the recent marked increase in the cost of living, has always found the struggle for existence a hard and strenuous one."

"At present the lot of the professional man with a moderate income is, we say it unhesitatingly, far worse than that of the average working man. The latter has secured a certain amount of political power, but the professional man has got ground for maintaining that he suffers open more severely from the same cause, while his unavoidable expenses are far heavier."

"In what direction it may be asked, is a remedy to be found for this state of things? It is clear that with one class can not go, on forever bearing not only its own legitimate share of the country's burdens, but everybody else's in addition. Yet politicians and treat of all radical demagogues—have no thought for them. Our ears are deafened with the din of many speeches expressing the deepest sympathy for the woes of the people; parliament passes measures intended, at a cost, to relieve him of that distress which the same speaker proclaims. But it is to be noted that this phrase, so rampant of French revolutionary times, covers not all the honest working citizens in the state, but only that class of workers already sufficiently cared for."

"We do not believe that it would be possible for the middle-classes to continue to bear the burden of the state, and which their rights from parliament. But we do say it is the duty of the industrial party to come to the assistance of a class which, above all others, has suffered from the predatory and socializing legislation of the last few years."

CURRENT WINDS UP A WATCH

Timepiece Lost in Stream Two Years Ago, Was Still Running When Owner Found it.

Uxbridge, Pa.—That a swift current in a mountain trout stream kept his gold watch wound up and running for two years in the assertion of Albert Miller of Clark Hill, who lost his timekeeper in the stream two years ago, when the watch was picked out of the sand by Mrs. Miller near the spot where her husband lost it, the dial showed nearly the correct time.

Mrs. Miller, while gathering fish-bait, noticed a glittering object in the clear water of the stream. She investigated and found it to be her husband's lost watch. She was greatly surprised to find the watch running and keeping good time. Mrs. Miller said that the timepiece was lying in such a position that the fast-running water had gradually acted as a winder and kept the mechanism going.

The easy want ad tasks are usually accomplished through one publication of the ad.

The want ad tasks may require repeated publications of the ad—sometimes growing into the dignity of "want ad campaigns."

And, while purely "transient" classified advertising may not complete the task set for it, a "want ad campaign" does not fail, if sensible persistence is used. This means that such difficult want ad tasks as that of finding
