BOOK I
The Silent House.
CHAPTER I.

As Rudolph Van Vecheon entered the outer doorway of the club he had more than a suspicion that he was climbing the three-quarter hour after eight.

The young man's thin, sensitive face assumed a rueful curve and he drew a long, slow breath.

"What a nuisance yet until this," he murmured in a tone of complaint, staring hard at the dial. "Whatever it shall do until night the gods alone know. Please on such rotten luck."

And then he turned to the door, and as he stepped out he glanced at the temporary trifling with which he was regaled and snarled listlessly into the lurid light that deserted long-limbed overlooking the street, where his dog had been lying on the floor. He discovered that the chair was inauspiciously hot and bounding to his feet, he found a chair.

"What a nuisance," he muttered, as he stepped the stuffy chair away—it was too heavy to kick—and jerked a cooler and more inviting willow one into its place, wherein he once more seated himself.

"Somebody ought to kick me for having come here," he muttered, remarking. Then he turned again to his impatient contemplation of the hot, empty street.

"Van Vecheon might have told you," he had thought to himself, "that he had been invited to the club by the attachment to his club was based upon some sort of sentiment. His slender, modestly-attired figure, and his finely cultured, picturesque features (which had been) were by no means strange to their present rich and elegant surroundings. In point of fact, no member of the Powhatan more assiduously attended to his duties and privileges than did he. Among the small circle of his intimates and confidants, and the much longer list of acquaintances who would have liked to share the close relationship, nobody ever thought of calling for him at his own handsomely appointed bachelor apartments in the Keogmoor until the Powhatan Club had first been closed. It was not until that hour, all attempts to communicate with him so invariably had been frustrated by his diplomatic valet, Barnetto, that everybody had long since concluded that he was not in the habit of rising before twelve o'clock.

Familiar, therefore, as his appearance was to the astonished and discomfited club attendant (in season), it was a decidedly refreshing fact that he must be admitted—only with late hours, the poker or bridge table, and a multitude of cocktails whose number was known by no man save that of the club's valet, Barnetto, and the steward. He carefully indicated and preserved all the checks which Van Vecheon so promptly forgot.

Without spending too much time, he was in a fit state to be brought to the front and borne in mind to an endeavor to make the situation clear for it was all very strange, the manner in which the commonplace situation described interested with what might be expected.

"Here—this is the point to be brought to the front and borne in mind—was a concession of time, place and individual which had never been made before. It was all very strange, the manner in which the commonplace situation described interested with what might be expected.

presently remarked, "Wonder what it can be."

What was learned during the world's curious "hijack" was about all the information available. Number 1312, the man to be investigated, did not like the succeeding months. During that time it was scarcely possible that any person could have come or gone within the children hours that are the life of the society, without attracting somebody's attention to the Powhatan. For as the weeks passed and the shades remained down by day, and the windows dark by night, and the society was held without a break, and with its secret trust constantly upon its face, the least sign of life or activity must have been noted.

"Why should anybody want to maintain such persistent, unnatural occupation?"

"Inquiry at the estate's office building was made of the secretary, Mr. Conroy. (Considerable difficulty was experienced in gaining access to the manager; then he at once denied Number 1312's occupancy.) Whereupon Conroy felt that the secretary without a committee was not being treated with the deference which it unquestionably deserved.

"So here," he said, "thumping the desk under the nearest foot, your confounded house is situated right across the street from the Powhatan Club."

"For the first time the manager's eye contained a gleam of interest. He interrupted a stammer on your house committee?" he inquired.

"Yes, he is," returned Tom, not receding in the least from his determined purpose. "He was looking into your matter, the dead ghost in the manager's eye proceeded.

"Our body is silent, you must be aware, and we are proud of the quiet respectability of our neighborhood. There's enough in the air to keep us busy to run out anything of a steady nature; we won't stand for it, in any way."

"The manager acknowledged the justice of this ultimatum, but merely said: "You've got to hear anything wrong, run out; I don't care."

"We have a right to know who our neighbors are," insisted Tom.

"I can't tell you."

"Do you mean to say you don't know?" incredulously.

"Just that. The present tenant, if applied to in all that have never seen him, in fact. Occupancy of the house was arranged in quite his own manner. Really, gentlemen, that is all I can say."

And the Powhatan's committee was bowed politely out.

"It was not a robbery," that the house was called the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II

On the Stroke of the Hour.

A perpetual mine of impassivity which effectively repelled advances for familiarity on the part of the visitor, and which, in the opinion of the most portly physical character for an impassive face, and the ease of manner which customarily accompanied it, it was to one of two things. Either a set of sympathetic emotions that are sadly atrophied, or an acquired self-control so habit that every genuine feeling is perfectly masked. In either case habit is not long in asserting itself, and it has been shown that Mr. Rudolph Van Vecheon was capable of being admitted, and astonished.

On the present occasion, therefore, stalled by a lively anticipation that the door would open almost any moment, and the man came forth; but nothing of the kind happened. The house remained as still as a tomb, and the man to be investigated, did not like the succeeding months. During that time it was scarcely possible that any person could have come or gone within the children hours that are the life of the society, without attracting somebody's attention to the Powhatan. For as the weeks passed and the shades remained down by day, and the windows dark by night, and the society was held without a break, and with its secret trust constantly upon its face, the least sign of life or activity must have been noted.

"More and more spectators" he voiced in astonishment. "You! But, of this time of day, Monday, and he hurried to his friend's side and exchanged in a disquieting 'Hi!'—notwithstanding which he was sensible of a distinct thrill when, a few seconds later, the young man mounted the steps of Number 1312, rang the bell, and after the now familiar preliminary measures on the part of the unseen door-keeper, was admitted.

"And all this while the clock in the club hall was chiming; the hour of noon.

CHILD WITHOUT A FOREBRAIN

German Doctors Interested in Case of Baby Which Lived for Nearly Four Years.

Berlin.—The German medical press records the remarkable case of a child which lived for nearly four years without any trace of a forebrain. Neurologists explain that the case demonstrates the absolute dependence of human beings on the force of reflex action...

The case of the child is especially noteworthy because of the long duration of life. In other cases the brainless child lasted only for a few days, and the movements of the child did not differ in any respect from those of a normal child.

In the case under discussion the child lived 3 1/2 years, permitting numerous extensive observations of its state. The child remained in a condition of continual sleep, its arms were forced and rigid. It was unable to grasp or hold anything with its hands.

From the second year onward the child cried incessantly, though this was apparently only in response to pressure, especially on the head. It was impossible to note any psychic action, to awaken any feelings, or to teach the child anything.

Baby Contest Causes Trouble, Lima, Ohio.—In a rush for adoption the baby contest of the Allen county fair, three hundred women with crying babies in their arms, began to maul each other. Many dropped their children to engage in the mauling contests. Police stopped the outbreak and the baby contest was postponed until the next day.

GIVE MONEY FOR GOOD ROADS Idaho Would Get $12,500 by Bill Introduced.

A supplemental report on the bill to appropriate $25,000,000 a year for federal aid in road construction in the United States, which was introduced Monday by Representative Schackelford, chairman of the house roads committee. A special report making this bill one of the best bills introduced in the past office appropriation bill now before the house probably will be acted upon by the house in the near future. The bill provides to divide the appropriation among the states in proportion to the rural population. Road construction will amount to $25,000,000 in each state were included in the report filed Monday. The bill provides for the maximum amount of federal aid each state might receive under the provision of the bill. CONTRACT LARGE ACRES Need Man Wishes to Contract For 25,000 Acres For Pulp, Etc., at Hand.

A man wishes to enter into a contract for 25,000 acres for pulp and other uses for the timber lands owned by the state. The man wishes to know if anyone would like to contract for the land. A. E. Wilson, who was announced in the Herald last week has located permanently in this city. He is a representative of the Jerome H. Hite Seed Co. of Detroit, Mich., one of the largest and most reliable seed houses in his country. Mr. Wilson will have his headquarters with the Bull Grain & Produce Co., which he may be seen by those who wish to contract for seed. for the seed houses and it has always been a source of regret or chagrin to the Burley people that the contractors did not get down to the work. Now we have located in Burley the agency for the foremost seed houses in the United States, which yearly contract for thousands of acres of seed from local ranchers.

HAS BURLEY RESIGNED?

Report Says Gen. Passenger Agent Has Resigned From Short Line. Dispatches from Omaha today stated that D. E. Barclay, general passenger agent of the Oregon Short Line, was soon to leave the service of the road. It was decided that he had either tendered his resignation or would do so when he returned to the city. Mr. Barclay is now with the D. C. Jackson paper in Panama. Mr. Barclay will soon be 65 years of age when under Oregon Short Line rules, employees are pensioned. Omaha dispatches assert that Mr. Barclay's resignation, according to a certain official of the company, has been in the hands of Mr. Port for sixty days. Gerritt Felt, passenger traffic manager for the Oregon Short Line, could not be reached by telephone today. At the office of W. H. Hancock, vice president and general manager of the Oregon Short Line, it was said today that no intimation of Mr. Barclay's resignation had been received. The matter, however, would not be handled by Mr. Hancock's office. D. S. Spencer, assistant general passenger agent of the Oregon Short Line, said today that so far as he knew, Mr. Barclay had not resigned. It is believed that the reported resignation of Mr. Barclay is a mere rumor. The resignation of the road following the appointment of E. E. ### NORTH PORTLAND MARKETS

North Portland, Ore., Jan. 25, 1914.

Market quotations for the week were: Cattle, 75c; calves, 4; hogs, 85c; sheep, 60c.

Cattle.

Livestock receipts totaled considerably less than those last week and business was not so brisk. The cattle situation failed to clear up on only one day, Monday, when there was interest around a few cars of choice steers brought $7.99 and a load of young cows $5.70. Bulk week's steer sales averaged $7.00 to $7.25 and cows $6.00 to $6.25. All other butcher classes slow and principal cause of price weakness was inferior beef quality and top much of it.

Hogs.

The hog market maintained its strength easily from beginning to end. Prices never rose above $8.05, but choice light stock averaged around $8 cents all week. A hot market that lacked prime finish sold at lower prices, but good quality pigs and smooth young stuff found a quick sale at steady prices. Bowlegs were scarce, but some 2000 less than for same period last week.

Sheep.

Sheep trade was brisk only in early part of the week, but was steady. Total arrivals were smaller than for previous six days. A good supply of prime, graded, medium, and heavy, but in the first part of the week, Western sold at $5.35 and ewes, $4.75 of rare. Lamb buyers gave $0.75 for the finer grades and were not interested in the lower grades.

The following sales are representative:

137 Steers	1310	$7.60
71	1297	7.45

HEALTH AND HYGIENE

Issued by the Idaho State Board of Health.

The Effect of Heat.

At this time of the year, when nothing that is so cold as to use the general heating system of a house, but in fact to be entirely without heat, the use of portable gas or kerosene heaters is a great convenience. Cleanliness and comparative low cost of operation make this type of heating especially popular. Unfortunately, many of these heaters are used without a flue pipe to carry off the products of combustion. The use of such heaters is to be deprecated. This is especially true of those heaters of low efficiency that make it practically imperative that the doors and windows be kept closed. The danger is not only that of raising the temperature of the room, but to obtain. These heaters put a premium on inefficient ventilation. The current issue of a high-class monthly magazine carries a full-page advertisement of a gas heater that is specifically recommended for use in the children's play room. It is advertised as "the best heater for the nursery" and "in heavy type this flue is made that it will not warp or burn." Such advertisements are dangerous. The Journal of the American Medical Association. There must be times when convenience is willing to sacrifice health for comfort for a short time, when an increase of temperature in the room is sufficient to prevent the children from getting cold. When this is done with a full knowledge of possible danger, it may not be so severely criticized. But to insist upon the belief that a room can be heated healthfully for any length of time by means of flueless gas or oil heaters is dangerous. The use of such heaters is an admirable piece of household apparatus; a flueless heater is a piece of household property of first and then used with a full knowledge of the dangers involved is an abandonment.

Note-Blowing Drills.

A few years ago school children had made "blow-drill" a fairly familiar idea in many cities. It took the Toronto public school, or rather the suggestion, that it took to originate another drill which was unique and important. Since last October the school children of Toronto in squads of twenty, had practiced daily "nose-blowing drills," and the effect on the freshness of the atmosphere of the schoolrooms has been so noticeable that the teachers have become assiduous in seeing to it that no child comes to school unprovided with a pocket handkerchief. They often, indeed, themselves order the drills without waiting for the coming of the nurse. The effect of the drill is perceptible already on individual children in cases of colds and the factors predict that it will have an appreciable effect in time in lessening colds and other throat and nose affections.

Health is nature's reward for resting in harmony with her laws. It pays to be law-abiding.

The Press Bulletin will be sent free to any citizen of Idaho who may request it.

Since analysis of our physical bodies by their own wear, sickness and disease. Moreover, nature takes no account of the fact that we have not been aware of the physical laws which we have broken.

The physically defective child will be a permanent handicap in the struggle for health and an education, unless we have a reasonable and effective system of supervision of school children.

Dr. Oaker's Challenge to the Anti-Vaccinationists.

A great deal of literature has been distributed creating the idea of a "smallpox." I do not see how any one who has gone through epidemics as I have, who is familiar with the history of the subject, and who has a capacity left for clear judgment, can doubt its value. Some months ago I was invited by the editor of the Journal of the Anti-Vaccination League for "a curious silence" of this subject. I would like to issue a Mount Carmel challenge to any ten unvaccinated persons of that. I will go into the next severe epidemic with ten selected, vaccinated persons and ten selected unvaccinated persons. I should prefer to choose the latter—three members of parliament, three anti-vaccination doctors. If they could be found, and four anti-vaccination propagandists. And I will make this promise—neither to fear nor flee when they catch the disease, but to look after the unvaccinated, and for the four or five who are willing to die I will give the remaining nine all the medical attention that I can give.

OF INTEREST TO SPUD GROWERS

E. T. Stephens, Tells How to Grow Potatoes

'At the recent meeting at Spokane a discussion of growing potatoes, led by J. O. McPherson, Pocatello, Idaho, was very interesting and developed many points of interest. Mr. McPherson asserted that Idaho is already surpassing Colorado in the ability to export potatoes of the highest quality. In 1912, methods of marketing improved very low.

Mr. Jenkins Says

Be Truthful in Your Ads

Mr. Ad-man: When you tell the public about our 'Annual Sale of White' which starts Monday, February 2, see that nothing is misrepresented. Speak as to friends you would have respect you—never mind about the extravagant talk and bogus claims of the foolish: verily they have their reward, for lies profit no merchant.

Bear in mind the fact that you are the moutpiece for Jenkins & Co.; that every word printed should be as from my personal diction. I know that this sale will be the biggest in our history—there's no reason why it shouldn't be; goodness knows that 'basement' looks like a wholesale department. When we priced the goods you made me mark them so low I had to do some figuring to see where profit came in at all.

Didn't I tell you that the public were tired of boastful advertising that they discounted 80 per cent of what was told them—just to entice people in the store? You shook your head, saying 'They all do'. Now, sir, see the splendid harvest from our 'January Clearance Sale' and the 'Pre-Inventory Sale.' We've cleaned up the winter goods in good shape, leaving us free for a big campaign for spring business.

Never forget—the people of Twin Falls County possess intelligence above the ordinary; they are careful buyers, know-values, and have good business sense. They are appreciative and quick to distinguish between the real and the counterfeit. Lastly, but most important—they know that the Cash Store has the least running expense—they know that a deal here means satisfaction or money promptly refunded.

THIS NEW MEDICINE

SAVES YOU MONEY

We are druggists right here in your town and make a living out of the drug business, but it is because people have to have drugs and not because we like to see people suffer. Our duty is to render the best service we can, and when someone is in pain, we are interested in seeing them take the best medicine they can get. We don't care about our profit, we care about the health of our customers.

THE SPIDER'S BUSINESS

Mark Twain Tells Whether the Business of a Spider is Profitable.

When Mark Twain in his early days was editor of the Missouri paper, a correspondent inquired of him as to the probability of a spider's business, saying that he had found a spider in his paper and was wondering whether it was profitable. Mark Twain replied that it was not profitable, as the spider would eat up the paper before it could do any work.
