On All of Your Printed Matter, It represents Good Workmanship, Good Wages, and Good Conditions.
From the attitude of President Wilson and the Democratic Congressional leaders it seems to look as though the president has inherited much of the disunion which marked Taft's administration. The only difference, that Wilson seems to have a will of his own and an evident intention to be content or led by the men of his party. His aim is to become the holder of the right to respect. But the name, the Democratic party, can't be broken ahead with the failure of the reactionaries to agree with the progressives of the party.

The business men of this city probably will not appreciate any further solicitation of funds for the Japanese relief. The matter which has been made to be made with content in any of the previous contributions to such funds. Nevertheless the matter must come up and the merchants who received benefit in the past and who are in line to receive further benefit are urged to investigate the conditions in the camp and see if it is not to their advantage to keep the road possible. The Times believes that while the camp may have had a slight slump in the past that conditions right now are better than ever and that the trade from there will improve each year. For a long time the camp probably was infested with tin-borns, and good many loafers, but that element has been culled out by the hard work just passed, while the real workers are there ready to produce the ore. The three stamp mills which will produce considerable work for the men will also cause a revival of trade with this city. The Owyhee county commissioners have refused to expend any money on the road in their district and while Twin Falls county line taken care of the road to the county line, the balance of the road, the little camp, needs serious attention. Hides for four or five horses in the valley are absolutely necessary according to the reports brought to this city. Road improvements to the extent of five hundred dollars will do much toward making the road passable and also bring trade here. It is up to the merchants who profit from that trade, to get busy at once with the matter.

THE MEXICAN ENVOY IN JAPAN.

Judging from the reports and comments of the Japanese newspapers, the advent of the Mexican envoy, Mr. Francisco Leon de la Barra, was one of the most memorable events in the recent diplomatic annals of Japan. The significance of his arrival lies not so much in the cordial reception extended by the court and the government as in the enthusiasm displayed by the people and by certain classes of publicists. Indeed, the authorities seem to have warned the "National Reception Committee," organized by the people, not to be too extravagant but confine themselves within the bounds of moderation. But when the envoy arrived in Tokyo on December 21, 1910, it was met by a surfeit of a crowd of some people, and on the evening of the 25th thousands gathered in Utsuya Park, near the palace, and in the shadow of the foreign department, to express their appreciation of Mexican friendship. The Japanese reception committee, under the auspices of the reception committee, the speaker for the committee delivered a fervent address, and with a highly eloquent reference to the 19th century Mexico's struggle for independence cement the ties of friendship between Mexico and Japan. The purpose of checking the prevailing of strong passions upon weaker nations, and thus insuring the peace of the world. The Mexican envoy was not present at the meeting, but sent a large sum of appreciation which was read before the assembly. In the letter Mr. de la Barra expressed his wishes for the prosperity and advancement of the Japanese nation, and reiterated that other arrangements prevented him from participating in the meeting and obliged him to receive the reception committee at his hotel. At the end of the meeting the crowds formed a procession and marched to the Imperial Hotel where the Mexican envoy was staying. Mr. de la Barra appeared on the balcony of the hotel and received a sword and armor presented by the committee. "In welcoming the Mexican minister the Tokyo Night-Bird" incidentally alludes upon the "chapters" of the Foreign Department in dealing with Mexico, and writes the people's great hunger by denouncing their heartless sympathy for the Mexican nation. In the judgment of this journal it was the height of folly on the part of Japan to refuse to receive the Diaz mission which was to visit Japan last autumn. The de la Barra mission comes, it says, at an opportune moment, as the leading publicists of the country are exceedingly friendly toward the Diaz mission in session. In the words of the Night-Bird:

"We hope that the first will be a resolution appreciating the friendship of the Mexican government and people. Whatever may be the ultimate political status of Mexico, one thing is certain, that Mexico's relations with us in commerce and diplomacy will grow closer and more important. Today there is no country which could not equally encourage the peaceful economic activities of the people in foreign countries, and there is no reason why we should refrain from doing the same. The coming of the Mexican mission affords us a golden opportunity to further our bona fide enterprises in Mexico."
The Tokyo Jiji, perhaps the most influential financial journal in Japan, remarks upon the event in more diplomatic terms, while expressing much of the same sentiment as that of the Night-Bird. "The Japanese cordial treatment enjoyed by the Japanese in Mexico to the absence of any prejudice in that Latin American Republic, as well as to the spirit of change and liberality which the Mexicans of today inherited from their ancestors and which bear striking similarity to the ideas handed down by the Japanese ancestral philosophy."
"No two nations can be on friendly terms when either one treats the other in disregard of justice and goodwill. The friendly relations between Japan and Mexico are founded upon mutual observance of justice and fairness."
The Tokyo Asahi takes occasion to give on this bit of interesting historical information: "As early as 1610 A. D., a band of Japanese merchants crossed the Pacific to trade with Mexico. It was in those early days that Mexico, then called New Spain, dispatched to Japan a special envoy in the person of General Viceroy to thank Japan for the success of the Mexican sailors, who wrecked in Japanese waters. There is no doubt that intercourse began much earlier. "In 1613 Date Manamune, an ambitious feudal lord, sent an envoy to the Pope. The Japanese embassy passed through Mexico en route to Rome. He left some of his followers in Mexico, and it is said that these Japanese descendants of the ancestors of a number of distinguished families in the Republic. SIC, LANE'S RADIIUM POLICY.

It is the belief of Dr. Kelly and his associates, together with Mr. Ferguson, chief of the division of mineral resources, that radium-bearing ores known to exist on the public domain can be utilized most satisfactorily either under the direction of the government or else by public-spirited capitalists. Some months ago the National Radium Institute was organized by Dr. Kelly and Mr. James Douglas, who is a prominent New York financier and radium engineer. They obtained control of twenty-seven claims in Colorado, and are establishing at Denver the largest radium laboratory in the world, the product of which is to be used in certified hospitals without charge. Within the past few weeks the secretary of the interior, Mr. Lane, has taken up the matter and urged congress to enact legislation withdrawing large areas of public land known to contain ores from which radium may be derived, and authorizing the interior department to mine and treat such ores in order to obtain a supply of radium for the use of the government and the hospitals of the country. Secretary Lane's plan was embodied in a resolution which was promptly introduced in the house, and, although considerable opposition developed in the senate, and among those interested in the mineral resources of that state, it seemed certain that the larger view would prevail. It should be remembered that the production of radium is exceedingly laborious and costly. It would take about a hundred tons of the richest carnotite ore to produce a ton of radium salts, 75 per cent pure, and the intricacies of the process of chemical reduction and separation are almost beyond description. Although radium was discovered more than fifteen years ago, the total production since then has not amounted to two ounces. It is valued at from $70,000 to $100,000 per gram—or more than $2,000,000 per ounce.—Review of Reviews.

MAIL ORDER SEASON.

Word comes from every community in southern Idaho to the effect that Montgomery-Ward, Sears-Roebuck and other great mail order houses located in the large cities are flooding this section with descriptive catalogs and other advertising matter. This advertising, together with the reduced prices and the increased weight of parcels that are packed, which are especially emphasized by the advertisers, are the cause of thousands of dollars being sent out of Idaho every week, without aid of cents being spent with local merchants. However, this is the quiet season of the year. It has become the habit of most merchants in rural communities and small towns to "hibernate" for the few months immediately following the holidays, and when they are sleeping the mail order houses are busy getting in their work. Many people, for want of something else to do during the long evenings, make a study of the ready catalogs sent them from a distance, and find cheap things they never knew they wanted until that time, and away goes a few cents for a new article, accompanied, usually, by a few dollars for something else merely to make up an order, and the local merchant loses his business during a season when he needs it worst.

Advertisers do most good when it is most read. The mail order houses recognize the fact and send their advertising out during the winter season when the people are not too busy to study it, and while the newspapers they will not carry mail order advertising are not giving the people that class of reading. While the merchants in rural communities and small towns have the best advertising medium on earth—the local newspapers—at their disposal, they allow the mail order houses to take their trade away from them by systematic advertising at the right time. The Bulletin is not complaining. Busy merchants are not that kind. They are good advertisers and give the mail order houses a "run for their money" at all times. However, the Bulletin believes that if all local merchants would recognize the fact that it is during their own quiet season that the mail order houses are doing the best business, and would study the mail order houses' methods, the local merchants and the community generally would be greatly benefited.—Barney Bulletin.

see your face, if you're the same girl, I'll agree to anything—even to running here like this, to die."

"This man declared was ignored."

"Will you tell me your name now?" asked the girl.

"Tom Philney," that young gentleman replied, "I don't ask yours—not just at present—but I mean to know it some day."

"I'll tell you that, but I mean to look at you by my heart's content. I know you are beautiful."

"The response to this whisper though it was, revealed a flash of spirit."

"Which girl it would do I shall leave you at once."

"If I pleased you what she wanted, surely she could not complain of the intensity of that which immediately engaged it. It remained, so long unbroken that the girl's forehead faded her."

"Well!" The tremendous whisper conveyed a distinct impression to Tom; she was afraid. "Are you going to stop talking so silly?"

"But her immediate reply, indeed, how can one more breathe his breath."

"After another pause—"

"Are you asleep?" the girl whispered. "Have you—have you—fainted?"

"Not a sound from him."

"I thought he felt it to hand touch his breast, an lightly on a feather, and a warm glow flowed through him that effectively banished the chill of his damp clothing. Then the hand fluttered to his face and he, as if he had been stung by a thousand needles, started a moment upon his mouth."

"Afterwards Tom, stoutly, asserted that what he did was wholly inadvertent, citing as a valid corroborative evidence the fact that he had known him to be dead."

"But he immediately replied, however, he contended that because the act was inadvertent, it was sincere and therefore to be considered."

"Anyhow," he kissed the notepad and expressed pain in all the words.

"Mercy, no!"

"Oh! I shall," what next?"

"While he lent himself submissively to the question, he heard one of the handkerchiefs over his eyes, tugging the fabric and disengaging it with a way that by no possibility could be seen when he got where it was. Light shone there—his eyes—his face—his nostrils, and the nearest of her, now on this side, now on that, and behind him and in front, was making him blind."

FOREST RANGE CONTROL

Range Improvement Will Increase Meat Supply.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 15.—Albert P. Potter, assistant forest ranger, U. S. Forest Service, made an address before the National Woolgrowers' Association here today and said that the woolgrowers' association is involved in the method of grazing stock on the national forests. He said that the stock range is improved but that the sheep are not so good as they were in the past.

"The points out that the range resources on the national forests represent a valuable asset upon which not only the welfare of the stockman depends, but that of a large proportion of the people. The task of the government is to see that the range is improved and that the stockman is given the opportunity to use the range to the best advantage."

range which has been protected at all. This means that ranges can be improved faster in use than they can be in idleness and the principle is being adopted on many of the forests.

In the state of New York an even system of handling sheep, which is similar to that of the old plan of herding sheep close by the use of dogs and restraining them from straggling, is being used. The old plan of course, rendered certain areas absolutely bare and the going from and returning to the herd grounds resulted in a great deal of force. It is estimated that an increase of 10 to 25 per cent has been added to the carrying capacity of the ranges and that 50,000 more sheep could be raised on the state's sheep lands, because they have not been harassed by herding or forced to trail long distances from range to range. On 5,000 miles of range this means 250,000 more sheep, and to the sheepman's salubrious product, and to the country's most valuable industry, a Government experiment in which it was determined to try the old plan, it was found that the old plan is not so profitable as the new plan, which is being used on the state's sheep lands.

Other studies and experiments which have been made in regard to the best method of handling sheep are being made by the United States Forest Service. It is believed that the best method of handling sheep is to use the old plan of herding sheep close by the use of dogs and restraining them from straggling, which is being used on the state's sheep lands.
