The Short Line route got through from Bergeron southward in much shorter time, but its policy of doing nothing unless forced to by competition leaves little hope for anything which looks like a railroad. There is no reason why they should build when the territory with a longer haul is held in their grasp at present.

The Mexican situation presents no many angles that the train-study of affairs cannot be learned from press reports. Villa's attack on Torreon is still a matter of guess work so far as results with both Federalists and Constitutionalists claiming a victory. Villa still maintains a stout defense and seems able to induce the lumberjacks disorganize millions to keep his tottering administration together. From any angle the United States can find little encouragement. If Villa is defeated the Huerta regime will become so unsharably disintegrated that this government will be unable to treat with it. On the other hand Villa's army is nothing more or less than a mob of fighting brigades.

END OF THE U. S. EXPRESS COMPANY. The belief that there is room in this country for both the express companies and the parcel post, which was strengthened by the energetic measures lately taken by the companies to meet the new competition, is given somewhat of a shock by the news of the United States Express company's coming dissolution. The announcement marks an epoch in our history, according to The Wall Street Journal, because it will be the first instance of a big concern liquidating its affairs because of governmental action. Will the other companies follow? The example, editors ask. The San Francisco Chronicle replies that small expressmen are going out of business in all parts of the country. The vigorous activity of the three other big companies might be interpreted as a negative answer, though there is something ominous in the New York Sun's statement that in the first five months of the present fiscal year "the operating income of the four big companies—United States, Adams, American and Well-Fargo—was nearly $2,000,000 lower than in the previous year." The United States company, however, was the hardest hit. Its earnings for the period mentioned were $18,525 less than in the preceding year, it had paid no dividends since 1912; its stock, which had sold as high as 145 in 1910, fell as low as 40 in 1912, and the express business done in the year ending June, 1912, resulted in a deficit of $109,050. Says the New York Sun:

"For the company to continue doing business under these circumstances would be in effect to distribute to the general public the assets and the money it has saved by successful business in the past. The wise and the fair thing for a company so situated to do is to stop business at once and distribute its assets among its own stockholders, whose property these rightfully are."

Taking up the question whether the other companies will do likewise, The Sun remarks: "It can not be expected that the express companies will continue to busi-

Choosing Your Spring Clothes

EASTER is nearly here and everyone wants to be correctly attired; it marks the opening day of spring fashions, and did you ever stop to consider the moral and mental effect of an unbecoming gown, an ill-fitting collar, a down trodden part of shoes?

Solled shoes and gloves have an immediate effect in making one self-conscious, awkward!—And the ill-at-ease woman is never able to exert charm or express the best that is in her.

This season we feel positive that we are showing the best and most stylish models of women's and misses' suits, dresses, etc., at the lowest prices in Twin Falls. We have been very careful in our selections and you'll find that each garment shows a distinctiveness all its own.

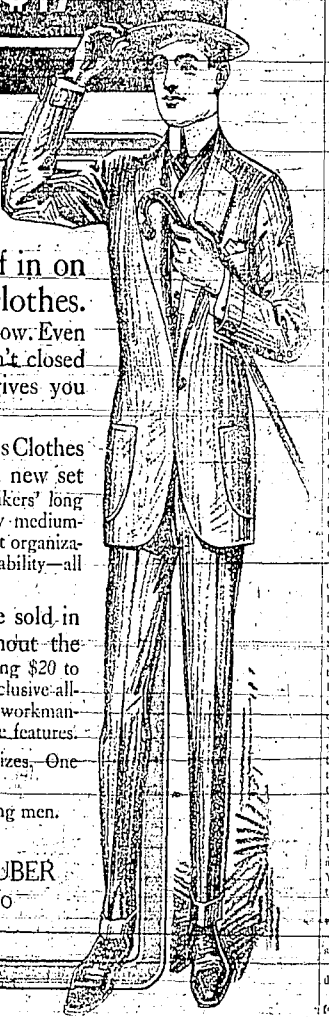

AS TO dress fabrics, silks, wash goods, etc., our display is unusually large, every new weave is shown in a variety of materials and colorings.

Let us help you decide on your spring dresses. We can offer many suggestions that are worth while.

OUR showing of spring footwear is more than complete at this time. Every style is shown, in all leathers in both high top and low shoes, at the price you want to pay. Many new ideas are shown, too.

Even if you buy the sale isn't closed till this special suit gives you perfect satisfaction. We refer to Styleplus Clothes $17. They represent a new set of values, based on the makers' long experience in making only medium-priced clothes, on their great organization and powerful buying ability—all directed upon this one suit. If these clothes were sold in the open market without the trade mark, they would bring $20 to $25 retail, because of the exclusive all-wool patterns, the degree of workmanship and the distinctive style features. smallest profit is derived. Obviously the government must face the necessity of providing in some way for the quick and easy transportation of perishable freight, such as shipments from the country districts to the city markets—of butter, eggs, vegetables, and the like.

Who will do the work abandoned by this company on 2,700 miles of railroad, many are asking, and the Wells Fargo company is spoken of as "a probable successor. If the other companies do not care to assume this doubtful risk, remarks The Sun, "the government would have to take this over or the community would be the loser." Or, suggest others, on the routes affected the railroads might be "abandoned" work themselves. Then, if all the other companies follow the United States, the railroads of the country could easily go into the express business. "Subject to the necessary vehicles for long-hauling collection and delivery, they have all the necessary machinery," The Wall Street Journal notes, and it continues: "The parcel post can not provide to handle a large amount of express business. The railroads handle it now, as transporting agents for the express companies. If the latter are unjustly driven out of business the railroads, for their own sake, will continue to handle such freight, and there is nothing communally serious in the elimination of a useful but not essential middleman."

But it is the parcel post that is driving the express companies out of business. If they are left, driven out, and it is the parcel post that must take its place, most observers think. Some, indeed, believe that the parcel service can not, in the very nature of things, be extended so as to be satisfactory substitute for the express companies. "This is the point at which the Interstate Association of New York, which has petitioned the president and the postmaster general not to permit industries to be deprived of the services of the private carriers through the further and needless extension of the parcel post service. Each service, say these business men, has its own distinctive field. Mr. William A. Marble, president of this association, calls attention, in a New York Herald article, to the defect of the parcel-post service: "It does not provide a pickup service. It does not adequately provide for safety. It does not provide adequate indemnity for loss. It does not provide any indemnity for damage."

It excludes a wide range of commodities from quick transportation, because it prevents valuable packages from being securely returned."

But to this and other objections emphasizing the post office department's lack of proper equipment, the Philadelphia Record's answer is: Let congress provide the equipment. The New York World thinks that "before Mr. Burleson ventures upon any more innovations he should devote himself to perfecting the operation of the present parcel post." But "the man charged with operating the system are working out improvements," contends the New York Press. It notes that in one large city—Philadelphia—the postmaster has taken an important step in modernizing the service by establishing new stations for the receipt of parcel post packages. And "the Press thinks it likely that in the not distant future parcel post wagons will carry packages, just as express company wagons do at present; that a few insurance arrangements will be introduced, and that receipts will be given for every package."

Yet these extensions are in themselves by no means universally popular. The protests of railroad officials who call it unfair to be made to carry a huge amount of additional matter without extra compensation have been quoted in our columns. Senator Bristow recently asserted on the floor of the senate that the parcel post system "if being worked out in the interest of the big mail order houses and, that it is being used in the west to transport ore in fifty-pound packages, mattresses, and baby carriages. Senator Lodge has declared his belief that the postoffice department is robbing the railroads and robbing the rural routes in an effort to establish a freight system."

In its Washington correspondence the Boston Transcript prints a brief history of parcel post progress in a year and one month:

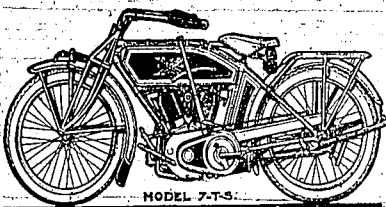

- Jan. 1, 1915—Parcel post law goes into effect.
July 1—The insurance rate on parcel post packages is cut in half by the postmaster general.
July 1—Special parcel post stamp is abolished.
July 1—C. O. D. feature is put into effect, thus making possible a far-to-day mail order business.
Aug. 15—The weight limit is increased from eleven to twenty pounds in the first two zones, and rates in these zones are lowered from one-half to three cents per pound.
Jan. 1, 1914—The weight limit is increased from twenty to fifty pounds in the first two zones and from eleven to twenty pounds in all of the remaining zones. At the same time rates are reduced between zone and three cents per pound in all zones up to the seventh, and.

Vital Electric Service Facts

We want all our customers to become familiar with the misapprehensions that vitally concern both the producers and consumers of electricity.

Experience has proven that competition means:

- (1) Duplicated investment.
- (2) Increase cost of production.
- (3) Ruined earning power of local company.
- (4) Disfigured streets and alleys.
- (5) Eventual combination of interests involved.
- (6) Increased charges or postponed rate reductions.
- (7) Discouragement of further local investment.

These facts we believe to be incontrovertible.

We solicit your interest in the situation in order that you may satisfy your own mind regarding it.

These now commencing our competitor for being responsible for reduced rates will eventually condemn the same concern for saddling an unnecessary investment on the community on which interest charges, taxes, maintenance, and other expenses must be paid out of the rates charged.

You do not agree with us!

Then re-read the above—study the points contained—and so if you can honestly say to yourself that the facts do not warrant the conclusions.

Yours in common cause, for betterment of electric service.

A COMMUNICATION

C. D. Thomas Treats With County Extravagance in Reriding Manure.

The following article is an excerpt of the speech made by C. D. Thomas at the recent progressive gathering and is reproduced by the Twin Falls Times. These will clearly in communications from any of the county officers regarding their side of the question.

I did not come here for the purpose of making a political speech, but I wish as a plain business man to talk to you about the business affairs of our county.

It is very interesting when we compare our county with other counties of similar size and standing in this state to see what the result will be as to the actual expenses compared with the other counties. In order to inform myself on this subject I have taken pains to get the exact figures and compare Twin Falls with the other counties. And that comparison will give you some idea of whether Twin Falls county is costing us in comparison with those counties too much, to operate the business of our county.

You know, sometimes we allow our political beliefs to influence our minds so that we are not able to distinguish clearly from the business standpoint. We should look at running the county the same as we look at the running of our own private business. We should be just as economical in conducting the public affairs of the county as we would if we owned the business, and was operating it for our own benefit. And in making this comparison I wish to make it without sarcasm, in an impartial way and make it as a comparison of business, of which I am one of the blackboards.

The county officers sometimes take offense because we dare to presume to inquire into the business and the cost of running the county. They seem to lose track of the idea that they are nothing more or less than our servants. That we have hired them and pay them a salary to do our work for us, and as masters we have a right to know what they are doing, and whether they are conducting their office on an economical basis and whether we are getting value received for the money we pay.

The voters of Twin Falls county are anxious to know why they are paying such enormous taxes. And, where does the money go? And the time has come for the voters, who are the stockholders in the corporation, to demand to know what has been done with their money. I do not charge any office holder in any county, office, but, I do believe that we can not this same efficiency at less expense. And, in order to prove my point I have made a careful analysis of Twin Falls county compared with three of the above named counties. —The holdings of Twin Falls county, for comparison I have tried to be fair. I have tried to choose counties where conditions are similar to Twin Falls county. Latah county is a county practically the same size as Twin Falls. It is a county made up almost entirely of farmers, agriculture is almost the only resource of that county. Kootenai county is the largest county of the three and one of the richest counties. It is made up of agriculture, lumber and mining interests. It is a very expensive county to operate as parts of it are very interesting. Canyon is an agricultural county and practically the same as Twin Falls county. Now, these three will make a fair comparison with Twin Falls county. Let us begin making this comparison we will base it upon the assessed value in each county.

Twin Falls county, assessed valuation: $20,122,250; Kootenai county, assessed valuation, $28,161,530; Canyon county, assessed valuation, $29,982,880; Latah county, assessed valuation, $23,182,955.

Now, you will notice that the three counties I have taken have all a larger valuation than Twin Falls county. Now, let us see how the total cost of operating Twin Falls county will compare. The total cost of operating Twin Falls county for one year is $47,507. The total cost of operating Kootenai county for one year is $19,951, but you will notice that Kootenai county has about $8,000,000 more assessed valuation than Twin Falls county. The total cost for operating in Canyon county for one year is $41,264 or they operate Canyon county for $6,000 less than Twin Falls county although it has about $9,000,000 more assessed property. Latah county is operated for a total cost of $40,716 or a saving of $6,000 a year over Twin Falls county. Although, mind you, Latah county has almost $3,000,000 more assessable property than Twin Falls county.

Let us compare the tax you pay Mr. Voter—or each $1,000 value that you own—in Twin Falls county, at the county that you pay $10 for each $1,000 worth of property you own. In Kootenai county you pay $17.49, in Canyon county you pay $17.50, in Latah county you pay 21.29. Each of these is less than Twin Falls county, and yet, each of them is $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 more than Twin Falls county.

Now, the next question, when we find we are paying too much, where do the money go? Let us take a few things that would be directly beneficial to you, Mr. Voter, two things to which you are entitled, the schools and the roads. Does this enormous amount we pay in Twin Falls county, go for the benefit of the county schools? In Twin Falls county it costs over $100 you pay in taxes, 45 goes to the county schools. In Kootenai county $2.48 goes to the county schools, in Canyon 6.66 and in Latah $5.85. Every one of them is more to their county schools than Twin Falls county, yet, we pay more taxes. Does it go to the county roads? This would be a direct benefit to the county. Let us compare the roads. In Twin Falls county, we pay $1.25 for every $1,000 goes to the county roads. In Canyon 2.67 goes to county roads. In Latah, $1.57 goes to county roads. In Kootenai $1.25 goes to county roads, so Mr. Voter and Tax Payer are not getting the benefit of the roads.

"March 16—An order goes out effect admitting books to parcel post."

That this parcel post advance is not likely to be checked soon is inferred from the senate's refusal, after hearing some of the arguments above mentioned, to set a definite limit by law on the restriction of the postmaster-general's power to modify parcel post rates and regulations. What this portends for these express companies which as yet show no signs of following the United States' example, no one can tell. As the situation stands, concludes the New York Evening Post, "The question really at issue now, first, whether the commission's prices deprived the companies of opportunity for a reasonable profit on such business as they could command, and second, whether the competition of the parcel post was fairly conducted. The first of these questions is as yet by no means wholly determined."

"But as regards the second consideration, it must be pointed out with emphasis that the existing condition of affairs is one which would, for fair play by the government in its 1915 efforts to the railways for transporting parcel-post matter." Literary Digest.

taxes you are paying. It does not go to your schools nor does it go to the Oregon State Highway Dept. It is the amount you pay. Then where does it go? Am I hereby making this charge? That it goes to paying salaries in county offices, both to the principals and to the deputies, for in excess of the service we are getting. In other words we can get the same efficiency with less expense, have more for our county schools and our county roads, and pay less taxes than we are now paying. Now, you are only good business and if I have had the feelings of any man by this comparison, I am very sorry. But, I have had the feeling that it is a good thing to pay that office man.

Let us compare this great corporation which we call the county with another corporation that is in our own town, the Oregon Short Line. It doesn't employ about four men, their average pay is less than $100 per month. Let us give them the full benefit of any question of doubt let us put their average pay in. They would be a total cost of operating the Oregon Short Line local office of $1,000 per month or $12,000 per year. Let us compare with operating the Twin Falls county which has no assets or volume of business of which the business is no more technical and does not require any greater expertise.

And still they operate it for $18,000 as compared with $7,200 the cost to operate this county.

If a better corporation was my private business and I was making this comparison what do you think the point of my investigation would be? I would be looking for the reasons why they are doing better and every day, every evening, and appoint new men in their positions. I would be looking for the reasons why they are doing better and every day, every evening, and appoint new men in their positions. I would be looking for the reasons why they are doing better and every day, every evening, and appoint new men in their positions.

Let us carry our comparison a little farther; the Auditors Office of Twin Falls has the tax payer $12,623 for one year. Kootenai county costs $9,788. Canyon county costs $5,184. And Latah costs $8,714. Each of these offices was operated by one man for three to four thousand dollars per year less than Twin Falls county. Now, I have no doubt that the reason of this was because Twin Falls county had a greater volume of business in that particular office than any other county in the state. I am most glad to be prepared to make that comparison also. I have "degraded" the recorder of each of the above named counties and asked them to give me the number of instruments recorded in their office for one year ending April 1, 1912 and here are their replies:

Blaine: 3561 instruments in Kootenai county for the year ending April 1, 1912. Signed Dr. H. Douby. The next telegram was from Homer: 2174 instruments in Latah county for the year ending April 1, 1912. Signed W. Stovell. Caldwell Idaho, from Canyon county: "Have recorded 7500 instruments in Canyon county for the year ending April 1, 1912."

Now what has Twin Falls done. I sent to the office of Twin Falls, Idaho, and asked for the number of instruments recorded in their office for the year ending April 1, 1912 and find it was 8,714. They have recorded 217 more instruments in Twin Falls county than they have in any other county in the state. 217 instruments it cost me $37,000. Canyon county has recorded 7,500 instruments in Twin Falls county. I have recorded about 1174 more instruments than Canyon and it cost me about $1,000 to record these extra instruments.

Now Mr. Planch, personally I believe he is absolutely efficient and I will also say that he is always on the job. I have no personal criticism to make of him. I believe that you can get a man that will operate this office for from about three to four thousand dollars less per year than it is now operating and not a member of parliament.

Let us look to the sheriff's office. It is the largest office in the county. It is the largest county in the state to operate this office or over $2,400 less than Twin Falls. That is actual amount paid per month. In Canyon county the office cost $2,400. It should not cost one cent more to operate the Sheriff's office in Twin Falls county than it does in Canyon county. I believe that the people in Canyon county complain about the high cost of the office and still they are operating it for less than we are.

Let us look to the assessor's office. It is the largest county in the state to operate this office or over $100 per month. Latah's Sheriff's office is operating for $100 per month in 1912. Canyon county is operating for $100 per month in 1912. Now, you are only good business and if I have had the feelings of any man by this comparison, I am very sorry. But, I have had the feeling that it is a good thing to pay that office man.

But, I have had the feeling that it is a good thing to pay that office man.

The office man that can operate the office with the same efficiency for less expense.

The Assessor's office costs Twin Falls $12,623. Kootenai county reports $16,467 for the same office. Canyon $12,001, Latah $8,459. Now, this comparison shows that we are doing better in the county. Both Kootenai and Canyon count more to assess their own property than Twin Falls, still they will not charge to assess their property. It will take eight to nine million dollars bigger than Twin Falls county. Latah only cost $5,184 to assess $23,000,000 worth of property while Twin Falls cost $12,623 to assess 20,000,000. I have less criticism on this office, yet our assessor will be maintaining this office should we go up to Missouri and take a few weeks, where they can assess $2,000,000 in property for one-half the expense.

The District Court is probably the most glaring comparison of any one of the comparisons and cost $15,000 for one year. Kootenai County has three times as much as Latah county and almost four times as much as Canyon and Canyon has more than twice as much as Twin Falls. This is a presentational matter that is bringing cases that cost large sums of money. It is not a matter of any kind, cases that should never be brought in court. Now, let us take one other item, the miscellaneous expenses of Twin Falls for the year is $14,834. Kootenai county is only $13,828. Canyon county is $2,254. Latah county $1,225. Now this actually reflects directly on the county commissioners and I believe that if they were to be elected, they would be the most inefficient men we would have picked the "best" man. Suppose you were president of a $20,000 corporation and you were asked to manage this corporation, I want to ask you Mr. Vetter, in all your years of experience, do you have had one of the present county commissioners?

I believe that if they were to be elected, they would be the most efficient men we would have picked the "best" man. Suppose you were president of a $20,000 corporation and you were asked to manage this corporation, I want to ask you Mr. Vetter, in all your years of experience, do you have had one of the present county commissioners?

Here's For The Biggest April Event===

The first Shortburn imported from the United States was not a duplicate of our milk producers. It was a cow known in Kentucky as "the milk breeder." So the dairy people here and know. Along with the dairy breeders came the best breeders, and they kept about 200 cows in milk. The average milk production of the American breeders.

It is not my purpose to enter into a long dissertation on the subject of the Shortburn. It is not my purpose to enter into a long dissertation on the subject of the Shortburn. It is not my purpose to enter into a long dissertation on the subject of the Shortburn.

In writing of the performance of our English milkers with the dual-purpose cow, I am not going so far ahead as might seem. Agricultural conditions in this country are gradually approaching conditions over there as regards the price of land and the returns that must be received from the farm. The selling price of land in England does not greatly exceed the price of our own good farmland, but it has to pay annually from six to twelve dollars an acre. The English farmer is economical and long accustomed to give considerable attention to sanitation and breeding, especially in the selection of stock. It is not my purpose to enter into a long dissertation on the subject of the Shortburn. It is not my purpose to enter into a long dissertation on the subject of the Shortburn.

In the light of all these facts it would seem that if dual-purpose cattle were to be kept profitably in this country it would be best to keep them at a great profit in this country. The time is now here when a farmer cannot afford to keep a cow a whole year to

TRAINING COLT FOR A FAIR

One of the first important things to do in teaching young animals to behave themselves and be quiet is to teach them to stand in showing horses and county and state fairs and horse shows, especially in showing colts. It is important that the animals be trained for the occasion or they are unlikely to show their work.

Pure-Bred Clydesdale Stallion.

It will need to be constantly on the lookout to see that the animal maintains his position. One frequent cause of a falling horse is the fact that he is not properly trained in standing with his head on one side.

The horse led into the show ring should always have a good bridle, and never should be brought in with just a halter, as it is impossible to handle a horse properly without a bridle.

PIGS AT MARKET MATURITY

Time May Be Determined Vary Largely by the Character of Feed and the Manner of Feeding.

From a market standpoint a nursery pig is one that has either temporarily or permanently ceased growing and taken on the form and finish required by the market. The time at which a pig comes to maturity may be determined very largely by the character of the feed and the manner of feeding.

Pigs may be brought to market maturity anywhere between the ages of 2 to 9 months. Early maturity is usually attained by feeding a ration of non-nitrogenous foods or by sudden changes from nitrogenous to non-nitrogenous foods.

Young pigs are raised in a variety of ways, and it is scarcely possible to give them in less better than in any other way.

COLONY HAD ITS DARK DAYS

Prosperous Sierra Leone Gave Little Promise of Being a Success When It Was Started.

The first settlement in Sierra Leone, the prosperous British colony on the west coast of Africa, was founded in 1788. At that period London swarmed with free negroes living in poverty and on the verge of starvation.

SOME 'DUTIES' ON THE SIDE

Village Postmaster Had Other Affairs to Attend to Besides Those of His Uncle Sam.

A conversation, printed in the Buffalo News, seems to indicate that in some communities the most burdensome duties of the postmaster are not always those that the government regulations prescribe.

Joe Henderson stamped into the postoffice. "Morning, Mr. Morley." "Morning, Joe. What's the matter?" "Has Tom Warden been in for his mail yet?"

Making the Best of a Pest. A farmer in the parish of Midland, Nova Scotia, recently came across a skunk's nest that had two tiny young ones in it.

Captain's Wall. It is the story of the captain of a great liner, who has taken the romance out of seafaring.

Prompt Cure for Anemia. Towns with seining, wax factories have no difficulty in getting girl labor cheap. Girls employed in the resin department of seining, wax factories are probably the unemployed and healthy.

Feeding Pigs Two. After the pigs are two weeks old they may be turned into the lot with the sows. When they may be fed without being disturbed by the sows.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of fortune, a specialist to see a man enter No. 112, a house across the street from the house of mystery. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of at the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II—Several persons at regular intervals enter No. 112.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses curiosity to his friend, Tom Phillips, regarding the whereabouts of his cousin, the police officer. Tom Phillips attracts a woman to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house. Van Vechten follows the man and finds him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of persons surrounding the house. He discovers the girl peering at him with a look of alarm from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER V—Detective Flint calls Van Vechten to get his version of the tragedy.

CHAPTER VI—Van Vechten goes alone to a building and finds some persons in a passing motor boat. He is taken to the House of Mystery. He sees one of them, a Mr. Callie, who is asked to enter the house. Tom is asked to enter and take to a house. He hears a girl named Julia, evidently the daughter of the man in authority, question his captors. A sweet-looking girl later goes against the roughness of his captors.

Book II.

CHAPTER I—Van Vechten calls on his uncle, Theodore Van Vechten, 24 man in Wall street and known as the "Man of Iron." In an effort to investigate the whereabouts of Peter Carow.

CHAPTER II—Detective Flint shows Van Vechten a gold man purse found in the House of Mystery. Van Vechten recognizes it as belonging to Peter Carow.

CHAPTER III—The sweet-looking girl helps Tom Phillips escape but refuses to disclose her identity. Tom Phillips has to meet her again.

CHAPTER IV—Detective Flint tells Van Vechten he has a theory that Peter has been kidnapped. Van goes to law.

CHAPTER V—Messengers are sent to Europe in an effort to trace the whereabouts of Van Vechten. He is in love and rejects his admirer.

CHAPTER VI—A message from London reports that two ladies resembling Peter Carow and his companion, Mrs. Devereaux, sailed for New York some time previously. A report of a woman is given.

CHAPTER VII—A detective tells Van Vechten he has a theory that Peter has been kidnapped. Van goes to law.

CHAPTER VIII—It is recalled that Tom Phillips was connected with a daughter of Compton Schuyler, who was married to a man named Devereaux. The other daughter, Mrs. Devereaux, was his intimate friend. A search is started for her.

CHAPTER IX—Van Vechten enters the House of Mystery by the back door. He is attracted by the face of a girl. He interviews and helps the girl escape. He is unconscious in the struggle with Callie.

Amid the stress and confusion of violent situations, the human mind is capable of the most ridiculous pranks. And at this critical moment Van Vechten's prompted him to commit such an absurdity.

"Get out of here, you little idiot!" he yelled at the girl, who seemed frozen to the table.

She hesitated one second longer, then with a sudden dash slipped to the hall and closed the door after her.

It would not be pleasant to record what happened in that room. There is nothing heroic in a baited rat darting desperately from a trap into the jaws of a waiting terror, nor in the spectacle of a lamb being prodded to the shambles. For perhaps five minutes Van Vechten succeeded in preventing calls from grasping the door knob—a period in which he was reduced from a correctly dressed, rather handsome young gentleman to an object that was no more than a fettered, bloody specimen of humanity—and then he sank into oblivion.

Callie stared at his motionless adversary. Why didn't the fool move? The answer came promptly, unbidden: focus his conduct. He would arrange to move again, unless perhaps it should be to rise up and follow him—out of the room, along the echoing halls, down the dusty stairs, into the street and double twist, and there, where there would be that thing at his side, until at last—

And there was yet another shadow in this silent room, one other remaining shadow! It should detach itself from the rest; oppose the two shadows should get together and enter into an unholy pact to work his undoing!

John Callie clenched his teeth to stop their clattering. His starting purpose started the men should detach themselves from the shadows, which they should fly, leaving larger and larger and more obscure, then was irresistibly drawn back to the shadowless hall, where the door knob was. He did not look away from it again.

Bewilderingly, licking his dry lips with a dry tongue, he backed, not a step, until he brought up against the door knob. He was an instant off the horrible disk of the two shadows blending and following him pause in his unerring success.

He felt for the knob like one in a

Aboard the Kohinur.

CHAPTER I

Tom, finding employment, it was in an exceedingly deflated frame of mind that Tom Phinney, alone in Van Vechten's huge six-wheeler car, made his way to Meldon Lane in search of Mr. Brownlow. "In low state of his feelings was in a large measure owing to a condition that had grown really imminent and personal only during the last few minutes; one that meant renunciation of all his past mode of living and realization of a necessary readjustment to an uncertain future; he had turned over a new leaf, foreworn idleness and frivolity, and was going to work!

Gloomy meditations darkened his handsome face, and in his preoccupation he waived a good quarter of an hour searching for Brownlow's number, in harmony with a fancied portrait of the latter's establishment, he directed his attention to the smarter, more modern structures; and it was quite by accident that his eye alighted upon the right place—an indignantly shabby building, two-story and decrepit, plucked between two skyscrapers. He stopped the motor and viewed the entrance with doubt and distrust. But there was no mistaking it—from the curb—his own name could be seen on the directory board just inside the entrance.

That Mr. Brownlow would see him at his private office. The farther Tom went, the more incredible it became that this could be the business habitat of the Kohinur's owner—for Tom was familiar with every private craft that acknowledged New York as its home port—and far from being dazzled by a bewildering display of precious stones, the sparkle of a diamond here would have been so conspicuous as to be irritating.

To his unobtrusive eye there was nothing to indicate what manner of business might be carried on here. Brownlow's private room was even dingier and more unimpressive than the outer office—for all the world like that of a frost-bitten nut of which Brownlow was the wrinkled kernel. But could Tom have been present every day the master was entertaining a prospective customer, he would have obtained an insight into Brownlow's methods. In front of the only window that was scrupulously clean stood a table—upon it were piled two or three comfortable leather chairs faced each other. Two or three dark purple velvet pads and a couple of jeweler's lenses lay here and there upon the top table. At this time two placed the importer and the customer would have been sitting (or rather, the latter back-lying) while the former discovered at length upon any subject any of those that had brought them together. Judgment of the best figures in the outer office returned from Brownlow's safe-door box in a nearby bank—bearing beneath his arm a small leather case, which this had been deposited at Brownlow's elbow and the best figure had retired to repeat himself loudly to his own particular business ledger, the case would have been opened and its glittering contents poured out upon the velvet pads. Then the little man generally would have ceased, and he would have uncovered a minute knowledge of gems and values against which the sharpest bargainer knew that it was useless to contend. Unnumbered millions of dollars worth of precious stones had passed through his claw-like fingers, each adding its quota to his wealth; and thus it was that he could indulge in a luxury like the Kohinur.

The importer was alone, however, when Tom entered. He rose nimbly from his desk and greeted his caller with an enthusiasm that left the latter tongue-tied. "My dear Mr. Phinney!" cried the little man, beaming, the while he vigorously pumped Tom's unresponsive right hand. "My dear Mr. Phinney! Almost literally you have arrived at the old-fashioned home. It is impossible for me to express my gratification at seeing you. So you didn't forget the note I made so bold to go to prefer to Mrs. Payne-French's. It is stopped with surprising abruptness, then went on. In a tone expressive of consternation: "Don't say that 'you have failed!' Don't tell me you have come here only to bring disappointment! It would be a cruel act of kindness on my part, but—ABIGAIL! Sit down!"

BETTER BEEF AND DAIRY CATTLE

an acre, worth about ten dollars a ton. Milk, butter and beef command good prices there.

It seems to me it is on such farms as this that the dual-purpose animal will fit. Cows of true dual-purpose form will convert a larger percentage of roughage into milk and meat than will the strictly dairy type. The dairy cow has been developed under more artificial conditions both as to feed and care than have the beef and dual-purpose types. This does not imply that under right conditions the special dairy animal will not prove to be the most satisfactory. I believe, however, that the dairy cow is pre-eminently adapted for dairy purposes and is not speaking to such purposes when the average farmer is not a dairyman—not even an "average" dairyman—and the dairy cow, one of the special dairy breeds, is usually a sort of misfit on the average farm.

The average farm is not prepared to specialize in milk production, but it must keep a few cows, and it is surprising how many farmers stick to the Shorthorn—of Durham, as many call the Shorthorn—convinced that this type returns a satisfactory amount of milk, produces good steers, and eventually, after serving her period of usefulness as a milk-and-calf producer, can be turned into a very acceptable quality of beef.

Every average farm requires some beef, and they provide a very profitable outlet for the skim milk in excess of that required by the calves. Most farmers nowadays prefer to sell the cream and save the skim milk for pigs and calves. Since the feeding of baby beef has partially revolutionized the type of cattle raised over the whole here again is an opportunity for cows of dual capacity. In producing these young "beefs" the successful feeder appreciates the value of the calf that received a good start—the calf that had a heavy-milking mother.

Probably the better feeder realizes the alive interest in the dual-purpose cow is the constantly increasing cost of labor. Many farmers are keeping a number of heavy-milking cows that incline toward beef conformation. Many of these are true dual-purpose cows, and farmers are keeping them because of that fact. They do not make a practice of milking all these cows, but allow half the herd to raise calves from the oldest half, and in this manner reduce the labor of milking.

While this practice may not be commendable, it surely is far in advance of keeping cows that will raise but one calf a year. Many dual-purpose cows will give all the milk that two heavy cows will consume, and will keep up for five or six months. At the end of that period the calves may be weaned and a third calf started well along toward the goal of the baby beef before his foster mother has finished her lactation period. Any cow that will furnish enough milk for two calves during the first half of the lactation period.

In what I have written I have had in mind the man with a farm of 100 acres or more of fairly good land, who has considerable roughage that can best be handled through his cows who raise cattle rather than make a business of fattening them. It is in this class of men that the feeders must look for stock and growth calves to raise their own live prime heaves.

The argument that as long been advanced by the special dairy breed advocates, that in units of food value milk can be produced far more cheaply than beef, has induced very few people to substitute milk for beef in their diet. The high price of beef may have caused some people to use less, but is not that a pretty good inducement for raising more beef? I was not a little surprised recently in reading an article by Prof. G. W. Warren, of the department of farm management, Cornell University, in which he stated: "A point that seems to be forgotten in this country is that the Holstein is a dual-purpose animal. The cows are large and make large calves quickly. The cows and bulls have considerable beef value." While it is generally admitted that Holsteins make excellent beef, I have never heard of the breed excepted as a "double-decker." Two years ago, at the National Dairy show, there was an exhibit of Holsteins from the Pacific Coast that created quite a sensation because of their wonderful uniformly all-aroundness. This show was considered the best single exhibit of Holsteins seen in years, and the manager said that in selecting the breeding cattle he chose those of dual-purpose form. The writer has observed that not a few of the best producing Holsteins inclined to grow rapidly and carry a thick covering when not in milk.

I have mentioned that the English breeder gives much care in the selection of the bull, and it is likely that much of the disappointment recorded by those who have met failure in attempting to breed dual-purpose cows in this country is attributable to lack of judgment in selecting the herd sires. The prominent breeder of dual-purpose cattle recently made the statement that nine men out of ten visiting his herd with a view to purchasing a bull would have their notions upon the appearance of the animals as beef producers, rather than for dairy qualities or the performance of the female ancestors as milk producers. Right here is a good point at which to emphasize the great importance of looking closely into the female line of ancestry.

J. J. Hill, of Minnesota, recently made an extensive importation of milk Shorthorns from England. One from a dam and granddam that gave more than 1,000 pounds of milk each in a year, and his sire was equally rich in milking inheritance. Furthermore, it is said that this young bull possessed excellent conformation, Judged from a beef standpoint, Mr. Hill is firm in his conviction that the dual-purpose cow will hold an important place in the straight-breed herds of the future. He believes that the straight-breed herds will continue to favor the extensive farms and ranges, and that the strictly dairy breeds will continue to hold their place where conditions are especially favorable for such production.

There is no lack of authentic data in this country as to the production of both milk and meat from the same animal or herd. At the present time the Wisconsin Experimental Station is conducting an experiment with regard in view. In which a number of breeders of Red Polled are co-operating. These cows are kept in the ordinary way, as nearly as possible under conditions as found on the average farm. A record of their production of milk and butterfat is kept for a year, the male calves are converted into steers and will be fed out as baby beef at the station. In this way will be obtained the exact production of the cow. Each cow is lactated during two consecutive years, and the second year has been about completed. The cows are reared with a reasonable period after freshening so as to produce a calf at least every twelve months. While it is not yet possible to practice this from the station on the experiment, it is claimed by those most interested that the breed is making a highly satisfactory showing.

A great many of the opponents of the dual-purpose idea take the position that it is unwise to representatives of the purely dairy or beef classes belong to the dual-purpose class. This is obviously unfair and needs no argument to show that there are many herds of high producing dual-purpose cattle throughout the country. There are many other herds of so-called dual-purpose cattle that have failed of the purpose for which they were intended. These failures have, however, been due to poor judgment, and improper care.

My belief is that the greatest success will come to the breeder who breeds for dual-purpose in the ordinary way as dairy cattle, but who breeds for size and easy-fleshing qualities from cows of high-milking performance. The dual-purpose cow should be a milkings quality, but should incline to beef form. The nearer the cows approach this form, the more likely will they be appreciated.

I believe it is true that the dual-purpose cow is not being bred with the greatest care as the special dairy cattle. If as the dual-purpose averages claim, that she is the "farmer's cow," it is not to be expected that the average farmer will give the close attention to breeding problems that the men who specialize in that line of production will. Many good farmers are now breeders, but it is manifestly unfair to charge against a breed the mistakes of a lot of poor breeders.

A great deal of stress has been laid upon the adaptability of the dual-purpose cow to Western conditions, where the contour—feet, together with growth, are grown in abundance. It has been shown that she and her progeny are well adapted to converting the cheaply grown alfalfa into milk and meat. There is another section of the country where I believe this type is destined to become popular. This is the section of the South-Eastern portion of the United States.

In many of these states there are still vast areas of cheap land well adapted to raising production of hundreds of thousands of acres of land above the tick line, at an altitude of from 200 to 250 feet, that will mature cattle early months in the year.

Much of this land is still to be had in sections as a dual-purpose breed. Cattle of this breed have recently won high honors in the slaughter tests at the International Livestock Exposition, and great credit is due a breeder of these cattle in Iowa who, year after year, has brought splendid exhibits of both breeding and fat animals to the Chicago show. The record of that herd alone presents a strong argument in support of the dual-purpose idea. There are a number of herds of Red Polled throughout the country averaging well above 6,000 pounds of milk a year. Some years ago in the English show in England, a pure bred Red Polled steer was slaughtered and showed a dressing percentage of 73.7. This, according to the London Livestock Journal, has only once been exceeded in England, and never by a pure-bred steer of any breed.

Jeanette tells me that they have another shipment of them. She has, of course, been trying them on. You know how crazy she is about style.

Believe me, she is an authority on women's ready-to-wear. Jeanette always gets Wooltex or Redfern garments and she attributes her charming appearance to that fact.

Jeanette has been in Paris, too, and when there she met that wonderful fashion artist, "Madam SAVARIE." She told me it was some job-getting into an introduction. For you know they are real fussy about such things across the pond.

Jeanette says that the beauty of Wooltex and Redfern garments isn't only in the style, but in the wear, too, only the best materials are used, and every garment fully guaranteed.

And say—John, I want to get me some "Justrite" vests for my Easter suit. Jeanette says there's nothing to equal them for looks and durability.

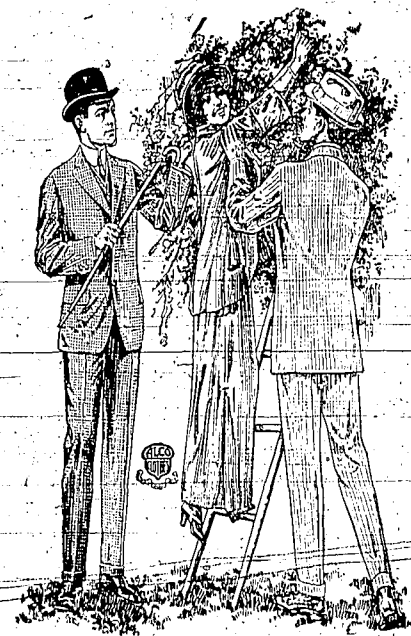

Now dear, I don't want to worry you with my chatter, but you have always admired Jeanette's stylish appearance, setting her forth as the ideal of how a woman should dress.

Getting one's clothes from the best store in town always pays. You know you thought these shoes were very reasonable; they have Jenkins' guarantee, too. E. P. Reut's shoes for women certainly are the real thing.

You know how tickled you were with that Kuppenheimer suit you bought at Jenkins', and I've heard you go into ecstasies about "Society Brand" clothes, and as for "Imperial" hats, you positively doze on them as being the noblest and finest made.

John—dear, I know you feel as I do about dress, personal appearance counts for so much that we must always look at our best—and the best way is to deal at a store giving you most satisfaction, a place which is reliable. That's why I always say go first to—

Prof Day believes there is a place for the dual-purpose cow in Canada, that while a few farmers would never go into dairying as a specialty, they want cows that produce milk profitably and produce good beef when required, and it is his opinion that to secure such cattle in his country it will be necessary to select the best type of cows, develop them along dairy lines, and pay close attention to the selection of sires. Untrue sires will amply best form plus high milking inheritance are selected. It is unreasonable to expect that the dual-form can long be maintained in any one herd.

While the breeders' ideal has never been realized in any line of livestock husbandry, I believe it is a well-accepted claim that the three breeds of which I have written, the milk Shorthorn, the Red Polled and the Devon, possess in ample degree high-milking inheritance, good beef conformation and satisfactory fleshing qualities. In addition to this, the cows have the ability to reproduce themselves easily and to produce calves that converted into steers will feed profitably into high class beef. After the weaning period of usefulness has passed, they may be fed for a quality of beef and sold to the butcher.

All breeds of "good" cattle have a high-gameness system of accumulated economy, and it is for that reason the change has opened up a new field of usefulness for the "double-decker."
